1.1 Definitions

In this paper, the following terms have the following meaning.

"AHRC" means the Australian Human Rights Commission.

"ANZCCG" means the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians.

"Convention" means the Convention on the Rights of the Child adopted by the United Nations General Assembly resolution 44/25 of 20 November 1989 entry into force 2 September 1990.¹

"Declaration" means the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on Thursday, 13 September 2007.²

"GANHRI" means The Global Alliance of NHRIs.

"General Observations" means the General Observations of the Sub-Committee on Accreditation published by GANHRI and adopted by the GANHRI Bureau at its Meeting held in Geneva on 21 February 2018.³

"National Commissioner" means the proposed National Commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children and Young People in Australia, the subject of this paper.

"NCC" means the National Children's Commissioner.

"NHRIs" means National Human Rights Institutions.

"OHCHR" means the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

"Paris Principles" means the Principles relating to the Status of National Institutions, adopted by the United Nations General Assembly resolution 48/134 of 20 December 1993 and endorsed by the World Conference on Human Rights.⁴

"SNAICC" means SNAICC – National Voice for our Children.

"UN Committee" means the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child.

"UNHRC" means the United Nations Human Rights Council.

2 Executive summary

SNAICC – National Voice for our Children and the Family Matters campaign have worked together with key partners to build momentum for the establishment of a National Commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children and Young People in Australia (National Commissioner).

In October 2019, SNAICC developed a Position Paper on the establishment of a national commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people that was supported by more than 80 organisations across Australia. The Position Paper proposed a model for a National Commissioner to sit within the Australian Human Rights Commission.

Since the release of the Position Paper, some stakeholders have suggested that consideration of additional models may be worthwhile. With the invaluable support of leading international law firm King & Wood Mallesons, SNAICC has developed this comprehensive Options Paper that explores other possible models based on assessing existing national and international commissioner roles against the Paris Principles and identifies best practice elements.

2.1 An urgent and compelling need

SNAICC's 2019 Position Paper outlines the clear and compelling case for the establishment of a National Commissioner that is dedicated to advancing the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander child and young people across Australia. The key reasons that demonstrate the need and imperative for a National Commissioner include:

- the unacceptably high levels of multiple and intersecting forms disadvantage and discrimination experienced by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people across all Australian states and territories;
- to prevent Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people from continuing to fall through the cracks of our federal system; and
- as demonstrated through successful Family Matters reports, the clear need to develop and implement unique responses and solutions to address the unique challenges faced by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people.

The call for a National Commissioner builds on the increasing recognition by state and territory governments of the importance and value of a commissioner dedicated specifically to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people, as demonstrated by the establishment to date of similar bodies in Victoria, South Australia and Queensland.

A dedicated focus at the national level on advancing the rights of the current generation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people is essential to end the intergenerational cycle of disadvantage and to promote better outcomes for future generations.

2.2 Key findings

The preparation of this Options Paper involved a comprehensive desktop review of existing Australian and international commissioner models. Models have been assessed against the United Nations Principles Relating to the Status of National Human Rights Institutions (known as the "Paris Principles") and this paper outlines key findings and recommendations for compliance with the best practice requirements for each element of the Paris Principles.

Based on a detailed review and analysis of eighteen commissioner models, this paper concludes that:

- the New Zealand and United Kingdom Children's Commissioner models appear to be the most compliant overall existing commissioner models when assessed against the Paris Principles.
- the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People appears to be the most compliant Australian model when assessed against the Paris Principles, although with the caveat that not all its functions are legislatively enshrined.

This Options Paper also identifies a number of challenges to implementation and efficacy that arise across the various commissioner models:

- a lack of clear mandate in establishing legislation;
- a lack of political impartiality or autonomy from government;
- a lack of transparency in appointment / selection of commissioners;
- inadequate quasi-judicial competency and complaints handling powers; and
- inadequate and insecure funding.

The identification of these major impediments provides further practical guidance on the key elements that must be incorporated into the establishment of a National Commissioner that meets best practice standards and will be effective to supporting improved outcomes for future Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people across Australia.

2.3 Proposed Model

This paper outlines a Proposed Model for the establishment of a National Commissioner that is based on examples of strongest compliance and provides concrete guidance for Federal Government decision-makers on the key elements required to establish an effective National Commissioner.

The elements of the Proposed Model are summarised as follows:

Paris Principle	Key requirements
Entrenchment in law	The National Commissioner should be established via standalone federal legislation with sufficient detail to ensure a clear mandate and independence. This should include the National Commissioner's role, functions, powers, funding, lines of accountability, appointment mechanisms and term of office. If the National Commissioner is to be mandated to receive, consider or resolve complaints, the enacting legislation should set out the necessary functions and powers required for the National Commissioner to adequately fulfil this mandate.
Human rights mandate	The National Commissioner should be legislatively empowered to protect and promote the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia. In particular, the National Commissioner should be mandated to consider the implementation of rights enshrined in the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child and the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and other relevant bodies of the international human rights system.
Cooperation with other human rights bodies	The National Commissioner should develop, formalise and maintain working relationships with other domestic institutions established for the promotion and protection of the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people, such as SNAICC.
Ensuring pluralism	Consistent with best practice in self-determination the National Commissioner should be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person. The office of the National Commissioner should comprise staff representative of the diverse segments of Australian society, with consideration of gender, ethnicity and minority status.

Selection & appointment of decision-making body	The establishing legislation should set out a clear, transparent and participatory selection and appointment process for the National Commissioner based on identified and objective criteria that is publicly available. Consistent with best practice in self-determination, the legislation should also mandate that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people be involved in the selection process for the National Commissioner.
Independence from government	The establishing legislation should provide that the National Commissioner be independent from Government, be free from political interference and stipulate clear details relating to tenure.
Adequacy of funding	The National Commissioner should have both financial independence and adequate resources to perform the mandated duties.
Public reporting	The National Commissioner should be mandated to publish annual and special reports, highlighting any key developments of the office and setting out the National Commissioner's opinions, recommendations and proposals with respect to matters affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. These reports should be publicly available and tabled with parliament, with requirements that the issues identified in these reports be discussed and considered by the legislature and responded to in a timely manner. Preferably, the National Commissioner should be entitled to table these reports in Parliament directly, as opposed to going through the Executive. The National Commissioner should also be empowered to follow up on any action taken in response to the recommendations contained in its reports.

3 About this paper

This options paper has been prepared to assist with the development of a model for a proposed National Commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children and Young People (National Commissioner). The paper has been jointly prepared by SNAICC – National Voice for our Children (SNAICC) and King & Wood Mallesons, a leading international law firm.

SNAICC is the national non-government peak body for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and their families. SNAICC's purpose is to work for the fulfilment of the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children, in particular to ensure their safety, development and well-being. Established in 1981, SNAICC has a long history of achieving key milestones both in policy developments at state, territory and federal levels and in developing innovative and useful resources and supports for the sector.

King & Wood Mallesons is recognised as one of the world's most innovative law firms. In addition to its corporate practice, the firm has significant experience advising pro bono, commercial and government clients on human rights issues. The King & Wood Mallesons Human Rights Law Group operates across the firm, bringing a uniquely national and international perspective to our clients' matters and offering the latest global insights relevant to human rights issues.

3.1 Background

SNAICC has built momentum for the call for a National Commissioner in Australia. More than 80 organisations supported the Position Paper: Establishment of a national commissioner for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people (attached as Annexure A to this paper). The Position Paper outlines the need and imperative, principles, independency and autonomy, qualifications and experience, scope and purpose of the National Commissioner role.

The Position Paper proposed a model for a National Commissioner to sit within the Australian Human Rights Commission. However, since the release of the Position Paper, there have been challenges with traction on the proposal and stakeholders have identified particular barriers, suggesting that consideration of additional models may be worthwhile. This paper therefore reviews additional models for Commissioner roles and identifies suitable model proposals for consultation and development.

The purpose of this Options Paper is to review existing Commissioner models and propose a model for a National Commissioner that exists outside of the Australian Human Rights Commission. This paper examines the benefits and shortfalls of various independent Commissioner models, in Australia and internationally, and proposes an appropriate model for establishing the National Commissioner (Proposed Model).

3.2 Scope and qualifications

This paper is based on a desktop review of the best possible materials available at the time of writing, being predominately legislative materials, reports issued by Commissioners and other human rights organisations, media releases and internet materials. This paper is intended to provide an overview of the legislative structure of relevant Commissioner models, rather than an exhaustive review of how these Commissioners operate in practice.

As our inquiries were limited to a desktop review, there may be variances between the documentary material available and the actual practice of the Commissioner models. In addition, while feedback has been sought from a number of Australian Commissioners, detailed consultations with relevant Commissioners was not part of the scope of this paper.

Given the nature of a desktop review, it is acknowledged that the practical and effective operation of the Commissioner models explored in this paper may not be fully captured, notwithstanding that some Commissioner models may lack a number of structural features that are considered important by international best practice. For example, the Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People continues to have a significant positive impact, despite the office lacking an express independent legislative framework and mandate.

The review of Commissioner models has been predominately directed towards determining best practice in the legal structure and form of the proposed National Commissioner, rather than a consideration of how the National Commissioner should exercise its powers once established. Where available, key achievements and criticisms have been included in the review of each Commissioner model in order to consider the broadest possible context.

3.3 Structure of paper

This paper is structured as follows:

- (a) Review criteria: Paris Principles: This section summarises the Paris Principles, outlining their background and contents, and identifying why we have selected these criteria as forming the basis of our review.
- (b) Strongest models of compliance: This section identifies the currently existing models that have the strongest compliance with the Paris Principles. We have identified three models, and have provided an overview of their key functions, responsibilities and constituent elements mapped against the Paris Principles.
- (c) Strongest compliance per Paris Principle: This section identifies the Commissioner models that have the strongest compliance with each element of the Paris Principles. The aim of this section is to provide examples for each element that can be used to determine the strongest possible model for the establishment of the National Commissioner.
- (d) Challenges to implementation and effectiveness: This section outlines some of the challenges to the implementation and effectiveness of the Commissioner models considered by our review.
- (e) Available commentary on existing models: This section sets out the publicly available commentary in respect of various Commissioner models.
- (f) Recommendations: This section provides a summary of the findings made in this paper to identify key requirements for a Proposed Model for a National Commissioner.
- (g) Appendix: The appendix contains a detailed overview and assessment of each of the Australian and international commissioners that were analysed for the preparation of this Options Paper.

3.4 Research methodology

In preparing this paper we have conducted a desktop review of existing Australian and international commissioner models. These models have been assessed against the Paris Principles (see section 4), which we determined to be the most appropriate criteria for assessment on the basis that they provide an internationally accepted best practice articulation of the status, structure, mandate, composition, powers and methods of operation of domestic human rights entities.

We have prepared templated review sections for each Commissioner role identified as potentially relevant within Australia and for a limited representative sample of overseas jurisdictions. These templated reviews provide a high-level overview of the key elements comprising each Commissioner role. These review sections form the basis of our comparative analysis between the various models, critical review and the development of the model options.

4 Review criteria: Paris Principles

4.1 Background

The ‘Principles relating to the status of national institutions’ (Paris Principles) are the minimum international standards for the establishment of National Human Rights Institutions (NHRIs). The Paris Principles provide a broad normative framework for the status, structure, mandate, composition, power and methods of operation of the principal domestic human rights mechanisms.

The Paris Principles were defined at the first International Workshop on National Institutions for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights held in Paris in October 1991. The Paris Principles were then adopted by the United Nations Human Rights Commission in 1992,⁵ and by the UN General Assembly in 1993.⁶

This paper assesses the various existing Commissioner models against the Paris Principles. The Paris Principles were chosen as the appropriate assessment tool on the basis that they are directed towards:

- (a) providing a clear, detailed and internationally-recognised framework for establishing NHRIs for the purpose of advancing and defending human rights at the national level;
- (b) protecting NHRIs from government and parliamentary interference by setting out requirements for independence, tenure, appointment and removal mechanisms, and entrenchment in law;
- (c) ensuring NHRIs have sufficient resources and powers to carry out their human rights mandate by setting out requirements to this effect; and
- (d) promoting the effectiveness of NHRIs by requiring that they are able to engage directly with the legislature by, for example, tabling reports in parliament or otherwise being able to bring matters to parliament’s attention.

Compliance with the Paris Principles is also a prerequisite to receiving the Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions (GANHRI) accreditation. GANHRI accreditation confers on an NHRI:

- (a) international recognition and protection;
- (b) the right to participate in the work and decision-making of the GANHRI; and
- (c) the right to access the UNHRC, being the international body responsible for investigating breaches of human rights in United Nations member states.⁷

At present, the AHRC is the only Australian institution that has received full GANHRI accreditation.⁸ Importantly, the AHRC has used its access to the UNHRC on numerous occasions to promote human rights.⁹

⁹ For example, in 2015 Professor Gillian Triggs, the President of the Australian Human Rights Commission, addressed the 28th session of the UNHRC on issues such as the challenges faced by Australia in the area of asylum seeker and refugee policy.

4.2 Summary of the Paris Principles

The essential requirements of the Paris Principles are summarised as follows:

- (a) Entrenchment in law: An NHRI shall be given as broad a mandate as possible, which shall be clearly set forth in a constitutional or legislative text.¹⁰
- (b) Human rights mandate: An NHRI shall be mandated with specific functions to both promote and protect human rights. These specific functions shall include submitting to Government, Parliament, and any other competent body, opinions, recommendations, proposal and reports on any matters concerning the promotion and protection of human rights. In particular, the opinions, recommendations or reports may relate to:
 - (i) legislation;
 - (ii) any situation of violation of human rights;
 - (iii) the preparation of reports on the national situation with regard to human rights; and
 - (iv) making proposals for initiatives to end situations of violation of human rights.¹¹
- (c) Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments: An NHRI shall be responsible for:
 - (i) promoting and ensuring harmonisation of national legislation and practices with international human rights instruments; and
 - (ii) encouraging ratification of those international human rights instruments.¹²
- (d) Interaction with the international human rights system: An NHRI shall contribute to reports which States are required to submit to the United Nations and cooperate with the United Nations and any other organisation in the United Nations system, the regional institutions and the national institutions of other countries that are competent in the areas of the promotion and protection of human rights.¹³
- (e) Cooperation with other human rights bodies: Within the framework of its operation, the NHRI shall:
 - (i) maintain consultation with the other bodies, whether jurisdictional or otherwise, responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights (in particular ombudsmen, mediators and similar institutions); and
 - (ii) develop relations with the nongovernmental organisations devoted to promoting and protecting human rights, to economic and social development, to combating racism, to protecting particularly vulnerable groups (especially children, migrant workers, refugees, physically and mentally disabled persons) or to specialized areas.¹⁴
- (f) Recommendations by NHRIs: An NHRI shall have the power to make recommendations to the Government, Parliament and any other competent body on any matter concerning the promotion and protection of human rights.¹⁵ Furthermore, an NHRI shall address public opinion directly or through any press organ in order to publicise its recommendations.¹⁶
- (g) Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI: The appointment and composition of the NHRI shall be established in accordance with a procedure that guarantees pluralist representation of the social forces involved in the promotion and protection of human rights. In particular, the composition of the NHRI shall promote and enable effective cooperation to be established with non-governmental organisations, universities and qualified experts, Parliament, and Government departments. Such cooperation may be achieved by appointing representatives of the above bodies to the NHRI.¹⁷

- (h) Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs: The appointment procedure of the NHRI shall be by election or otherwise.
- (i) Political representatives on NHRIs: An NHRI must be able to “freely consider any question falling within its competence”.¹⁸ An NHRI shall be independent of the government.¹⁹ To the extent that representatives of government departments are able to be appointed to the NHRI, they shall participate “only in an advisory capacity”.²⁰
- (j) Adequate funding of NHRIs: An NHRI shall have an infrastructure that is suited to the smooth conduct of its activities, in particular adequate funding. It should have its own staff and premises in order to independent from the government.²¹
- (k) Annual reports of NHRIs: An NHRI shall be responsible for submitting to government, parliament and any other competent body, reports on any matter concerning the promotion and protection of human rights.²²

4.3 General Observations – interpretive tools of the Paris Principles

The GANHRI promotes the establishment and strengthening of NHRIs in conformity with the Paris Principles. The GANHRI has published “General Observations” which are interpretive tools of the Paris Principles.

The General Observations provide the following guidance in relation to the essential requirements of the Paris Principles set out at section 4.2 above:

- (a) Entrenchment in law: The General Observations state that:
 - (i) Entrenched in law:²³ The enabling legislation should specify the NHRIs role, functions, powers, funding, and lines of accountability, as well as the appointment mechanisms for members, including the terms of office.
 - (ii) Independence:²⁴ The enabling legislation must ensure independence by, for example, containing an independent and objective dismissal process.
 - (iii) Complaints handling:²⁵ It is not a requirement of the Paris Principles that an NHRI have a mandate to receive, consider or resolve complaints. However, where NHRIs have such a mandate, they should be provided with the necessary functions and powers to adequately fulfil this mandate. For example, the NHRI should be able to receive complaints against both public and private bodies, commence complaints on its own initiative, investigate complaints, compel the production of evidence and witnesses, protect complainants from retaliation, etc.
- (b) Human rights mandate: The General Observations state that:
 - (i) Nature of mandate:²⁶ “Promotion” of human rights means creating a society where human rights are more broadly understood and respected. “Promotion” can occur by education, training, advising, public outreach and/or advocacy. “Protection” of human rights means addressing and seeking to prevent actual human rights violations. “Protection” can include monitoring, inquiring, investigating, and/or reporting on human rights violations. “Protection” may also include individual complaint handling.

- (ii) Breadth of mandate:²⁷ The NHRIs mandate should be interpreted broadly, liberally and in a purposive manner to promote a progressive definition of human rights.
- (iii) Protection from liability:²⁸ Members and staff of the NHRI should be protected from both criminal and civil liability for acts undertaken in good faith in their official capacity, including when exercising investigative powers.
- (iv) Powers of inquiry and investigation:²⁹ A NHRI should be authorised and empowered to conduct inquiries and investigations into alleged human rights violations falling within its area of responsibility. A NHRI should hold powers to access premises, inspect documents and examine individuals.
- (c) Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments: The General Observations recommend that the NHRI’s role in encouraging ratification should form an integral part of the NHRI’s enabling legislation.³⁰
- (d) Interaction with the international human rights system: The General Observations state that:³¹
 - (i) Engagement with human rights system: Effective engagement with the international human rights system may include:
 1. submitting parallel or shadow reports to the Universal Periodic Review, Special Procedure mechanisms and Treaty Bodies Committees;
 2. making statements during debates before review bodies and the Human Rights Council;
 3. assisting, facilitating and participating in country visits by United Nations experts; and
 4. monitoring and promoting the implementation of relevant recommendations originating from the human rights system.
 - (ii) Preparation of state reports: While it is appropriate for governments to consult with NHRIs in the preparation of a state’s reports to human rights mechanisms, NHRIs should neither prepare the country report nor report on behalf of the government. NHRIs must maintain their independence.
- (e) Cooperation with other human rights bodies: The General Observations expand on the Paris Principles in this respect by recommending that NHRIs should develop, formalise and maintain working relationships, as appropriate, with other domestic institutions established for the promotion and protection of human rights.³²
- (f) Recommendations by NHRIs: The General Observations state that:³³
 - (i) Annual reports: The NHRI should use its annual, special and thematic reports to make recommendations in relation to and monitor respect for human rights. See paragraph (k) below for more details.

³³ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.6.

- (ii) Follow up action: The NHRI should undertake follow up action on recommendations contained in its reports and should publish detailed information on the measures taken or not taken by public authorities.
- (g) Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI: The General Observations state that:
 - (i) Pluralism:³⁴ There should be diverse models for ensuring pluralism within the decision-making body of the NHRI. These could include avoiding narrow and restrictive criteria for membership, allowing diverse societal groups to suggest or recommend candidates, and/or making use of diverse advisory committees, networks, consultations or public forums. Where a NHRI has only a single member, like an Ombudsman, the NHRI should focus on promoting pluralism through its staff.
- (h) Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs: The General Observations interpret the statement that appointment must be “by election or otherwise”, paired with the call for pluralism above, as requiring a clear, transparent, merit-based and participatory selection and appointment process. In particular, the General Observations state that the appointment process should require:³⁵
 - (i) publication of vacancies broadly;
 - (ii) maximising potential candidates from a wide range of societal groups;
 - (iii) promoting broad consultation and/or participation in the application, screening, selection and appointment process;
 - (iv) assessing applicants on the basis of pre-determined, objective and publicly available criteria; and
 - (v) selecting members to serve in their own individual capacity rather than on behalf of the organisation they represent.
- (i) Political representatives on NHRIs: The General Observations go further than the Paris Principles in this respect:³⁶
 - (i) Starting position: The General Observations recommend, as a starting position, that government representatives and members of parliament should not be members of, nor participate in, the decision-making organs of an NHRI.
 - (ii) Fall-back position: However, where government representatives or members of parliament, or representatives of government agencies, are included in the decision-making body, the NHRI’s legislation should clearly indicate that such persons participate only in an advisory capacity.

Following consultation with SNAICC, we have adopted an expanded interpretation of this requirement being the degree to which a NHRI is independent from government. We have considered the overall independence of each Commissioner under this subheading, and have identified two specific considerations, tenure and recruitment, as specifically relevant. However, elements informing a NHRI’s independence from government arise under most other General Observation sections – for example, a legislatively enshrined mandate will promote stability, whilst sufficient budgeting will promote autonomy, and our analysis of each Commissioner’s independence from government must be considered in the context of this broader analysis.

- (iii) Tenure:³⁷ The enabling legislation must contain an independent and objective dismissal process, similar to that accorded to members of other independent state agencies. The grounds for dismissal must be clearly defined and appropriately confined. Dismissal should not be allowed based solely on the discretion of appointing authorities.

- (iv) Recruitment:³⁸ The NHRI should be legislatively empowered to determine the staffing structure and the skills required to fulfil the NHRI's mandate. However, staff should be recruited according to an open, transparent and merits-based selection process that ensures pluralism.
- (j) Adequate funding of NHRIs: The General Observations recommend that:³⁹
 - (i) Adequacy of funding: The state funding should be sufficient:
 1. to lease (or purchase) premises which are accessible to the wider community, including for people with disabilities;
 2. to provide access to telephone and internet services;
 3. to ensure salaries and benefits awarded to staff are comparable to those of civil servants performing similar tasks in other independent institutions of the State;
 4. to remunerate members of the decision-making body (where appropriate); and
 5. to fund the mandated activities of the NHRI.
 - (ii) Source of funding: Funding from external sources should not compose the core funding of the NHRI as this is the responsibility of the State. At the same time, government funding should be allocated to a separate budget line item applicable only to the NHRI. Such funding should be regularly released and in a manner that does not impact adversely on the NHRI's functions, day-to-day management and retention of staff.
 - (iii) Allocation of funding: The NHRI should have complete autonomy to allocate its budget in accordance with its mandate.
 - (iv) Financial accountability: The NHRI is nevertheless obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies of the State.

In undertaking the research for this report, it has become apparent that insufficient funding has been, and continues to be, a major impediment to the effective operation of several Australian Commissioners. It is difficult to determine from a desktop review whether a Commissioner's funding is adequate for carrying out its statutory functions. This is due to the inconsistent availability of readily accessible budgetary information and the inherent difficulty in assessing whether a Commissioner is making effective use of their allocated budget. Rather, we have identified a framework for analysis adopted by the Department for Education in the United Kingdom which involves determining a "budget per child" figure. This more readily allows for comparisons to be drawn between jurisdictions and is explored further at section 6.10.

- (k) Annual reports of NHRIs: The General Observations state that an NHRI should publish annual, special and thematic reports. Furthermore:⁴⁰
 - (i) Annual reports: The annual reports should provide a regular audit of the government's performance and also of what the NHRI has done. The reports should also provide a forum for making recommendations to government.

⁴⁰ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.11.

- (ii) Publication and distribution: All reports should be publicised and widely distributed and be made publicly available.
- (iii) Engagement with legislature: All reports should be tabled with the legislature, rather than with the executive. The legislature should then be required to discuss and consider the reports so as to ensure that any recommendations are properly considered by relevant public authorities.

5 Strongest models of compliance

This section identifies the currently existing models that have the strongest compliance with the Paris Principles. It highlights three models and provides an overview of their key functions, responsibilities and constituent elements mapped against the Paris Principles.

5.1 Strongest international models

On the basis of our desktop review, we consider that all four foreign Commissioner models reviewed perform highly against the criteria of the Paris Principles. However, we consider the New Zealand and United Kingdom Commissioner models to have the strongest compliance overall with the Paris Principles. We also note that these models are the most relevant to Australia given the similarities between jurisdictions, given their shared common law and Westminster parliamentary system backgrounds.

We have set out below a summary of each Commissioner model's performance against each of the Paris Principles. Further detail regarding both Commissioner models is set out in the review templates in the Appendix to this paper.

Office of the Children's Commissioner (NZ)

The position of Children's Commissioner was established under the Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1989 as a separate body from the executive and administrative arms of government.⁴¹ Its independence was reinforced when it was given its own statute, the Children's Commissioner Act 2003, and the status of an independent Crown entity.⁴² The Office includes the Children's Commissioner, the Strategy Rights and Advice team, the Development, Monitoring and Investigations team, the Corporate team and a Communications team.⁴³

The Commissioner's primary role is as an advocate for children, and to give better effect in New Zealand to the Convention and to have regard to the Convention when carrying out its functions and powers.

We consider the following features of this Commissioner model to be particularly notable:

- (a) structure as an independent Crown entity;
- (b) security of tenure (being a 5-year tenure);
- (c) wide mandate of the Commissioner and its extensive reporting and investigative powers;
- (d) the amount of funding available to the Commissioner;
- (e) the potential introduction of the Assistant Māori Children's Commissioner; and
- (f) the Commissioner's responsiveness to criticism and community concern.

Legislative establishment and independence

The Children's Commissioner Act 2003 provides a clear mandate for the Commissioner, including its role, functions and powers.⁴⁴ The Children's Commissioner is accountable to the responsible Ministers, which appear to be the Minister for Finance and the Minister for Social Development.

⁴³ Children's Commissioner, About Us (Webpage) <<https://www.occ.org.nz/about-us/>>.

⁴⁴ Children's Commissioner Act 2003 ss 3, 11.

Appointments are made by the Governor-General by recommendation from the Minister for Social Development, which may detract from the Commissioner's independence.⁴⁵ The term of office is 5 years, or any shorter period stated in a notice of appointment.⁴⁶

Human rights mandate

The Commissioner is legislatively mandated with specific functions to both promote and protect human rights. The Commissioner's key functions include raising the awareness and understanding of children's interests, rights, and welfare; raising awareness and understanding of the Convention; undertaking and promoting research into any matter that relates to the welfare of children; acting as an advocate for children's interests, rights, and welfare generally (except before any court or tribunal); and, in that regard, advancing and monitoring the application of the Convention by State departments and Crown bodies.⁴⁷

The Commissioner's powers extend to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors, and the Commissioner has the competence to freely address public opinion by receiving and inviting representations from members of the public on any matter that relates to the welfare of children and raising public awareness on matters that relate to the welfare of children, the Convention and children's interests, rights, and welfare.⁴⁸

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Commissioner can inquire generally into, and report on, any matter, including any enactment or law, or any practice or procedure, that relates to the welfare of children, and one of its key functions is to promote the establishment of accessible and effective complaints mechanisms for children and to monitor the nature and level of complaints.⁴⁹ In conducting an investigation, the Commissioner must have regard to the question of whether the rights or the welfare and interests of 1 or more children have been prejudiced.⁵⁰

The Commissioner also has the power to obtain statements or documents in order to assess situations raising human rights issues, as it has powers to compel a person to provide information or documents to the Commissioner if it is reasonably necessary for an investigation; a person does not provide it after being requested to and it is not reasonably practicable to obtain the information or document from another source; or it is necessary to verify or refute information from another source.⁵¹ The Commissioner can also apply to the court to access court records if it believes on reasonable grounds this is required for an investigation.⁵²

Oranga Tamariki is the Ministry for Children government department that provides services to approximately 30,000 children and young people each day. Around 6000 of those children and young people are in the care or custody of Oranga Tamariki, and at any one time, approximately 200 young people are placed in Oranga Tamariki residences.⁵³ Specifically with regard to Oranga Tamariki, the Commissioner has the mandate to review decisions or recommendations made, and policies and practices of government departments in relation to Oranga Tamariki and its governing Act.⁵⁴ The Commissioner investigates any concerns on a case by case basis and can also monitor Oranga Tamariki's investigations and resolutions of any complaint.

An example of the Commissioner using its powers in this regard is in relation to the 2018 case of a teenager, Sonny Marks, who died in state care from what appeared to be a suicide attempt in circumstances where the caregiver was unaware of his mental health issues and his risk of suicide.⁵⁵ In addition, his mother was not informed by Oranga Tamariki that her son was admitted to hospital and the Ministry waited hours after he died the following day before notifying her of his death.⁵⁶ The current Commissioner, Judge Becroft, has publicly expressed that this case would warrant his attention and is awaiting the outcome of the coronial inquest and the recommendations under it before making a decision on next steps.⁵⁷

Functional Immunity

The Children's Commissioner Act 2003 provides protection from criminal and civil liability for acts or omissions undertaken in good faith by the Commissioner or its employees, which is consistent with the Paris Principles. No civil or criminal proceedings may be brought against any Commissioner or against a person who is or has been an employee of a Commissioner for anything done or not done when exercising the functions under the Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (unless it is shown that the person concerned acted in bad faith). A Commissioner or any person who is or has been an employee of a Commissioner cannot be called to give evidence in any court, or in any proceedings of a judicial nature, in respect of anything that comes to the knowledge of the person concerned in the exercise of functions or powers under the Children's Commissioner Act 2003.

Ratification / accession to international human rights instruments

The Commissioner is specifically required to promote compliance with international human rights instruments, engage in public reporting and facilitates national working groups and is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements.

The Commissioner has a clear role to play in the effective implementation of the Convention and the Convention against Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment in relation to Oranga Tamariki residences,⁵⁸ both of which New Zealand is a party to, which is consistent with the Paris Principles.

A key part of the Commissioner's functions includes raising awareness and understanding of the Convention.⁵⁹ If there are issues in proceedings before any court or tribunal that relate to the Convention or to the interests, rights, or welfare of children generally, one of the Commissioner's functions is to present reports on such issues to the court or tribunal, at the request of the court or tribunal or counsel in the proceedings.⁶⁰ In performing or exercising the Commissioner's functions or powers, the Commissioner must have regard to the Convention.⁶¹

The Commissioner co-ordinates the Children's Convention Monitoring Group (Group), which monitors the New Zealand Government's implementation of the Convention, its Optional Protocols and the Government's response to recommendations from the UN Committee.⁶² Its members include representatives from the Human Rights Commission, UNICEF New Zealand, Action for Children and Youth Aotearoa and Save the Children New Zealand.⁶³ The Group meets regularly to monitor and review the progress made on implementing the Convention in New Zealand.⁶⁴ The Group also meets twice a year with the Convention Deputy Chief Executives Group who are the permanent coordinating mechanism for the Convention to discuss how the Government is advancing the rights of children in line with the Convention.⁶⁵

The Group has a public reporting function through its publication of the “Getting it Right” series of reports, which focus on legal and policy developments for children and young people in New Zealand and how those developments align with the Convention, and thereby promotes and encourages the harmonisation of national legislation, regulations and practices with the Convention in accordance with the Paris Principles.⁶⁶ The reports highlight progress related to children’s rights and identify where New Zealand can improve its compliance with the requirements of the Convention.⁶⁷

The Commissioner is also a designated “National Preventive Mechanism”, responsible for monitoring New Zealand’s compliance with the United Nations Convention against Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment in relation to Oranga Tamariki residences.⁶⁸ To this end, the Commissioner issues annual “State of Care” reports, which is an annual summary from the independent monitoring of the policies, practices and services of Oranga Tamariki and includes feedback from children and young people about their experiences in the system.

Interaction with international human rights system

The Commissioner is involved in monitoring compliance with the Convention and engaging with the UN Committee, which is responsible for ensuring compliance with the Convention. This is consistent with the Paris Principles.

The Commissioner has the opportunity to report to the UN Committee from time to time and attend UN Committee sessions. For example, during the Fifth Periodic Report in 2016, the Commissioner attended the 73rd session of the UN Committee and reported on outcomes for children in New Zealand.⁶⁹ The Commissioner also issued a Supplementary Report from the Commissioner to the UN Committee in 2016.⁷⁰ This is in addition to and separate from Government reporting which is carried out by the Minister for Social Development,⁷¹ which ensures that the Commissioner’s independence is maintained, and that it is able to provide information to the UN Committee in its own right.

Cooperation with other human rights bodies

The Commissioner engages in broad-based consultation with sub-national groups and is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements. Consistent with the Paris Principles, the Commissioner regularly engages with relevant stakeholders and maintains working relationships with other institutions in New Zealand and the region that have been established for the promotion and protection of human rights.⁷² For example, the Commissioner:

- (a) works closely with a diverse range of community organisations, groups and individuals involved in aspects of improving the well-being of children;⁷³
- (b) has a statutory responsibility to monitor and assess the policies and practices provided under by Oranga Tamariki and other organisations contracted by Oranga Tamariki to provide care services for children, young people and their families;⁷⁴
- (c) can make referrals of matters to other statutory officers, including:
 - (i) the Chief Commissioner under the Human Rights Act 1993;
 - (ii) the chief executive of the department responsible for the administration of the Oranga Tamariki Act 1989;
 - (iii) the Commissioner of Police;
 - (iv) the Health and Disability Commissioner;
 - (v) the Chief Ombudsman under the Ombudsmen Act 1975;
 - (vi) the Independent Police Conduct Authority; and
 - (vii) the Privacy Commissioner;⁷⁵ and
- (d) attends biannual members meetings of the ANZCCG, which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand.⁷⁶

Recommendations

The Commissioner is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements, with broad recommendation powers and follow up provisions. The Commissioner issues a number of annual, special and thematic reports to highlight key concerns about the rights and welfare of children in New Zealand which include recommendations on, and monitoring of respect for, human rights by public authorities. This is consistent with the Paris Principles.

In addition to the “Getting it Right” and “State of Care” report series discussed above, other reporting that includes actionable recommendations includes:

- (a) the Waitangi Tribunal Submission issued on 30 July 2020, which was an urgent inquiry into the significant and consistent disparity between the number of Māori and non-Māori children being taken into state care by Oranga Tamariki and its predecessors, the extent to which the legislative, policy and practice changes introduced since 2017, and currently being implemented, change this disparity for the better, and what (if any) additional changes to Crown legislation, policy or practice might be required in order to secure outcomes consistent with the Waitangi Treaty and its principles;⁷⁷ and
- (b) The “Education Matters to Me” series of reports published in 2018, which draws out key insights from children’s experiences to form a starting point for the Statement of National Education Learning Priorities.⁷⁸

The Commissioner also undertakes reporting on the follow up action taken on recommendations contained in these reports, including detailed information on the measures taken or not taken by public authorities in implementing specific recommendations or decisions that have been published by the Commissioner. For example, the “Getting It Right: Are We Listening?” report issued on 24 June 2019, which reported on how well the Government was implementing the Convention in respect of children’s participation rights.⁷⁹ It includes a comment on the Government’s response to the recommendation that consultation with children and young people be embedded as part of the Government’s standard process for developing the Statement of National Education and Learning Priorities.⁸⁰

Ensuring pluralism

The Commissioner’s office demonstrates pluralism through its broader representation of national society, which is consistent with the Paris Principles. The Commissioner seeks to achieve pluralism through its appointment procedures, as in appointing a candidate, the Minister for Social Development must consider consulting any organisations or persons that, in the opinion of the Minister, have a special interest in the functions of the Commissioner, including organisations representing children and children themselves.⁸¹

The Commissioner also achieves pluralism through procedures enabling effective cooperation with diverse societal groups. It works with a diverse range of organisations, groups and individuals who have responsibilities and powers relating to children, as well as children and youth themselves, to ensure children have access to services and support. The Commissioner works across the education, advocacy, youth, health and social services sectors, with government, non-government and community organisations.⁸²

The Commissioner has stated its commitment to providing equal opportunities and is a member of the Equal Employment Opportunities Trust.⁸³ While there does not appear to be a clear open and transparent selection process for the Commissioner’s staff, the selection process is merit-based and when a vacancy exists, the Commissioner focuses on finding the best skilled candidate for the position. As at 30 June 2019, the Commissioner had 30 employees, not including the Commissioner. Of these, 31% were Maori, 7% were Pacific Islander and 62% were European in ethnicity,⁸⁴ which reflects some degree of pluralism enhancing the independence and effectiveness of, and public confidence in, the Commissioner.

Selection & appointment of decision-making body

The process for selection and appointment of the Commissioner is set out in the Children’s Commissioner Act 2003. The appointment process is participatory and merits-based, but not transparent, which is a departure from the Paris Principles. Relevantly, there do not appear to be pre-determined, objective and publicly available criteria for assessment of applications, and a clear intention that members serve in their own individual capacity rather than on behalf of the organization they represent.

Restriction on political representatives

While the Commissioner’s appointment process appears to be largely independent of government, the removal of a Commissioner is still heavily reliant on government discretion, which compromises the security of tenure of the Commissioner, as well as the independence of, and public confidence in, the Commissioner. The Commissioner is therefore partially compliant. The Children's Commissioner Act 2003 does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commissioner, which is a departure from the Paris Principles.⁸⁵ However, Members of Parliament are disqualified from taking up the role of Commissioner.⁸⁶ In addition, the responsible Minister for the Commissioner, may not direct the Commissioner to have regard to or to give effect to a government policy.⁸⁷

We note that the Commissioner does not appear to have an independent and objective dismissal process, which is a departure from the requirements of the Paris Principles. The Governor-General may, at any time for just cause, on the advice of the Minister for Social Development which is given after consultation with the Attorney-General, remove the Commissioner from office. While there is a notice requirement, the grounds for dismissal are not clearly defined and are not confined to only those actions which impact adversely on the capacity of the Commissioner to fulfil their functions and mandate. The decision is not made by an independent body with appropriate jurisdiction, but rather, is based on the discretion of the appointing authorities. This compromises the security of tenure of the Commissioner, which is essential to ensure the independence of, and public confidence in, the Commissioner.

The Commissioner role is a full time, remunerated position that is appointed for a minimum term of 5 years,⁸⁸ which promotes the independence of the Commissioner and ensures the continuity of its programs and services. It is not clear whether the terms and conditions of the Commissioner's service can be modified to their detriment during their period of appointment, which would be a departure from the Paris Principles.

Adequate funding

The Commissioner appears to receive a level of funding less than Australian jurisdictions containing analogous numbers of children and young people. The Office of the Children's Commissioner states that there are approximately 1.1m children in New Zealand, roughly analogous to the child and young person population of Queensland, with approximately 1.2m. However, the available information indicates that the Queensland Family and Child Commission holds a budget of $11.8m, compared to the Commissioner's 2020/21 annual budget of $4,157,000. However, the funding received by the Commissioner has increased over time to reflect the gradual and progressive realisation of the improvement of the Commissioner's operations and the fulfilment of its mandate.⁸⁹ The 2019/20 annual budget was $3,157,000, with an increase of $1 million in the 2020/2021 budget that reflects cost pressures and the Commissioner's need for additional capacity.⁹⁰ The Commissioner has also been allocated a total of $250,000 on a capital injection. The Commissioner considers that there are no conditions attached to the government funding it receives.⁹¹ However, funding is at the discretion of the Minister for Social Development, which may be seen to be a departure from the Paris Principles.

Annual reports

The Commissioner is obliged to publish a Statement of Intent, Statement of Performance Expectations and Annual Report each year, and provide these to the Minister for Social Development to present in the House of Representatives.⁹² This is a departure from the Paris

Principles, which ideally require NHRI's to have an explicit power to table reports directly in the legislature rather than through the executive and, in so doing, to promote action on them.

Office of the Children's Commissioner for England

The Children's Commissioner is a stand-alone office with independence from the Crown.⁹³ The Children's Commissioner operates across England, with similar bodies existing in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.⁹⁴ The Children's Commissioner's primary function is "promoting and protecting the rights of children in England",⁹⁵ which includes promoting awareness of the views and interests of children in England.⁹⁶

We consider the following features of this Commissioner model to be particularly notable:

- (a) the Secretary must take reasonable steps to consider children's voices in appointing the Children's Commissioner;
- (b) the Children's Commissioner must take into account children's voices in exercising his or her statutory mandate;
- (c) the Act requires the Children's Commissioner to produce a Business Plan at the start of each financial year and an Annual Report at the end of each financial year, recording which human rights issues arise from year-to-year, steps to be taken, and steps actually taken;
- (d) the Children's Commissioner is supported (and challenged) in his or her role by a diverse Advisory Council;
- (e) the legislative framework for the Children's Commissioner affords significant independence from government, as do specifically agreed cooperation frameworks between the Children's Commissioner and relevant government departments; and
- (f) the Children's Commissioner does not have the power to handle individual complaints. The Children's Commissioner's role is instead to engage with human rights issues on a systemic level.

Legislative establishment and independence

The Children's Commissioner is largely compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner is entrenched in law as it was established under and is governed by the Children Act 2004 (UK).⁹⁷ The Act provides the Children's Commissioner with a clear mandate (see below).⁹⁸ This mandate is broad, allowing the Children's Commissioner considerable autonomy. For example, the Act states that the Children's Commissioner "may do anything which appears to him to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of, or in connection with, the exercise of his functions".⁹⁹

The Act protects the Children's Commissioner's independence, providing that:

- (a) the Children's Commissioner is "not to be regarded as the servant or agent of the Crown or as enjoying any status, immunity or privilege of the Crown";¹⁰⁰ and
- (b) the Secretary of State may only remove the Children's Commissioner from office if satisfied that the Commissioner has become unfit or unable to properly discharge his or her functions or has behaved in a way that is not compatible with his or her continuing in office.¹⁰¹

¹⁰¹ Children Act 2004 (UK) Sch 1 s 3(7).

A framework agreement also exists between the Children's Commissioner and the UK Department of Education that is purposed to protect the Children's Commissioner's independence.¹⁰² This agreement provides that:

- (a) it is for the Children's Commissioner to determine what activities to undertake in carrying out their primary function;¹⁰³ and
- (b) the Children's Commissioner has "freedom to determine their own priorities, and activities, and should be subject to as few constraints as possible in deciding how to carry out their business within their statutory remit".¹⁰⁴

The Children's Commissioner does not have the power to receive, consider or resolve individual complaints alleging violations of human rights.¹⁰⁵ In the explanatory notes to the Act, the stated rationale for this is that it will "allow him to concentrate on the broader issues that affect children".¹⁰⁶ However, the Children's Commissioner may provide advice and assistance to any child who lives away from home or receives social care¹⁰⁷ and, when Commissioner considers that the case of individual child raises issues of public policy relevant to other children, they may hold an inquiry into that case for the purpose of investigating and making recommendations about those issues.¹⁰⁸

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner's has a clear and broad mandate to promote and protect human rights. The mandate extends to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors. Additionally, the mandate allows the Children's Commission to address public opinion through the publishing of reports.¹⁰⁹

Specifically, the Children's Commissioner has the power to:¹¹⁰

- (a) advise persons exercising functions or engaged in activities affecting children on how to act compatibly with the rights of children;
- (b) encourage such persons to take account of the views and interests of children;
- (c) advise the Secretary of State on the rights, views and interests of children;
- (d) consider the potential effect on the rights of children of government policy proposals and government proposals for legislation;
- (e) bring any matter to the attention of either House of Parliament;
- (f) monitor the implementation in England of the Convention; and
- (g) do anything which appears to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of, or in connection with, the exercise of their functions".¹¹¹

Above and beyond the Paris Principles, the Children's Commissioner must take reasonable steps to involve children in the discharge of their primary function.¹¹² In particular, the Children's Commissioner must:

- (a) take reasonable steps to ensure that children are aware of the Commissioner's primary function and how to communicate with the Commissioner; and
- (b) consult children and organisations working with children on the matters the Commissioner proposes to consider or investigate in the discharge of the primary function.¹¹³

The Explanatory Notes to the Act explain that "it is for the Commissioner to decide how best to make children aware ... and to put in place arrangements that allow children to contact the Commissioner and comment on his or her proposed work programme".¹¹⁴ However, in practice, to ensure this duty is met, the Children's Commissioner:

- (i) has formed a children and young people's advisory group called "Amplify" who assists in preparing the annual Business Plan;
- (ii) works with individual and groups of children and young people with lived experience of the issues being investigated;
- (iii) funds research;
- (iv) raises the positive profile of children and young people by, for example, obtaining the participation of over 40,000 children and young people in the annual Children's Commissioner's Takeover Day; and
- (v) speaks directly to key vulnerable groups identified by the UN Committee.¹¹⁵

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Children's Commissioner has the power to:

- (a) at any reasonable time enter any premises other than a private dwelling for the purpose of interviewing a child or for the purpose of observing the standard of care provided to children accommodated or otherwise cared for there or for the purpose of interviewing any person present on the premises who works there;¹¹⁶ and
- (b) reasonably request information relating to the Commissioner's function from any person exercising functions of a public nature.¹¹⁷

There has not been any specific consideration of when a request for information, or entry onto premises, is "reasonable". The Explanatory Note makes clear that it excludes, at minimum, a requirement to comply with a request if that request is inconsistent with other legislation. For example, if a public entity holds confidential information that is not able to be legally disclosed, it would not be reasonable for the Children's Commissioner to request access to such information.¹¹⁸

Many of the reports published by the Children's Commissioner rely largely on publicly available data. However, the Children's Commissioner regularly supplements this data through the exercise of its powers of investigation and inquiry. For example, in putting together a report on children in custody in May 2019, the Children's Commissioner used data published by the Ministry of Justice, Department of Education, NHS and Local Authorities to conclude that at least 1,465 children in England were officially securely detained in March 2018. However, the Children's Commissioner also undertook its own investigations to supplement this number. The Children's Commissioner requested information from English courts to find out how many other children were informally or insecurely detained in 2018 and discovered that at least a further 211 children met this description.¹¹⁹

Ratification / accession to international human rights instruments

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner must have regard to the Convention in considering what constitutes the rights and interests of children in fulfilling its mandate.¹²⁰ This means the work done by the Children's Commissioner is necessarily linked to the implementation and promotion of the Convention.

Furthermore, the Children's Commissioner has the following powers (as recommended under the Paris Principles):

- (a) to monitor the implementation in England of the Convention;¹²¹
- (b) to encourage the effective implementation of the Convention by:
 - (i) advising persons exercising functions or engaged in activities affecting children on how to act compatibly with the rights of children; and
 - (ii) advising the Secretary of State on the rights, views and interests of children;¹²² and
- (c) to conduct an assessment of the potential effect on the rights of children of government policy proposals and government proposals for legislation, to publish reports, and to bring any matter to the attention of either House of Parliament.¹²³

Interaction with international human rights system

The Children's Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner must have regard to the Convention in exercising its functions.¹²⁴ The Children's Commissioner also actively engages with the UN Committee.

The Children's Commissioner engages in advocacy work, including issuing a joint report to the UN Committee with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, calling for information of the Convention into domestic legislation. Every five years, the UN Committee reviews the UK's progress in terms of compliance. The Children's Commissioner, again in partnership with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, keeps track of the UK's progress and publishes mid-term reviews in the middle of each review cycle.¹²⁵

The Children's Commissioner is partly compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner works closely with the Children's Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Commissioners work together in monitoring and reporting to the UN Committee on compliance with the Convention.¹²⁶ Additionally, the Commissioners engage in collective advocacy work. For example, in 2014, they united to make a call for a national debate on fatherhood.¹²⁷ However, the relationship between the Commissioners is not defined by statute or otherwise formalised. It is a working relationship open to negotiation year-on-year.

Recommendations

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. In addition to making ad hoc recommendations and reports, the Children Act 2004 (UK) obliges the Children's Commissioner to publish annual Business Plans at the start of each financial year that highlight key national human rights concerns and provide recommendations.¹²⁸ The Children's Commissioner is required to take reasonable steps to consult children before publishing a Business Plan.¹²⁹ By way of example, the 2020/21 Business Plan identifies that children in lower-socio economic areas of England feel themselves to be vulnerable to public disorder, ranging from knife attacks to speeding cars, and that children in these areas do not trust the police to keep them safe. The Children's Commissioner recommends that action needs to be taken to build trust between police and this generation of children in lower-socio economic areas.¹³⁰

However, the Children's Commissioner does more than merely publicise these concerns and recommendations. The Business Plans set forward fully elucidated steps as to how the Children's Commissioner will engage and follow up with public authorities to promote and advocate for the implementation of its recommendations. For example, in relation to the issue of children feeling vulnerable to public disorder, the Business Plan states that the Children's Commissioner will:

- (a) continue campaigning for additional police officers to be linked into schools in an effort to rebuild trust between the police and this generation of children; and
- (b) work with the National Police Chiefs Council to ensure that its new child-centred policing strategy addresses the concerns of children as raised by research conducted by the Office of the Children's Commissioner.¹³¹

Ensuring pluralism

The Children's Commissioner is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. Given that the Children's Commissioner is a single-person decision-making body, pluralism within this body is difficult. However, the Children Act 2004 (UK) obliges the Children's Commissioner to appoint an advisory board to provide advice and assistance relating to the discharge of the Commissioner's functions.¹³² The Act states that the advisory board must consist of persons who (taken together) represent a broad range of interests which are relevant to the Children's Commissioner's functions.¹³³

Selection & appointment of decision-making body

The Children's Commissioner is partly compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The appointment process for the Commissioner is clear and transparent in practice, but not in law. The Children Act 2004 (UK) states, with no further detail given, that the Commissioner is appointed by the Secretary of State¹³⁴ and the Secretary must take reasonable steps to involve children in the appointment.¹³⁵

In practice, the last Commissioner was appointed as follows:

- (a) the Secretary wrote to the Education Committee within the House of Commons that Anne Longfield was the Government's preferred candidate;
- (b) the Secretary's letter to the Education Committee stated that the recruitment process involved two rounds of interviews and meetings between short-listed candidates and a panel of children and young people whose views were taken into account;
- (c) the Secretary's letter attached the job description, selection criteria, details of how the post was advertised, the selection panel, the process for sifting applications, and the candidate's CV;
- (d) the Secretary invited the Committee to hold a pre-appointment hearing with the candidate; and
- (e) the Committee held a hearing and, prior to the hearing, invited members of the public to suggest priorities for the incoming Children's Commissioner.¹³⁶

The Act obliges the Children's Commissioner to appoint an advisory board to provide advice and assistance relating to the discharge of the Children's Commissioner's functions.¹³⁷ The appointment process for the advisory council is largely transparent in that the Act states that:

- (a) the advisory board must consist of persons who (taken together) represent a broad range of interests which are relevant to the Children's Commissioner's functions;¹³⁸ and
- (b) the Children's Commissioner must from time to time publish a report on the procedure followed and the criteria used when making appointments to the advisory board.¹³⁹

The process could be made more transparent by enshrining the appointment procedure and criteria in the Children Act 2004 (UK). This would overcome any potential concerns about the adequacy of the Children's Commissioner's reports as to the appointment process.

Restriction on political representatives

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The independence of the Commissioner from the executive and legislature is enshrined in law. The Children Act 2004 (UK) states that the Children's Commissioner is "not to be regarded as the servant or agent of the Crown or as enjoying any status, immunity or privilege of the Crown".¹⁴⁰ Furthermore, the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 expressly prohibits a person who is the Children's Commissioner or a member of staff of the Children's Commissioner from being a Member of Parliament.¹⁴¹

A framework agreement also exists between the Children's Commissioner and the UK Department of Education that is purposed to protect the Children's Commissioner's independence.¹⁴² This agreement provides that it is for the Children's Commissioner to determine what activities to undertake in carrying out his or her primary function.¹⁴³

The Children's Commissioner has "freedom to determine their own priorities, and activities, and should be subject to as few constraints as possible in deciding how to carry out their business within their statutory remit".¹⁴⁴

The grounds for dismissal of the Children's Commissioner are limited in that the Secretary may only remove the Children's Commissioner from office if satisfied that the Commissioner has become unfit or unable to properly discharge his or her functions or has behaved in a way that is not compatible with his or her continuing in office.¹⁴⁵ However, there may be some room for improvement in relation to tenure. The General Observations to the Paris Principles state that the dismissal process must be clearly defined, independent and objective. It could be argued that these grounds of dismissal are too broad and open to subjective opinion. The statutory framework could be rendered more compliant by prescribing objective tests or criteria that go towards a conclusion that the Commissioner is unfit or unable to discharge their functions.

The Children's Commissioner is entitled to appoint any staff considered necessary to assist in carrying out their functions.¹⁴⁶ The Children's Commissioner has the power to determine the terms and conditions of such employment, promoting the independence of the Office of the Children's Commissioner.¹⁴⁷ In practice, it appears the recruitment process is open, transparent and merit-based. All staff roles are advertised on the Children's Commissioner website. The advertisements clearly set out the required skills and experience for the role.¹⁴⁸

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children's Commissioner is primarily funded by the State and funding is allocated as a separate budget line item applicable only to the Children's Commissioner.

The Act states that the Children's Commissioner is to be funded by payments made by the Secretary of State of "such amounts, at such times and on such conditions (if any) as the Secretary considers appropriate".¹⁴⁹ The Framework Agreement with the Department of Education provides a framework for the funding process:

- (a) the budget is voted in the Department's supply estimate as a separate line item and is subject to Parliamentary control; and
- (b) by 31 March each year, the Department then sends the Commissioner a formal statement of the annual budgetary provision allocated.¹⁵⁰

The Framework Agreement further allows the Children's Commissioner to receive some funding from external sources without needing to seek prior approval, provided that such funding complies with various (anti-corruption) regulations and is disclosed to the Department.¹⁵¹

In practice, this process provides adequate funding. There has been no suggestion either by the Children's Commissioner or commentators that the role is underfunded. In the 2019-20 financial year, the budget was £2.764m.¹⁵²

The Children's Commissioner also has near complete autonomy to allocate its budget in the exercise of its statutory function as it sees fit.¹⁵³ The Framework Agreement requires the Children's Commissioner to manage its budget responsibly and in compliance with good financial practice and to notify the Department of Education promptly if over-spending is anticipated.¹⁵⁴

The Children's Commissioner is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies.

The Act states that the Children's Commissioner must:

- (a) keep proper accounting records;
- (b) prepare a statement of accounts for each financial year; and
- (c) send a copy of each such statement to the Secretary and the Comptroller and Auditor General as soon as possible after the end of each financial year.¹⁵⁵

The Framework Agreement between the Children's Commissioner and the Department of Education further requires that the Children's Commissioner to:

- (a) sign off the Annual Report and Accounts;
- (b) ensure proper records are kept;
- (c) ensure the Annual Report and Accounts are properly prepared and presented;
- (d) provide timely forecasts and monitoring information on performance and finance to the Department of Education; and
- (e) promptly notify the Department of Education if over or under spends are likely.¹⁵⁶

Annual reports

The Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Children Act 2004 (UK) obliges the Children's Commissioner to publish:

- (a) at the start of each financial year, a Business Plan that highlights key human rights developments, provides a means of public scrutiny, and offers recommendations for change and provides an account of the activities to be undertaken by the Children's Commissioner that year to further its mandate;¹⁵⁷ and
- (b) at the end of each financial year, an Annual Report that reports on the Children's Commissioner's progress that year in relation to the Business Plan. The Children's Commissioner must report on the way and extent to which they discharged their functions and what they found in the course of exercising their functions during the year.¹⁵⁸

The Children's Commissioner must table these reports directly with the legislature.¹⁵⁹

5.2 Strongest Australian model

On the basis of our desktop review, the legislative structure for the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People appears to be the strongest existing Australian model in terms of its compliance with the Paris Principles. However, this assessment is made with the caveat that, as we have necessarily conducted our review from a legal perspective and have focussed on legislative structure and on-paper compliance with the Paris Principles, we have not considered the practical operation of the Commissioner models nor community feedback. Anecdotal evidence suggests that the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People may be less effective in practice, largely based on insufficient funding. Nevertheless, we consider this model to have the strongest legislative framework of all Australian models and consider that it provides a good basis for the structure of the National Commissioner role (subject to adequate funding).

¹⁵⁹ See Children Act 2004 (UK) ss 2, 8.

We have set out below a summary of the performance of the legislative framework for the South Australian Commissioner against each of the Paris Principles. Further detail in respect of both Commissioner models is set out in the review templates in the Appendix to this paper.

We consider the following features of this Commissioner model to be particularly notable:

(a) Broad range of reporting and inquiry powers

The powers (explored in the table and discussion above), including the power to make an immediate report to Parliament, give effect to the broad human rights mandate given to the Commissioner for Children and Young People.

(b) Information gathering power

A compulsory information gathering power is an important investigative tool for any statutory body. The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) provides that the Commissioner for Children and Young People or the Guardian may require a person to provide information or documents specified in a written notice where the information or documents are reasonably required by the Commissioner or Guardian to perform their functions under the Act.¹⁶⁰ Refusal or failure to comply with a notice is an offence with a maximum penalty of $10,000.¹⁶¹

Additionally, the Act prohibits a person from making a statement knowing that it is false or misleading in a material particular in information provided under the Act, with a maximum penalty of $10,000.¹⁶²

Background

The Commissioner for Children and Young People is an independent statutory officer, established under the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA).¹⁶³ The Act also establishes the Guardian for Children and Young People (“Guardian”)¹⁶⁴ and the Child Development Council (“Council”),¹⁶⁵ and provides for the continuation of the Child Death and Serious Injury Review Committee (“Review Committee”).¹⁶⁶

The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People is an independent officer responsible to the Minister for Education.¹⁶⁷ The role is described as “working alongside” the bodies established under the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA): the Commissioner for Children and Young People, the Guardian, the Council and the Review Committee.¹⁶⁸

The Commissioner for Children and Young People was established in response to recommendation 245 of the Child Protection Systems Royal Commission 2014 that there be a statutory office of the Commissioner for Children and Young People and that the Commissioner have the functions and powers set out in the Royal Commission Report.¹⁶⁹ The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) does not have an express section setting out statutory objectives (save for being an Act to establish the Commissioner and continue the other bodies).

The following sections deal with the Commissioner for Children and Young People. The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People, having been established under the Constitution Act 1934 (SA) as opposed to being legislated for within the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA), also operates within South Australia however is more challenging to analyse as many of the available comparators are less readily apparent. On that basis, we note that our determination of the Commissioner for Children and Young People (SA) as the most compliant Australian model extends only to that Commissioner. We do not include the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People (SA) in our recommendation of the strongest model.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People's role is legislatively enshrined (under the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA)).

The Commissioner for Children and Young People is appointed for a seven-year term and, at the end of the term, is eligible for re-appointment, provided the total term in office (including any time as Acting Commissioner) does not exceed 10 years (i.e. the Commissioner may be eligible for a second term to a maximum of three years).¹⁷⁰ The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) specifies the circumstances for suspension and removal from office, however some of the grounds appear to be more discretionary in nature. For example, the ground for suspension that the Commissioner has engaged in "conduct that may bring the office of the Commissioner into disrepute"¹⁷¹ may be interpreted differently depending on the person holding the office of Governor (and potentially also the underlying political motivations at the time), as opposed to a more objective factor such as a conviction for a criminal offence.

As a result of the powers and functions of the Commissioner for Children and Young People being contained within the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA), any modifications to those power and functions require the approval of Parliament.

In a broad sense, the Commissioner for Children and Young People has quasi-judicial competence insofar as it has the power to hold inquiries (with the powers of a Royal Commission¹⁷²), gather information compulsorily¹⁷³ and publish reports, including the ability to table the report directly with Parliament in certain circumstances¹⁷⁴.

In an inquiry under the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA), the Commissioner for Children and Young People has the same protection, privileges and immunities as a Judge of the Supreme Court.¹⁷⁵

Human rights mandate

The Commissioner for Children and Young People appears to be compliant with the Paris Principles in this respect. The Commissioner is vested with the competence to promote and protect human rights. The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) requires each State authority (which includes the Commissioner), in carrying out its functions or exercising its powers, to protect, respect and seek to give effect to the rights set out from time to time in the Convention and any other relevant international human rights instruments affecting children and young people.¹⁷⁶ In this regard, the Commissioner for Children and Young People is obliged to promote and protect human rights.

The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) defines a reference to the “rights” of children and young people as including a reference to rights recognised in accordance with statutory and common law, rights as set out in the Convention and rights set out in any other relevant international human rights instruments.¹⁷⁷ This broad definition of rights is in accordance with the comments in the General Observations about the need to promote a progressive definition of human rights.¹⁷⁸

The Commissioner for Children and Young People has a legislative mandate with specific statutory functions to promote and protect human rights. The Commissioner for Children and Young People is able to inquire into acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors, as well as providing reports and recommendations through a variety of statutory powers.

There are some limitations on the scope of the powers afforded to the Commissioner for Children and Young People. First, the power to inquire into matters is limited to matters of a systemic nature (i.e. not an isolated case or incident) and it must relate to the policies, practices and procedures of a “State authority” (or authorities) or any other matter provided by the regulations.¹⁷⁹ However, the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) also provides a power to provide an immediate report to Parliament on any matter related to the Commissioner for Children and Young People’s functions under the Act if satisfied the matter is of significant importance to the safety or wellbeing of children and young people. The compulsory information gathering power in the Act is limited to the production of documents or provision of information (i.e. does not extend to the ability to inspect premises).¹⁸⁰

Ratification / accession to international human rights instruments and interaction with international human rights system

General Observations 1.3 and 1.4 are considered together below.

There is no express obligation in the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) to encourage ratification of or accession to international human rights instruments. However, the Act requires each State authority (including both Commissioners), in carrying out its functions or exercising its powers, to protect, respect and seek to give effect to the rights set out from time to time in the Convention and any other relevant international human rights instruments affecting children and young people.¹⁸¹

The most recent Reports of the Commissioner for Children and Young People make it clear that the work and functions of the Commissioner are underpinned by the Convention.¹⁸²

The Commissioner for Children and Young People’s most recent annual report indicates a “key achievement” has been increased awareness of the Convention and the work of the Commissioner for Children and Young People through six formal presentations to adult stakeholders.¹⁸³ In 2019, the Commissioner for Children and Young People also made a submission to the UN Committee.¹⁸⁴

Given the Commissioner for Children and Young People is a State-based role (as opposed to national role), it is not surprising that the extent of interactions with the international human rights system is primarily through encouragement and promotion of human rights instruments within South Australia.

Cooperation with other human rights bodies

The Commissioner for Children and Young People interacts with the other human rights bodies within the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA), being the Guardian, the Committee and the Council.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People attends meetings of the ANZCCG and has participated in ANZCCG Joint Papers.¹⁸⁵

The Commissioner for Children and Young People has also co-authored joint reports, such as the 2018 “Leading for our Future Youth Symposium Report”, a joint report of the CCYP and the Australian Migrant Resource Centre.¹⁸⁶

Recommendations

The Commissioner for Children and Young People has a specified function to “advise, and make recommendation to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level”.¹⁸⁷

Upon completion of an inquiry, the Commissioner for Children and Young People may, by notice in writing, recommend to a State authority that it take particular action.¹⁸⁸ The State authority must respond to such a recommendation to indicate whether the recommendation will or will not be implemented, and either explain why it is not to be implemented or how it is proposed to be implemented.¹⁸⁹ The Commissioner for Children and Young People can escalate the matter to the Minister by submitting a report to the Minister where the Commissioner considers that the State authority had failed or refused to implement a recommendation (despite proposing to implement it).¹⁹⁰

These powers and functions give the Commissioner for Children and Young People a broad mandate and sufficient mechanisms for effecting change and drawing attention to inadequate implementation of recommendations.

Ensuring pluralism

The Commissioner for Children and Young People’s “Front & Centre” strategic agenda for 2018-2022 includes the following aspects relevant to ensuring the pluralism of the CCYP:

¹⁹⁰ Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 17(3), (4).

- (a) a key objective of the CCYP to “champion children and young people’s rights and work with the broader community to respect and support their inclusion in laws, policies and decision making”,¹⁹¹ and
- (b) a priority of the CCYP is to “Promote equality, equal access, equal rights, equal treatment and acceptance for people from diverse race, gender, sexual, religious and socio-economic backgrounds”.¹⁹²

Similarly, the Annual Report refers to a variety of activities involving diversity of participants in the activities conducted by the Commissioner for Children and Young People. However, the position on ensuring pluralism within the Commissioner for Children and Young People as an organisation itself is less clear.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People’s staff would be subject to the usual State Government employment conditions and recruitment processes, which are not considered within this paper but would have an impact on the pluralism in the organisation.

Selection & appointment of decision-making body

The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) provides for several decision-making bodies: the Commissioner for Children and Young People, the Guardian, the Council and the Committee.

There is a formal recruitment scheme set out within the regulations to the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA).¹⁹³ The recruitment scheme involves, inter alia, a selection panel of up to 5 persons (2 of whom must be young people) to propose the appointment of an application to the position of Commissioner for Children and Young People¹⁹⁴ and the inclusion of an exercise in the interview process designed to assess the applicant’s ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people.¹⁹⁵ The Regulations permit the panel, subject to the Regulations and any direction by the Minister, to determine its own procedures.

The recruitment scheme set out in the Regulations for the appointment of the Commissioner for Children and Young People is broadly in accordance with the recommendation in the General Observations that broad consultation and/or participation in the application, screening and selection process take place.¹⁹⁶ The position description identified for the Commissioner for Children and Young People position was advertised publicly and identified the selection criteria, form of application required and the essential skills for the role.

Restriction on political representatives

The office of Commissioner for Children and Young People becomes vacant if the holder is nominated for election as a member of an Australian Parliament.¹⁹⁷ In effect, this provision achieves the result that a Member of Parliament cannot also hold the office of Commissioner for Children and Young People. However, the office of the Guardian does not become vacant in the same circumstance. Similarly, Members of Parliament are not precluded by the Act from being appointed to the Council or the Review Committee.

¹⁹⁷ Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 8(13).

The Commissioner for Children and Young People must not, without the consent of the Minister, engage in any remunerated employment or activity apart from official duties, which provides a form of safeguard for the independence of the Commissioner for Children and Young People role.¹⁹⁸ It is worth noting that this safeguard requires political involvement (from the Minister), as opposed to review by an independent panel or advisory body.

Tenure

The Act specifies the circumstances for suspension and removal from office.¹⁹⁹ The Governor may, on the address of both Houses of Parliament, remove the CCYP from office.²⁰⁰ The Governor may also suspend the CCYP from office for:²⁰¹

- (a) contravention of a condition of appointment; or
- (b) misconduct or conduct that may bring the office of Commissioner into disrepute; or
- (c) failure or incapacity to carry out official duties satisfactorily.

If the Governor suspends the Commissioner for Children and Young People, a full statement of the reason must be laid before both Houses of Parliament within 7 days.²⁰² If, at the end of 20 sitting days after the statement is laid before Parliament, neither House has presented an address to the Governor requiring the Commissioner for Children and Young People to be restored to office, then the Commissioner for Children and Young People is removed from office.²⁰³

The Commissioner for Children and Young People is independent of direction or control by the Crown or any Minister or officer of the Crown.²⁰⁴ This same provision applies to the Guardian,²⁰⁵ but does not apply to the Committee.²⁰⁶

Adequate funding

The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) has an equivalent provision for each of the Commissioner for Children and Young People, the Guardian, the Review Committee and the Council, requiring the Minister to provide staff and other resources that the body reasonably needs for carrying out their functions.²⁰⁷ In practice, the Commissioner for Children and Young People's 2018/19 budget of $5,580,000 was among the higher, on a per capita basis, of the Australian Commissioners, noting that this amount includes funding for the Guardian for Children and Young People (SA) and so the final figure allocated to the Commissioner for Children and Young People is likely to be somewhat lower.

Annual reports

The Commissioner for Children and Young People must report to the Minister on or before 31 October each year, addressing the performance of the Commissioner's functions during the preceding financial year.²⁰⁸ The Minister is required to have copies of the report laid before both Houses of Parliament within six sitting days after receiving the report.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People is empowered to report to Parliament if satisfied the matter is of such importance to the safety and wellbeing of children and young people that Parliament should be made aware as a matter of urgency.²⁰⁹ The Commissioner for Children and

5.3 Summary

We consider the New Zealand and United Kingdom Commissioner models to be the most compliant overall existing Commissioner models. We have made this determination on the basis that the New Zealand and United Kingdom Commissioner models are the most compliant with the Paris Principles. In addition, the United Kingdom and New Zealand Children's Commissioner models may be the most relevant to Australia given the similarities between jurisdictions as each country comes from a common law background with a Westminster parliamentary system.

We consider that the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People appears to be the most compliant existing Australian model against the Paris Principles.²¹⁰

The table at the end of this section sets out our assessment of each of the existing Commissioner models against the Paris Principles based on our desktop review. We have conducted our review using a "traffic light" system, whereby green indicates substantial compliance with the relevant principle, yellow indicates partial compliance and red indicates lack of compliance.²¹¹

²¹⁰ For clarity, we note that this refers to the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People, rather than the South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People.

²¹¹ We note that for a number of the "essential requirements" of the Paris Principles, there are various components, a result of which is that a Commissioner model might score as "partially" compliant on a requirement, even where that model notably outperforms other Commissioner models on one or two components of that essential requirement. For example, the Canadian and Norwegian models are largely compliant (and we consider these to be some of the better Commissioner models we have reviewed), however some of the Commissioners' powers are restricted such that it is difficult to state that they are "compliant" with the relevant Paris Principles. For example, whilst the Canadian Commissioner's powers of inquiry are significant, they are limited to public entities.

6 Strongest compliance per Paris Principle

This section identifies the Commissioner models that have the strongest compliance for each element of the Paris Principles. A summary table is provided at the end of this section.

6.1 Entrenchment in law—The National Commissioner shall be given as broad a mandate as possible, which shall be clearly set forth in a legislative text.²¹⁵

- (a) Entrenched in law:²¹⁶ The enabling legislation should specify the National Commissioner's role, functions, powers, funding, and lines of accountability, as well as the appointment mechanism for and terms of office of members.

Best practice under the Paris Principles requires that, to the greatest degree possible, the terms of a commissioner's role be legislated. This promotes a greater degree of permanency and independence, whilst distinguishing the role from state agencies, non-government organisations or ad hoc bodies.

The Children's Commissioner of the Northern Territory is subject to its own enacting legislation, the Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) which sets out the role's functions, structure, accountability and appointment mechanisms. The Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) sets out the principles informing the exercise of the Children's Commissioner's powers,²¹⁷ as well as the Children's Commissioner's powers to promote and report on children's wellbeing,²¹⁸ receive and determine complaints,²¹⁹ conduct investigations and inquiries,²²⁰ and monitor the administration and implementation of legislation and government decision-making.²²¹ The legislation also specifies the Children's Commissioner's term of appointment,²²² the nature and staffing of the Children's Commissioner's office,²²³ annual reporting obligations,²²⁴ and offences in failing to comply with, or assist, the Children's Commissioner.²²⁵

The National Commissioner role should be established via standalone legislation. The establishing legislation should clearly articulate the various criteria discussed below. A clear legislative framework for the National Commissioner will promote stability in the role across changes in government and promote transparency and predictability in the nature and scope of the National Commissioner's powers.

- (b) Independence:²²⁶ The enabling legislation must ensure independence by, for example, containing an independent and objective dismissal process.

The independence of the Children's Commissioner of the Northern Territory is specifically provided for in its enacting legislation. Section 11 of the Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) provides that:

²¹⁵ Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, principle 2.

²²⁴ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) Part 9.

²²⁵ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) Part 8.

²²⁶ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.1.

Except as otherwise provided by another law of the Territory, the Commissioner is not subject to the direction of anyone in relation to:

- (a) the way in which the functions of the Commissioner are performed; or*
- (b) the order of priority the Commissioner gives to investigations.*

The Children's Commissioner also benefits from robust provisions limiting the bases upon which their appointment may be suspended or terminated. The Children's Commissioner may only be suspended for misbehaviour, or physical or mental incapacity. Within three sitting days, the relevant Minister must present a statement of reasons in support of this suspension to the Legislative Assembly. In order to terminate the Children's Commissioner, a two-thirds majority of the Legislative Assembly must pass a resolution within seven sitting days of being provided the statement.²²⁷ Additionally, the Children's Commissioner may be terminated for bankruptcy.²²⁸ A clearly defined dismissal process will support the National Commissioner's capacity to exercise their functions with reduced fear of government or other political intervention.

Some Commissioner roles are vested with increased independence in relation to aspects of their functions. The Commissioner for Children and Young People for South Australia, in conducting an inquiry, is vested with the same protections, privileges and immunities as a Judge of the Supreme Court of South Australia.²²⁹ Both the powers and independence vested in the judiciary are considerable and privileges of this kind would provide a high degree of independence. In this respect, we note that the recently proposed legislation for the establishment of a National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention vests the commissioner with the same protections and immunities as a Justice of the High Court.²³⁰

- (c) Complaints handling:²³¹ Whilst not required under the Paris Principles, the power to hear and determine complaints contributes to a commissioner's ability to provide "end-to-end" oversight of their area of responsibility, by including promotion, monitoring and enforcement powers.

A complaints-handling power was less common among the Commissioner models reviewed. We have not inquired further into the reasoning behind this. Speculatively, complaints-handling powers may be omitted due to budgeting and resourcing limitations, given the potentially significant volume of complaints and resulting burden upon commissioners and their offices.

Should a complaints-handling mechanism be deemed suitable, the Norwegian Ombudsman for Children provides an example of a broad-based complaints-handling powers. The Ombudsman holds a mandate to receive, consider and resolve complaints alleging violations of human rights, particularly the 'needs, rights and interests of children'.²³² The Ombudsman may:

- (i) receive complaints against both public and private bodies in its jurisdiction;²³³
- (ii) receive and consider complaints either of their own initiative or by other persons;²³⁴

- (iii) investigate complaints (or determine the steps which should be taken to investigate the circumstances of a case);²³⁵ and
- (iv) refer cases to relevant bodies (such as to specialised courts or tribunals).²³⁶

Ideally, such a complaints-handling power should not be unduly limited to hearing complaints only in respect of certain entities. For example, the Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) provides a complaints-handling mechanism only in relation to "service providers",²³⁷ being public authorities or operators of child-related services who act, or provide services, in relation to vulnerable children.²³⁸

Including a complaints-handling mechanism could serve as a useful adjunct to the National Commissioner's reporting, inquiry and recommendation powers. Should any complaints-handling mechanism be included, it is important that this power be adequately resourced. Further analysis of the adequacy of commissioner budgets is considered at section 6.10 below.

6.2 Human rights mandate—The National Commissioner shall hold a range of specific functions to both promote and protect human rights.

- (a) Nature of mandate:²³⁹ "Promotion" of human rights means creating a society where human rights are more broadly understood and respected and can occur by education, training, advising, public outreach and/or advocacy. "Protection" of human rights means addressing and seeking to prevent actual human rights violations and can include monitoring, inquiring, investigating, reporting on human rights violations and individual complaints handling. The National Commissioner's mandate should be interpreted broadly, liberally and in a purposive manner to promote a progressive definition of human rights.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People (SA) holds a broad legislative mandate to both promote and protect the rights of children and young people. The Commissioner's mandate is:²⁴⁰

- (i) to promote and advocate for the rights and interests of all children and young people in South Australia;
- (ii) to promote the participation by children and young people in the making of decisions that affect their lives;
- (iii) to advise, and make recommendations to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;
- (iv) to inquire into matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level (whether a Governmental system or otherwise);
- (v) to assist in ensuring that the State, as part of the Commonwealth, satisfies its international obligations in respect of children and young people;
- (vi) to undertake or commission research into topics related to children and young people;
- (vii) to prepare and publish reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level; and

- (viii) to perform such other functions as may be conferred on the Commissioner by or under the Act or any other Act.

The Commissioner is also required to consult with and engage children and young people in the performance of its functions; particularly those whose ability to make their views known is limited.²⁴¹

A similar legislative mandate would provide the National Commissioner with a broad scope to engage with issues relevant to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. Further examples of broad legislative mandates include the proposed Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada and the Children's Commissioner (NZ).

It is important that any broad mandate be coupled with specific powers sufficient to enable the National Commissioner to effectively exercise its mandate. These powers predominately involve (a) inquiries and investigations (discussed at section 6.2(b)), (b) reporting (discussed at section 6.11), and (c) complaints-handling (discussed at section 6.1(c)).

It is important that the National Commissioner promotes a broad interpretation of the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people and that this interpretation is capable of evolving in line with international developments. Several of the Commissioner models considered in our review contained specific references to the expressions of children's rights as contained in the Convention.²⁴² Whilst this may be a current leading articulation of children's rights, best practice requires that NHRIs pursue a broad and progressively evolving understanding of human rights.

The Australian National Children's Commissioner is legislatively required to have regard to (i) a number of expressly-recognised international human rights instruments,²⁴³ and (ii) such other instruments relating to human rights as considered relevant.²⁴⁴ This represents substantial best practice in mandating consideration of the leading international human rights instruments and requiring consideration of such other instruments as and when they become relevant.

In the context of the National Commissioner, the Commissioner's mandate should require consideration and implementation of rights established in the Convention and the Declaration. Whilst a number of the Commissioner models reviewed for the purposes of this paper have legislated observance of the Convention, none required engagement with the Declaration. This is possibly due to its current observed, rather than binding, status.

The National Commissioner should also promote compliance with the Convention and the Declaration. This may be achieved in a number of ways, and a best practice model would likely include most, if not all, of the following:

- a. mandatory annual reporting on a government's adoption of, and compliance with, relevant international instruments;²⁴⁵
- b. advising persons exercising functions or engaged in activities affecting children on how to act compatibly with relevant international instruments;²⁴⁶

- c. monitoring and reporting on domestic legislation, to ensure consistency with relevant international instruments;²⁴⁷ and
 - d. advocating for human rights and promoting public awareness and understanding of rights and obligations stemming from relevant international instruments.²⁴⁸
- (b) Powers of inquiry and investigation:²⁴⁹ A National Commissioner should be empowered to conduct own-motion inquiries and investigations into any matter affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia. This function should be supported by powers to compel information, enter premises, inspect documents and examine individuals, both public and private.

The Children and Young People Commissioner (ACT) can conduct inquiries and investigations on its own motion into matters affecting children and young people. Access to premises may be announced or unannounced,²⁵⁰ and the Commissioner must be given access to information that it believes on reasonable grounds will be relevant to a consideration in relation to a complaint. It is an offence if the person fails to produce the information.²⁵¹

The Tasmanian Commissioner for Children and Young People has a broad power of investigation, and may investigate any matter they consider appropriate.²⁵² The Commissioner has the power to investigate government policies, practices or procedures relating to the wellbeing of children and young people, which should also extend to monitoring human rights affecting children and young people within the relevant public authorities.²⁵³ In conjunction with this (and to assist with this function), the Commissioner has the power to compel information.²⁵⁴ This extends to requiring a person to answer questions either orally or in writing, and also to produce any specified documents. There is a penalty associated with non-compliance of a request for information.²⁵⁵ With the information sharing provisions in its establishing legislation, the Commissioner is also able to request non-identifying information relating to a child or young person from an “information sharing entity” (as defined in section 3 of the Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1997 (Cth)).²⁵⁶

The Children’s Commissioner (NZ) has the power to obtain statements or documents in order to assess situations raising human rights issues and has the power to require that a person provides information or documents to the Commissioner if it is reasonably necessary for an investigation.²⁵⁷ Fines apply for failure to comply.²⁵⁸ The Commissioner can also apply to the court to access court records if it believes on reasonable grounds this is required for an investigation.²⁵⁹

The proposed National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention is also vested with broad investigatory powers. Investigations into matters falling within the Commissioner's mandate may be initiated on the Commissioner's own motion,²⁶⁰ and include such powers as to:

- (i) hold a public hearing as the Commissioner sees fit, and in doing so, the Commissioner is not bound by the rules of evidence;
- (ii) hold a private hearing, provided that the Commissioner is satisfied that the information to be disclosed is personal and private or operationally sensitive;
- (iii) summon a person, by written notice, to attend a hearing in order to give notice or produce documents (including documents subject to legal professional privilege);
- (iv) require a witness to take an oath or make an affirmation;
- (v) give written notice requiring a person to provide information or produce documents (including information or documents subject to legal professional privilege); and
- (vi) apply for search warrants (where the Commissioner believes on reasonable grounds that if a summons were issued, the document may be concealed, lost, mutilated or destroyed).

The General Observations recommend that powers of inquiry and investigation be as unfettered as possible.²⁶¹ The powers of inquiry and investigation held by some Commissioners are restricted as to either when they may be exercise or their permissible subject matter. For example, the Commissioner for Children and Young People (SA) may conduct own-motion inquiries into:²⁶²

- (i) the policies, practices and procedures of a State authority or authorities as they relate to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people generally, or a particular group of children and young people; or
- (ii) any other matter declared by the regulations.

However, the Commissioner may only conduct inquiries if it suspects that:²⁶³

- (iii) the matter raises an issue of particular significance to children and young people;
- (iv) the matter is of a systemic nature, rather than being limited to an isolated incident; and
- (v) it is in the public interest to conduct the inquiry.

The Paris Principles and General Observations suggest that such restrictions are unsuitable as they unduly limit the scope of a commissioner's powers. Such limitations may be characterised as accountability mechanisms, to ensure that a commissioner is exercising its powers appropriately. However, such restrictions may see individual investigations legally challenged and delayed, thus limiting effectiveness. As such, we consider that accountability may be better effected through regular mandatory reporting (at section 6.11), legislated financial oversight (at section 6.10) and transparent accountability and lines of reporting (at section 6.5).

- (c) Protection from liability:²⁶⁴ Members and staff of the National Commissioner should be protected from both criminal and civil liability for acts undertaken in good faith in their official capacity, including when exercising investigative powers.

²⁶³ Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 15(2).

²⁶⁴ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.3.

A number of Commissioner models provide immunity for acts and omissions conducted in the exercise or purported exercise of the powers or functions of the role.²⁶⁵ These protections are typically expressed as follows:²⁶⁶

(1) A person is not civilly or criminally liable for an act done or omitted to be done by the person in good faith in the exercise of a power or performance of a function under this Act.

(3) In this section:

exercise, of a power, includes the purported exercise of the power.

performance, of a function, includes the purported performance of the function.

Protections of this type are consistent with best practice and are constituted of three key elements:

- (i) protection from civil and criminal liability;
- (ii) for acts and omissions done in good faith; and
- (iii) in the exercise or performance of a function under the relevant enacting legislation.

These protections may also extend to a commissioner's immunity from being compelled as a witness in relation to any matter that comes to the commissioner's attention as a result of performing their functions (in addition to being protected from criminal and civil liability in exercising their duties). Such protections are provided in the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act,²⁶⁷ and the Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (NZ).²⁶⁸

Whilst these protections will often apply to the commissioner and their staff, they may also extend to individuals assisting or cooperating with a commissioner. Under s 48 of the Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT), individuals are protected from civil or criminal liability if acting in good faith when providing information or a complaint to the Commissioner. The inclusion of such a protection may comprise an important adjunct to the National Commissioner's investigative and complaints-handling powers, through incentivising good faith disclosures by members of the public.

6.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments—The National Commissioner must promote and ensure harmonisation of national legislation and practices with international human rights instruments and encourage ratification of those international human rights instruments.²⁶⁹

To satisfy best practice, the National Commissioner should be required to observe key international human rights instruments, such as the Convention, and promote their observance and implementation.

Relevantly, whilst a number of Commissioner models considered in our review required compliance with the Convention, Commissioners typically were not provided with any specific mandate to encourage ratification and observance of other international human rights instruments. For example, the National Children's Commissioner, is empowered to:

²⁶⁵ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 49; Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act s 27(2); Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (NZ) s 27.

²⁶⁶ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 49.

²⁶⁷ Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act s 27(2).

²⁶⁸ Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (NZ) s 27(3).

²⁶⁹ Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, principle 3(b), (c).

- (a) undertake research, or educational or other programs, for the purpose of promoting respect for the human rights of children in Australia, and promoting the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia;²⁷⁰ and
- (b) examine existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments for the purpose of ascertaining whether they recognise and protect the human rights of children in Australia, and to report to the Minister the results of any such examination.²⁷¹

Whilst these powers require the scrutiny of government legislation to determine compliance with human rights, such rights being typically derived from international instruments, these powers stop short of promoting ratification of such further international instruments as may be relevant to children's rights.

A National Commissioner should be empowered to scrutinise and promote compliance with, and encourage ratification of, international human rights instruments, particularly those dealing with the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. Whilst the Convention may be considered a leading articulation of children's rights, a best practice model should likely incorporate relevant international instruments such as:

- (i) the Declaration;
- (ii) the International Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Racial Discrimination;
- (iii) the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; and
- (iv) the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

6.4 Interaction with the international human rights system—The National Commissioner shall contribute to reports which States are required to submit to the United Nations and cooperate with the United Nations and any other organisation in the United Nations system, the regional institutions and the national institutions of other countries that are competent in the areas of the promotion and protection of human rights.²⁷²

(a) *Engagement with human rights system:*²⁷³

At an international level, the National Commissioner should monitor and engage with the United Nations Human Rights Council (including its Special Procedures and Universal Periodic Review) and the UN Committee. Such engagement could include:

- (i) submitting parallel or shadow reports to the Universal Periodic Review, Special Procedure mechanisms and UN Committee (in this respect, see further paragraph (b) below);
- (ii) making statements during debates before review bodies and the Human Rights Council;
- (iii) assisting, facilitating and participating in country visits by United Nations experts, including special procedures mandate holders, the UN Committee, fact finding missions and commissions of inquiry; and
- (iv) monitoring and promoting the implementation of relevant recommendations originating from the human rights system.

To maintain its independence from government, the National Commissioner should not participate in the international human rights system by way of a government delegation during the Universal Periodic Review, during periodic reviews before the UN Committee, or in other international mechanisms where independent participation rights for NHRIs exist. Where independent mechanisms do not exist, the National Commissioner should only participate as part of a national delegation where the manner of its participation clearly distinguishes it as independent of government.

The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner is empowered to engage with international bodies, alongside other domestic organisations, to share information, promote good practice and advocate for the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, in the performance of its functions.²⁷⁴ Examples of the Commissioner's engagement with international human rights bodies include:²⁷⁵

- (A) in March and August 1999, the Commissioner made submissions to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, responding to the Committee's requests for information;
- (B) in September 2003, the Commissioner made three submissions to the UN Committee, relating to three of the themes to be considered during the Day of General Discussion on the Rights of Indigenous Children;
- (C) in 2018, the Commissioner spoke at the 38th regular session of the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva to discuss the Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) project for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women;²⁷⁶ and
- (D) in 2019, the Commissioner launched the Hear Us, See Us exhibition at the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva.²⁷⁷

The Children's Commissioner for England (UK) actively engages with the UN Committee, including by:²⁷⁸

- engaging in advocacy work, including issuing a joint report to the UN Committee with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, calling for ratification of the Convention into domestic legislation; and
- in partnership with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, reviewing the UK's progress in compliance with the Convention and publishing mid-term reviews during each of the UN Committee's five year review cycles.

The General Observations recommend that NHRIs engage with the OHCHR, GANHRI, other NHRIs and international and national NGOs and civil society organisations. For the National Commissioner, this could involve engagement with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander rights groups (for example, SNAICC), engagement and cooperation with the AHRC and state and territory Commissioners and reporting to or cooperating with the United Nations Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues and the UN Committee.

(b) Preparation of state reports.²⁷⁹

Best practice in contributing to and preparing state reports is expressed in a relatively narrow manner by the Paris Principles, being the contribution to country reports submitted to United Nations bodies and committees, and to regional institutions, in line with the state's treaty obligations. The General Observations provide some further context, noting that NHRIs should both contribute to country reports and produce independent parallel reports on the state's compliance with its treaty obligations. However, contribution to a country report by an NHRI should not take the form of preparation of the report itself (nor should the NHRI report on behalf of the government), as this would conflict with the fundamental requirement of NHRIs' independence from government.

NHRIs are also to monitor their state's compliance with its reporting obligations through the Universal Periodic Review and international treaty bodies (including through dialogue with the relevant treaty body committee).

The National Children's Commissioner has broad reporting powers and is empowered to provide information and consult on reports to human rights mechanisms. In particular, the National Children's Commissioner regularly engages with and reports to the UN Committee. Recent reporting includes:²⁸⁰

- (i) in November 2018, the National Children's Commissioner prepared an independent report for submission to the UN Committee,²⁸¹ setting out information relating to Australia's joint fifth and sixth report under the Convention on the Rights of the Child, second report on the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and second report on the Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict,²⁸² which Australia had submitted earlier in the year on 15 January 2018;²⁸³
- (ii) in February 2019, the National Children's Commissioner addressed the UN Committee and assisted them in looking at the major issues facing children living in Australia;
- (iii) following this, the UN Committee provided the Australian Government with a list of issues to address in writing by August 2019; and
- (iv) in September 2019, the UN Committee provided Australia with its Concluding Observations and recommendations.

The Children's Commissioner (NZ) reports to the UN Committee periodically and attends UN Committee sessions. For example, during the Fifth Periodic Report in 2016, the Children's Commissioner attended the 73rd session of the UN Committee and reported on outcomes for children in New Zealand.²⁸⁴ The Children's Commissioner issued a Supplementary Report to the UN Committee in 2016.²⁸⁵ This is in addition to and separate from government reporting (which is carried out by the Minister for Social Development)²⁸⁶ which ensures that the independence of the Children's Commissioner is maintained, and that it is able to provide information to the UN Committee in its own right.

In respect of the National Commissioner, best practice in the contribution to state reports could involve independent submission of stakeholder or shadow reports in respect of Australia's compliance with the Convention and Declaration. As part of the National Commissioner's independence from government, where appropriate the National Commissioner could draw attention to issues, deficiencies or challenges present in Australia's state report.

6.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies—The National Commissioner must consult with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and develop relations with the nongovernmental organisations devoted to promoting and protecting human rights.²⁸⁷

Given its proposed establishment at the national level, an important aspect of the National Commissioner's role should be the development, formalisation and maintenance of working relationships with other national and subnational Australian institutions and actors established for the promotion and protection of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. Whilst such a function could be expressed with reference to specific domestic entities (for example SNAICC) such an approach may lack flexibility and fail to effectively capture all relevant entities.

The South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People engages with the Aboriginal Children's Commissioners from other States and Territories. Between December 2018 – December 2019:

- (a) the Commissioner, with the Victorian Aboriginal Children's Commissioner, met with the Federal Aboriginal Affairs Minister in relation to the call for a national Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children's Commissioner;²⁸⁸ and
- (b) the Commissioner coordinated the first meeting of the three Aboriginal Children's Commissioners in Australia (SA, Victoria and Queensland).²⁸⁹

The South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People also engaged with other bodies, such as SNAICC, by partnering or participating in events. In September 2019, the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People facilitated an Aboriginal youth panel at the SNAICC Conference in Adelaide.²⁹⁰

The proposed legislation establishing the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada will require the Commissioner to collaborate with First Nations governing bodies and any authorities across Canada that promote, advocate for or serve children and youth. These requirements are variously expressed as:²⁹¹

... to collaborate with First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies to include First Nations, Inuit and Métis views and values in the Commissioner's advocacy for First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth;

... to assist in the development and implementation, in cooperation with First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies, of programs adapted to the rights, well-being, traditions and needs of First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth;

A similar obligation should be adopted for the National Commissioner which would be sufficiently broad to capture Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander bodies, and bodies dealing with the rights and interests of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people.

6.6 Recommendations by NHRIs—The power to make recommendations on any matter concerning the promotion and protection of human rights,²⁹² including the power to address public opinion directly or through press organs to publicise its recommendations.²⁹³

(a) Power to make recommendations

The National Commissioner should be empowered to provide recommendations on all matters relevant to the exercise of its functions. This may include:

- (i) reviewing and commenting on draft legislation;²⁹⁴
- (ii) providing recommendations stemming from inquiries, investigations or complaints;²⁹⁵ and
- (iii) monitoring government compliance with international human rights instruments.²⁹⁶

The proposed Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada will be empowered with a broad range of reporting and recommendation powers. The Commissioner will be able to provide recommendations stemming from any inquiry conducted,²⁹⁷ on the government's implementation of the Convention, on matters relating to child welfare, on the Office of the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada's functions and activities, and on an ad hoc basis in response to any issues of urgency or importance.²⁹⁸ Any reports must be published on the Office of the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada's website.²⁹⁹

The General Observations state that the power to make recommendations should be broad and unfettered. One example of the type of restriction to be avoided is in the Commissioner for Children and Young People (SA)'s recommendation powers. These powers may typically only be exercised in relation to systemic issues.³⁰⁰ For example, the Commissioner has specified functions to:

- (i) advise, and make recommendation to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;³⁰¹
- (ii) prepare and publish reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;³⁰²
- (iii) prepare and provide to any responsible Minister reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;³⁰³ and
- (iv) make a report to Parliament on any matter related to their functions if satisfied that the matter raises issues of such importance to the safety or wellbeing of children and young people that the Parliament should be made aware of the matter as a matter of urgency.³⁰⁴

- (b) Annual reports: The NHRI should use its annual, special and thematic reports to make recommendations in relation to, and monitor respect for, human rights.

The clear majority of Commissioner models considered were compliant with best practice in respect of annual reporting. Relevant considerations to maximise the efficacy of annual reporting are considered below at section 6.11.

- (c) Follow up action: The NHRI should undertake follow up action on recommendations contained in its reports and should publish detailed information on the measures taken or not taken by public authorities.

Follow-up provisions are essential in ensuring accountability amongst the Commissioner, government and those entities the subject of recommendations or reports made by the commissioner.

The Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act s 17(1) will require the government to respond to the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada's annual report within 90 days.

Similarly, the proposed Bill for the Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention requires the Commonwealth to report on the Commonwealth's responses to the Commissioner's reports (and to table this Commonwealth response report in Parliament). The Commissioner will also have the power to table additional reports related directly to actions that are not adequate or appropriately taken in response to the Commissioner's reports.³⁰⁵

Some entities are vested with powers to enforce follow-up requirements. Where an entity receives a report from the Australian Capital Territory's Children and Young People Commission, it commits an offence if it fails to inform the Commission how the recommendation has been addressed within the legislatively-prescribed timeframe.³⁰⁶

6.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI—The appointment and composition of the National Commissioner must guarantee pluralist representation of the social forces involved in the promotion and protection of human rights, in particular by promoting and enabling effective cooperation with non-governmental organisations, universities and qualified experts, Parliament, and Government departments.³⁰⁷

- (a) Pluralism:³⁰⁸ In order to facilitate an NHRI's capacity to effectively engage with the human rights issues affecting its constituency, the NHRI's membership composition should broadly reflect the diversity of that constituency. This is particularly relevant for single member NHRIs, such as commissioners or ombudspersons.³⁰⁹

With this in mind, where the functions of the National Commissioner impact on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, it is imperative that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities are both:

- (i) represented in the National Commissioner's staffing composition; and
- (ii) consulted on the National Commissioner's activities and policies (including on the recruitment and appointment of the governing body of the National Commissioner).

These requirements are an important step towards empowering Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples (in line with their right to self-determination)³¹⁰ and should ensure that the policies of the National Commissioner and any recommendations made by the National Commissioner align closely with the best interests of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

The significance of the right to self-determination to Indigenous peoples is recognised throughout the Declaration,³¹¹ which was supported by the Australian Government in April 2009.³¹² While the Declaration is not binding in international law, it affirms the way in which a number of existing human rights standards, including the right to self-determination,³¹³ apply to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in Australia.

The principle of self-determination in respect of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is relevant to the operation of the National Commissioner for myriad reasons, including that:

- (A) an understanding of the cultural patterns, values, customs and worldviews of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities is crucial to determining the best interests of those communities (both at a national and local level);³¹⁴
- (B) research demonstrates that involving Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities in the design and delivery of policies and programs leads to improved outcomes for those communities across various systems (such as the child protection system);³¹⁵
- (C) it may also go towards fostering confidence and forming constructive relations between the National Commissioner and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities;³¹⁶ and
- (D) upholding participatory rights is an effective means of promoting reconciliation and of redressing Australia's history of subjugating and marginalising Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.³¹⁷

Some of the best-practice models for ensuring pluralism whilst still maintaining the right to self-determination for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples within the body of the National Commissioner include:³¹⁸

- legislatively-guaranteed representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in the National Commissioner; and
- legislatively-mandated consultation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities.

The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner must, by way of legislation, be a person that has significant experience in the community life of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander peoples.³¹⁹ ³¹⁹ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46B(2).

In regard to the Queensland Family and Child Commission, the legislative requirement that “at least 1 person recommended by the Minister for appointment as commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander,” has been interpreted as a statutory mandate that “at least one commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.”³²⁰

The Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act will provide that:

- the Minister must consult with representatives from First Nations before making a recommendation as to the appointment of the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada;³²¹
- the Commissioner should collaborate with First Nations governing bodies in the course of exercising his or her functions;³²² and
- First Nations people must be involved in the evaluation of the Act five years after it comes into force.³²³

6.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs—The appointment procedure of the National Commissioner shall be by election or otherwise.

(a) Appointment:

Best practice in appointing a commissioner or other senior leadership requires:³²⁴

- (i) vacancies to be publicised broadly;
- (ii) active steps taken to ensure the maximum number of potential candidates from a wide range of societal groups;
- (iii) the promotion of broad consultation and/or participation in the application, screening, selection and appointment process; and
- (iv) the assessment of applicants on the basis of pre-determined, objective and publicly available criteria.

We note that SNAICC has expressed the requirement that the National Commissioner be an identified Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander person with appropriate qualifications, knowledge and experience and appointed through a transparent process.³²⁵

The legislation governing the appointment of the Commissioner for Children and Young People for South Australia broadly complies with these requirements. The position description identified for the Commissioner position was advertised publicly and identified the selection criteria, form of application required and the essential skills for the role. The recruitment scheme requires broad consultation and participation in the application, screening and selection process,³²⁶ most notably a selection panel of up to 5 persons (2 of whom must be young people) to propose the appointment of an application to the position of Commissioner and the inclusion of an exercise in the interview process designed to assess the applicant’s ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people.³²⁷ The Office of Children’s Commissioner for England employs a similar recruitment method, in that the relevant Minister must take reasonable steps to involve children in the appointment,³²⁸ as does the Commissioner for Children and Young People of Western Australia.³²⁹

The requirement that any National Commissioner be an identified Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander person is not without precedent. Similar requirements are demonstrated by the Queensland Family and Child Commissioner, whereby the legislative requirement that “at least 1 person recommended by the Minister for appointment as commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander,” has been interpreted as a statutory mandate that “at least one commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.”³³⁰

(b) Formation of decision-making bodies:

Not all Commissioner models reviewed for the purposes of this Options Paper had clearly identified standalone decision-making bodies. Should a decision-making or other advisory body be considered appropriate, best practice requires that this body be comprised of individuals from across the public and private sectors that represent a breadth of relevant expertise. The selection process should transparent and involve consultation and assessment against pre-determined and publicly available criteria.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People (WA) may establish advisory committees and reference groups to assist with the performance of the Commissioner’s functions. These advisory committees include representatives of non-government agencies concerned with the rights, interests and wellbeing of children and young people. The Commissioner must also establish advisory committees consisting of children and young people, who the Commissioner considers are from a broad range of socio-economic and cultural backgrounds and age groups, to assist in the performance of the Commissioner’s functions. These committees are required to be established in regional areas as well as metropolitan areas to ensure that these advisory bodies are representative across metropolitan, regional and remote areas. This may be particularly important to the National Commissioner in providing effective representation.

6.9 Political representatives on NHRIs—The National Commissioner shall be independent of government.³³¹

Best practice requires independence from government and any government representative to participate in an advisory capacity only. This is considered critical to ensuring that a commissioner is capable of freely considering any question falling within its competence. Whilst the General Observations focus on the degree to which government representatives may form part of NHRI’s and participate in their decision-making, we have adopted a broader interpretation of this requirement for the purposes of our review. We have considered the degree to which the Commissioners are afforded legislative independence from government. We have considered best practice to be direct legislative prohibition on government or other political influence or interference. In this context, we have considered each Commissioners’ term of appointment and autonomy over staffing as important to an overall assessment of the Commissioner’s independence. Best practice in these respects is discussed below.

Very few commissioner models considered in our review were compliant with best practice. Section 11 of the Children’s Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) states that the Northern Territory’s Children’s Commissioner is not subject to the direction of anyone in relation to the way in which the functions of the Commissioner are performed or the order of priority the Commissioner gives to investigations. This does not, however, prevent political influence or representation upon or within the Northern Territory's Office of the Children's Commissioner.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People (WA) is expressly not subject to any direction by the Minister or any other person in the performance of their duty,³³² except as specified in the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA). The Act states that the Minister may give directions on matters of general policy relevant to the exercise of the Commissioner's functions.³³³ Enacting legislation for the National Commissioner could reflect the first component of the Act, namely, that the National Commissioner not subject to any direction by the Minister or any other person in the performance of their duty.

The Children Act 2004* (UK) provides that the Children's Commissioner is "not to be regarded as the servant or agent of the Crown or as enjoying any status, immunity or privilege of the Crown"³³⁴ and prohibits a person who is the Children's Commissioner or a member of staff of the Children's Commissioner from being a member of parliament.³³⁵ Whilst this does not militate against any political influence, it does restrict members of government from directly holding office as the Children's Commissioner or a member of their office.

- (a) Tenure:³³⁶ The enabling legislation should specify a clear term of appointment and must contain an independent and objective dismissal process.

Certainty in the term of appointment and the grounds upon which the National Commissioner may be dismissed are essential to promoting stability, predictability and independence in the role. As a general proposition, the GANHRI recommends an appointment term for decision-makers within a NHRI of between three to seven years.³³⁷ An overview of the terms of appointment for the Commissioner models considered in our review are at Table 1 below. The majority of Australian Commissioners are appointed for terms of 5 years and are eligible for reappointment. International Commissioner appointments range from 5 years to 7 years. We consider a term of between 5 to 7 years to be an appropriate period for the National Commissioner.

- (b) Recruitment.³³⁸ The National Commissioner should be legislatively empowered to determine the staffing structure and the skills required to fulfil its mandate, with staff recruited according to an open, transparent and merits-based selection process. In practice, this may require public advertisement of available roles and their associated criteria.

The Children's Commissioner for England (UK) is entitled to appoint any staff considered necessary to assist in carrying out their functions.³³⁹ The Commissioner has the power to determine the terms and conditions of such employment, promoting the independence of the Office of the Children's Commissioner.³⁴⁰ In practice, the recruitment process appears to be open, transparent and merit-based. All staff roles are advertised on the Commissioner website. The advertisements clearly set out the required skills and experience for the role.³⁴¹

6.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs—The National Commissioner shall be adequately funded, with its own staff and premises in order to operation independently of government.³⁴²

In order to comply with best practice, funding for any proposed commissioner model should satisfy the following requirements:

- (a) Adequacy of funding: State funding should be sufficient to allow the National Commissioner to fund its mandated activities, maintain an accessible office, and operate and manage staff.
- (b) Source of funding: the National Commissioner should receive public funds through a mechanism that is not under direct government control (e.g. through Parliament). Funding from external sources, such as private donors, should not compose the core funding of the National Commissioner and the National Commissioner should be free to raise funds from external sources without being disqualified from receiving public funds.
- (c) Allocation of funding: The National Commissioner should have complete autonomy to allocate its budget in accordance with its mandate.
- (d) Financial accountability: The National Commissioner is nevertheless obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies of the State.

For example, the Queensland Family & Child Commission holds autonomy over the use of its budget, subject only to the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies of the state and in particular, to the Financial Accountability Act 2009 (Qld) and the Statutory Bodies Financial Arrangements Act 1982 (Qld).³⁴³

It is difficult to determine whether a commissioner's funding is adequate for carrying out its statutory functions. However, one method for assessing the adequacy of a commissioner's funding is to conduct a budget per child review. In 2010, the Department for Education in the United Kingdom conducted an independent review of the Office of the Children's Commissioner (UK). That review noted the importance of a budget per child analysis, stating that it "... determines the extent to which the [Commissioner] can raise its profile with children and young people and engage with local or individual issues".³⁴⁴ The review set out an analysis table, comparing the total budget of various international children's commissioners with the population numbers in those jurisdictions, in order to determine a "budget per child" for comparison.

For the purposes of preparing this options paper, we have followed a similar approach, comparing the available budgetary data, where available, from each of the Australian commissioners against 2018 data identifying the total number of children and young people per jurisdiction and population projections for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children aged 0 - 17 years as at 30 June 2020 (as provided by the Australia Bureau of Statistics).³⁴⁵

We have prepared the following Table 2 for the purpose of demonstrating that a budget per child analysis is an effective framework for funding comparisons. We note that the table is subject to several limitations, including that:

- (a) The Commissioners considered below are limited to those whose budgets were readily identifiable by way of desktop review. Often, a Commissioner's funding was not reported as a separate line item in State budgets, annual reports or similar, and was instead included in broader Department-level budgets. For example, the budget for the Children and Young People Commissioner (ACT) is reported as part of the Justice and Community Service Directorate, with no separate line item for the Commissioner.
- (b) The Commissioners all have a broader mandate than Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. We have provided a "budget per child" analysis and identified the approximate number of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people per jurisdiction. This allows for an indication of the funding range as across the States and Territories. In the context of a desktop review conducted primarily from a legal perspective, we were unable to determine the effectiveness of a particular Commissioner's funding, as this question requires a detailed understanding of the manner in which a Commissioner translates funding into real-world impact. We suggest that SNAICC use the below analysis as a conceptual framework for further conversations around budgetary requirements with communities, stakeholders and Government.
- (c) Some commissioners have a restricted mandate which does not cover every child in the State.³⁴⁶ Additionally, some commissioners have a broad mandate which covers children or young people outside of the 0–17-year age bracket used within the analysis table. Where this is the case, we have footnoted the relevant restriction or age bracket for reference.
- (d) The ABS data available does not allow for a direct comparison of population groups. Population data for children in the various jurisdictions is available in the 0 to 19-year range, whilst Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people population projections are available in the 0 to 17-year range.
- (e) Some States have additional advisory bodies with similar or overlapping mandates in regard to children and young persons.³⁴⁷ This may impact the total reported budget used within the analysis, as some Commissioners share a budget with these advisory bodies, while others maintain a separate budget. Where this is the case, we have footnoted the relevant advisory body and the budgetary implications in the analysis table.
- (f) This analysis is completed on the basis of a desktop review, based on the best possible materials available at the time of writing. As such, the analysis table is necessarily restricted by the transparency and accuracy of the annual financial reporting of each Commissioner and/or the line items set out in the relevant State's budgetary documents.

³⁴⁸ The Children's Commissioner (NT) has a mandate which is largely limited to "vulnerable children", as defined in s 7 of the Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT).

³⁵¹ This budget also includes funding for the Guardian for Children and Young People (SA). The Guardian advocates for, monitors and promotes the best interests of children and young people under the guardianship of the Minister.

³⁵² It is not clear from the Commissioner's annual report whether this budget comprises of public funding only, or whether private donors have also been taken into account in this reported figure.

6.11 Annual reports of NHRIs—The National Commissioner shall submit to government, parliament and any other competent body, reports on any matter concerning the promotion and protection of human rights.³⁵³

- (a) Annual reports: Annual reports should provide a regular audit of the Government's performance, achievements of the National Commissioner and serve as a forum for recommendations.

The proposed Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada will be required to report annually on its activities, investigations and inquiries, all proposed legislation as impacting upon children and young people within the jurisdiction, Canada's compliance with the Convention and any matters affecting the rights and well-being of children and youth.³⁵⁴

- (b) Publication and distribution: All reports should be publicised, widely distributed and publicly available. To facilitate transparency, the annual reports should include financial records and employment data.

The majority of the Australian State and Territory Commissioners' annual reports are made available on their respective websites.

The Commissioner for Children and Young People (SA) is required to produce annual reports for the Minister, which the Minister must table to both Houses of Parliament within 6 sitting days. The Commissioner's annual reports must set out the performance of the Commissioner's functions during the preceding financial year and are made available on its website.

- (c) Engagement with legislature: All reports should be tabled with the legislature, with a requirement to discuss and consider any recommendations.

The Queensland Family & Child Commission tables all annual reports before the Legislative Assembly,³⁵⁵ whilst the Tasmanian Commissioner for Children and Young People tables its annual report before both Houses of Parliament and releases its report on its website.³⁵⁶

7 Challenges to implementation and effectiveness

This section sets out the challenges to implementation and effectiveness that have been identified across the various Commissioner models reviewed. In particular, our review identified the following requirements of the Paris Principles as lacking across the various Commissioner models:

- (a) clear mandate in the relevant Commissioner's establishing legislation;
- (b) political impartiality or autonomy from government;
- (c) transparency in appointment / selection of Commissioners and/or decision-making bodies;
- (d) quasi-judicial competency and complaints handling powers; and
- (e) adequate funding.

Further detail in respect of each of these issues is set out below.

7.2 Lack of clear mandate in establishing legislation

South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People

While the role of the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People is enshrined in its establishing legislation, the role of the South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People is not, and its functions and powers are not clearly defined. The current South Australian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People, April Lawrie, has criticised the lack of legislative enshrinement, stating that she was unable to investigate “pressing systemic issues” because the role had not been legislated for by the State Government.³⁵⁷ Additionally, we note that while the role of the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People is currently filled by an identified Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person with appropriate qualifications, knowledge and experience, this does not appear to be a mandated requirement for the position.

Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People

The role of the Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People is not enshrined in legislation, and its functions and powers are not clearly defined. While the role is currently filled by an identified Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person with appropriate qualifications, knowledge and experience, this is not a mandated requirement for the position. By way of contrast, the role of the Victorian Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People is enshrined in legislation and reasonably clear. Additionally, the interaction of the two Commissioner roles is also unclear, with some resources suggesting they are side-by-side roles and others suggesting that the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People reports to the Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People.³⁵⁸

7.3 Lack of political impartiality or autonomy from government

National Children's Commissioner

The Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission.³⁵⁹ However, the Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) does provide that the National Children's Commissioner must not engage in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister,³⁶⁰ which might operate to prevent a member of parliament from holding the role of National Children's Commissioner at the same time.

³⁵⁷ Stephanie Richards, “Give me power to investigate, commissioner tells Govt”, inDaily, published 15 November 2019. available at <<https://indaily.com.au/news/2019/11/15/give-me-power-to-investigate-commissioner-tells-govt/>>.

³⁶⁰ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46MH.

ACT Children and Young People Commissioner

The Human Rights Commission Act 2005 (ACT) does not explicitly restrict participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commissioner or Commission.

Queensland Family & Child Commission

The Family and Child Commission Act 2014 (Qld) does not explicitly restrict the appointment of government representatives or members of parliament, or representatives of government agencies, to roles and function that, or where their advice and cooperation is necessary to, assist the Queensland Family & Child Commission in fulfilling its mandate.³⁶¹

Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People

The Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission.³⁶² However, the Act does provide that the relevant Commissioner ceases to hold office if they “nominate for election for the Parliament of Victoria or of the Commonwealth or of another State or a Territory of the Commonwealth”.³⁶³

Western Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People

The Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) does not require the Commissioner to be independent from government. Further, with the authorisation of the Governor, the Commissioner may hold another “office of profit or trust”.³⁶⁴

eSafety Commissioner

The Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 (Cth) does not explicitly restrict participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission. Further, the Minister is entitled to give directions, by legislative instrument, to the Commissioner about the performance of the Commissioner’s functions and exercise of their powers.³⁶⁵ While the Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 (Cth) states that such directions ‘must be of a general nature only’, it also provides that the Commissioner must comply with any such direction.³⁶⁶

We note that the establishing Acts of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner, the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada, and the Western Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People do not explicitly ban political representatives from serving as Commissioner.

Additionally, of particular concern across multiple Commissioner roles was the ability for the relevant Commissioner to be removed for subjective or insufficiently transparent reasons, or at the whim of government. For example, while the Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) provides some functional immunity for the Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People, the removal powers provide the Governor in Council with some discretion – which may undermine the independence of the Commissioners.³⁶⁷ Similarly, the Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 (Cth) allows the responsible Minister to remove the Commissioner for ‘misbehaviour’. Arguably, this gives the Minister a broad removal power (i.e. this power could be exercised subjectively or in respect of ‘misbehaviour’ not in the course of their role as Commissioner).

7.4 Lack of transparency in selection and appointment process

Our review identified insufficient transparency in the appointment and selection of Commissioners and decision-making bodies for numerous Commissioner roles.

National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner

The selection process for the National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner is not particularly transparent in the Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth). The Commissioner is appointed by the Governor-General under section 46B of the Act, and the only requirement is that the Minister be satisfied the person has significant experience in the community life of Aboriginal people or Torres Strait Islanders.

ACT Children and Young People Commissioner

The Human Rights Commission Act 2005 (ACT) sets out that the ACT Executive appoints the Commissioner but the appointment process is not transparent.³⁶⁸ The ACT Executive only has to be satisfied that the person has the experience or expertise necessary to exercise the member's functions.³⁶⁹ Additionally, the process for how the Commissioner hires their staff is not transparent.

Queensland Family & Child Commission

The Principal Commissioner of the Queensland Family & Child Commission has discretion to appoint anyone that they are satisfied is "appropriately qualified",³⁷⁰ so long as at least one member of each advisory council is an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.³⁷¹ The Principal Commissioner also has discretion regarding the length of term an advisory council member should serve, and how the advisory council itself will function.³⁷²

Tasmanian Commissioner for Children and Young People

The appointment process of the Tasmanian Commissioner for Children and Young People is unclear in the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas), other than to specify that the Governor on recommendation of the Minister for Human Services, is to appoint the Commissioner.³⁷³

Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People

The appointment process is not transparent for either the Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People.³⁷⁴ The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, appoint a person as the relevant Commissioner.³⁷⁵ The only clear requirement is that the person is "qualified for appointment as a Commissioner because of his or her knowledge and experience".³⁷⁶

Western Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People

The Commissioner is appointed by the Premier of Western Australia.³⁷⁷ The Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) only prescribes that the Premier, before making a recommendation, advertises "throughout Australia for expressions of interest from people with professional qualifications and substantive experience in matters affecting children" and "consult with the leader of any political party with at least 2 members in either House".³⁷⁸ The Act does not further prescribe how the Premier should exercise its appointment discretion.

National Rural Health Commissioner

The establishing legislation for the National Rural Health Commissioner specifies general terms of appointment, but otherwise the terms of appointment and the role are determined by the responsible Minister. The only clear criteria of appointment is that the Commissioner has experience in rural health.³⁷⁹

Additionally, and of particular relevance, commentary from the Council for the Care of Children noted in 2015 that there has been little formal recognition of the need to include children in the selection process of children's commissioners across Australia.³⁸⁰ The appointment process for the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People is noteworthy in this respect, as the recruitment scheme involves, inter alia, a selection panel of up to 5 persons (2 of whom must be young people) to propose the appointment of an application to the position,³⁸¹ in addition to the inclusion of an exercise in the interview process designed to assess the applicant's ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people.³⁸² Similarly, while not specifically formalised in its establishing act, the selection process for the position of the inaugural National Children's Commissioner considered children's views about the criteria and characteristics required for the role.³⁸³

7.5 Lack of quasi-judicial competency and complaints-handling powers

Victorian Commission for Children and Young People

The Victorian Commission for Children and Young People does not have complaints-handling powers. In fact, the Commission's website and resources expressly state that the Commission is not a formal complaints handling body and will refer complainants on to the Department of Health and Human Services or Victorian Ombudsman (depending on the complaint).³⁸⁴ While the Commission has own-motion powers of inquiry, the inquiries are limited to specific issues, and the power to compel access to information during an inquiry is limited to specific Departments and services.

Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada

While the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada holds the power to inquire into any matter related to the Commissioner's mandate, including both individual and systemic issues,³⁸⁵ the Commissioner does not hold any power to hear or resolve individual complaints. Additionally, whilst the Commissioner is empowered to provide recommendations on a wide range of issues pertaining to children, the Commissioner has limited mandated follow up obligations.

7.6 Inadequate funding

National Children's Commissioner

There is some suggestion that the National Children's Commissioner does not receive adequate funding. This is particularly difficult to assess given that the National Children's Commissioner does not receive funding as a separate line item, but instead the Australian Human Rights Commission receives funding for the National Children's Commissioner. However, we note that in the 2019 financial year, the Australian Human Rights Commission received $16,709,000 from the Government and $10,100,000 from own-source income against total expenses of $27,994,000 resulting in a deficit attributable to the Australian Government of $1,185,000.³⁸⁶

National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner

The funding of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner is not separate from that of the Australia Human Rights Commission. As noted above, in the 2019 financial year, the Australian Human Rights Commission's expenses exceeded Government funding. It can thus be inferred that the funding of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner is inadequate.

Northern Territory Children's Commissioner

It is notable that in the report of the Royal Commission into the Detention and Protection of Children in the Northern Territory tabled in Parliament on 17 November 2017, one of the findings was that the Office of the Children's Commissioner was under-resourced to perform its full range of statutory functions in relation to the care and protection of vulnerable children in the Northern Territory.³⁸⁷

Office of the Children's Commissioner (New Zealand)

While the New Zealand Children's Commissioner appears to receive an appropriate level of funding and has the power to allocate funding according to its priorities, it is worth noting that funding is at the discretion of the Minister for Social Development, which may be seen to be a departure from the Paris Principles.

8 Available commentary on existing models

This section sets out publicly available commentary on the various Commissioner models.

8.1 National Children's Commissioner (NCC)

The Bill digest for the Australian Human Rights Commission Amendment (National Children's Commissioner) Act 2012 (Cth)³⁸⁸ expressly recognised some criticisms of the proposed Bill.³⁸⁹

In addition, a number of public interest groups made submissions on the proposed Bill. These submissions made a number of recommendations on bettering the NCC role (none of which appear to have been implemented before the Bill was passed). In its inquiry report, the Standing Committee on Social Policy and Legal Affairs noted a number of general concerns raised in many of the submissions, including:

- (a) that the NCC should have specific regard to the rights of particularly vulnerable children, such as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children, children in immigration detention in Australia and children with disabilities;
- (b) that the NCC should have a positive duty to engage with children; and
- (c) that the list of international treaties to which the NCC must have regard should be extended.

The submissions of the Australian Children's Commissioners and Guardians, a group consisting of the children's commissioners from across Australia, provide further examples of recommendations with respect to the NCC, such as:³⁹⁰

- (a) that guiding principles should be included in the legislation to reinforce the Bill's underlying core beliefs (e.g. "this Act is to be administered under the principle that the best interests of children are paramount");
- (b) that the role of the NCC should not be confined to "examining existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments" but should also include the capacity to examine Commonwealth policies, programs and services; and
- (c) that a requirement for the NCC to take a lead role in making an independent submission to the UN Committee should be formally included in the legislation.

Furthermore, when the role of the NCC was first announced, a number of political bodies and children's advocates, including the Standing Committee on Social Policy and Legal Affairs,³⁹¹ called on the government to ensure that the AHRC's funding was sufficiently increased to ensure that the NCC could appropriately fulfil its functions.³⁹² A number of these bodies expressed particular concern that only $3.5 million had been allocated to the NCC for its first 4 years,³⁹³ with some noting that the state and territory commissioners received significantly more funding and that limited funding may render the NCC's establishment tokenistic.³⁹⁴ The AHRC itself expressed concerns that the funding would not be adequate to allow the NCC to engage in any substantial project work.³⁹⁵ Despite these concerns, it does not appear that funding was increased from the initial four-year $3.5 million allocation before the Bill was passed.³⁹⁶

8.2 Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People (Vic) and the Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People (Vic)

The Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory noted that the Commission and the Commissioner for Children and Young People do not have an individual complaints resolution and investigatory function (unlike the equivalent bodies in the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory).³⁹⁷

In 2015, the Council for the Care of Children noted that there has been little formal recognition of the need to include children in the selection process of children's commissioners across Australia.³⁹⁸

8.3 Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People (SA)

The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People's Inaugural Annual Report states that "community expectation is that the role of Commissioner be legislated with the necessary powers to effectively improve better outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people."³⁹⁹ Legislating for the role of the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People is the third recommendation in the Inaugural Report.⁴⁰⁰ However, the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People continues not to be legislatively enshrined. Commissioner April Lawrie has criticised the structure of the Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People on the basis that she is unable to investigate "pressing systemic issues" because the role had not been legislated for by the State Government.⁴⁰¹

The SNAICC Family Matters website has expressed concerns that "the role and powers of the Aboriginal commissioner are not equivalent to the principal children's commissioner in the state."⁴⁰²

Additionally, a 2019 Report by SNAICC states:

"In an important positive move concerning partnership, the first SA Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People (CACYP) was appointed in the reporting period. While this represents significant progress, the CACYP has no independent powers in legislation yet, limiting the provision of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander systems oversight. There also remain no ACCO case management services, no commitment to a state peak body for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families, no

8.4 Children's Commissioner (NT)

Following the airing of "Australia's Shame" – a documentary featuring disturbing imagery and footage of children being abused while held in the Don Dale Juvenile Detention Centre in Darwin on 25 July 2016,⁴⁰⁴ the Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory was established by the Australian Government to inquire into and report upon failings in the child protection and youth detention systems of the Government of the Northern Territory. Its findings in relation to the Commissioner are:

- (a) it is constrained by a lack of general power to investigate matters of a systemic nature rather than individual complaints;⁴⁰⁵ and
- (b) it is under-resourced to perform its full range of stature functions.⁴⁰⁶

One of the most significant recommendations was that the Children's Commissioner Act (NT) be repealed and legislation passed establishing a Commission for Children and Young People, with jurisdiction for all children and young people in the Northern Territory. Under this recommendation, the Commission for Children and Young People would have two commissioners, one of whom would be an Aboriginal person, with wider powers of inspection.⁴⁰⁷

8.5 Commissioner for Children and Young People (WA)

No public criticisms have been made about the role of the Commissioner. However, the establishing Act was criticised as it did not follow the recommendation by the 2003 Gordon Inquiry into child sex abuse and violence in Aboriginal communities in Western Australia to establish a Deputy Children's Commissioner with responsibility for issues in relation to Aboriginal children.⁴⁰⁸

8.6 Children's Commissioner (New Zealand)

A 2017 article by then deputy opposition leader, Jacinda Ardern, stated that more funding and more independence is required for the Commissioner to function more effectively in the best interests of children in New Zealand in state care.⁴⁰⁹ Ardern was particularly critical of the fact that, while state run residences need better oversight due to issues with bullying and violence, the Commissioner was only able to visit every 18 months, which was seen to be insufficient.

There have also been growing calls to establish a Māori Children's Commissioner, most recently in the New Zealand media in 2019, as Māori children remain over-represented in state care, state abuse and youth detention.⁴¹⁰ The current Commissioner, Judge Andrew Becroft, supports the idea and has acknowledged gaps in the current structure of the Commission, as it does not embed a Māori voice, a Māori worldview or a Māori approach in legislation.

The Commissioner appointed a Chief Māori Advisor in 2019, responsible for supporting the Commissioner to advocate for improved outcomes for Māori children, as well as undertaking a project development role and scoping exercise for an Assistant Māori Children's Commissioner.⁴¹¹ The Commissioner has also stated his commitment to appointing an Assistant Māori Commissioner for Children, as:

- (a) it is crucial that the leadership structure of the Office contains and presents a clear Māori voice;
- (b) Māori children are disproportionately overrepresented in care and protection, and so are in greater need of advocacy and support for their welfare, rights and interests; and
- (c) it ensures the Commissioner's staff includes a leader who can support the Commissioner and his Māori staff in encouraging Oranga Tamariki to discharge their duty to Māori children, and to ensure a specific additional culturally appropriate focus on Māori children.⁴¹²

8.7 Children's Commissioner (UK)

Many of the criticisms made about the Children's Commissioner were addressed in the reforms made to the Children Act 2004 (UK) by the Children and Families Act 2014 (UK). These reforms involved an extensive consultation process and were directed at ensuring that the Children's Commissioner was human rights compliant.⁴¹³

However, there are several outstanding criticisms from UNICEF UK:

- (a) there should be a requirement for Ministers and public authorities to respond to the child rights impact assessments produced by the Children's Commissioner within a reasonable time frame;⁴¹⁴
- (b) the Children's Commissioner could also be given the power to provide a national sign-posting service for children where the Children's Commissioner could put children wishing to make a complaint in touch with the appropriate investigating authority;⁴¹⁵
- (c) UNICEF UK has criticised the fact that the Children's Commissioner is appointed by the executive branch, which is a body that the Children's Commissioner is responsible for monitoring. UNICEF UK suggests that the "better guarantee of independence" is appointment by Parliament. UNICEF further suggests that there should be requirements in terms of skills and experience as well as a wide advertisement of the position in order to ensure a transparent and competitive process,⁴¹⁶ and

- (d) to remove the threat of any financial control, funding should be removed from political control and be guaranteed over a given period.⁴¹⁷

8.8 Ombudsperson for Children (Norway)

There are limited English resources evidencing the impact of the Norwegian Ombudsman for children. A 1996 evaluation of the Ombudsman found that the Ombudsman was largely seen as being effective and that “many municipalities, as well as Parliament, had quickly accepted a number of proposals from the Ombudsman”.⁴¹⁸ Numerous survey participants also viewed the Ombudsman as an effective tool as protecting the rights of children while acting as a supportive tool for parents.⁴¹⁹

However, in ‘Lessons from Norway: The Children’s Ombudsman as a Voice for Children’, Gary Melton criticises the structure of an ‘Ombudsman’. Melton argues that the Ombudsman role is unconventional and particularly onerous on the individual because it operates without a board of constituents behind it. This is because the Ombudsman model is an individualistic model which assumes a ‘great person’ theory of social change, which presupposes that the role will be filled by ‘one person sufficiently talented and motivated who can really make a difference’. The Ombudsman therefore has a significant degree of control over its jurisdiction and power: “the barneombud must define the job and then find a means of fulfilling it”. This may limit accountability and create an issue of consistency as the Ombudsman changes after each tenure, particularly if the appointment criteria are ambiguous.⁴²⁰

Melton also criticises the ‘vagueness of the statutory authority’ for the Ombudsman. The discretionary powers of the Ombudsman are wide and the jurisdiction for its operation is broad. This allows for potentially ‘contrasting’ approaches to the Ombudsman role. From a statutory perspective, this raises issues of consistency and accountability.⁴²¹

9 Recommendations: Key requirements for a Proposed Model

The following table summarises the key requirements for the establishment of the National Commissioner for each element of the Paris Principles.

No.	Paris Principle	Key requirements for the National Commissioner
1)	The establishment of NHRIs	The National Commissioner should be established in a legislative text with sufficient detail to ensure a clear mandate and independence. This should include the National Commissioner's role, functions, powers, funding, lines of accountability, appointment mechanisms and term of office.
a)	Entrenched in law	The role of the National Commissioner should be formally established via standalone enacting federal legislation. The establishing legislation should clearly distinguish the National Commissioner from an agency of state, a non-government organisation or an ad hoc body.
b)	Mandate and powers	The establishing legislation should set out the National Commissioner's mandate and powers in sufficient detail.
c)	Appointment mechanisms	The establishing legislation should include complete, detailed and transparent provisions on the appointment mechanisms for the National Commissioner.
d)	Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)	If the National Commissioner is to be mandated to receive, consider or resolve complaints, the enacting legislation should also set out the necessary functions and powers required for the National Commissioner to adequately fulfil this mandate. For example, the National Commissioner should have the ability to receive complaints against both public and private bodies and, given the vulnerability of the target demographic, the National Commissioner should be empowered to receive complaints which have been filed on behalf of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children (with their consent).
2)	Human rights mandate	The National Commissioner should be legislatively empowered to both promote and protect the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia. In particular, the National Commissioner should be required to consider the implementation and promotion of rights stemming from the Convention and the Declaration.
a)	Competence and responsibilities	The National Commissioner's mandate should be broadly set out, such that it allows for a progressive and evolving understanding of human rights and applies to both public and private sectors. In terms of promotion, the legislation should empower the National Commissioner to freely address public opinion and raise public awareness about issues affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia. The legislation should further empower the National Commissioner to assess any matters affecting Aboriginal and

		Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia, and to make recommendations to public authorities in relation to these matters.
b)	Powers of inquiry and investigation	The National Commissioner should be empowered to conduct own-motion inquiries and investigations into any matter affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia, including any violations of the rights of those children. This function should be supported by powers to freely enter premises, inspect documents and examine individuals, both public and private.
c)	Functional immunity	The National Commissioner and their staff should be immune from civil and criminal liability for actions undertaken in good faith in their official capacity.
3)	Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments	The National Commissioner should actively promote the recognition and ratification of, and compliance with, relevant international human rights instruments. This would likely include the Convention and the Declaration.
4)	Interaction with the international human rights system	The National Commissioner should engage with and assist United Nations human rights bodies and monitor and promote the implementation of relevant recommendations originating from the human rights system as relevant to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people in Australia.
5)	Cooperation with other human rights bodies	The National Commissioner should develop, formalise and maintain working relationships with other domestic institutions established for the promotion and protection of the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people, for example SNAICC.
6)	Recommendations	The National Commissioner should provide annual and special reports into matters affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. These reports should be publicly available and tabled with parliament, with requirements that the issues identified in these reports be responded to in a timely manner. The National Commissioner should also be empowered to follow up on any action taken in response to the recommendations contained in its reports, including by publishing information on the measures taken by public and private entities.
7)	Ensuring pluralism	Consistent with best practice in self-determination the National Commissioner should be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person. The office of the National Commissioner should comprise staff representative of the diverse segments of Australian society, with consideration of gender, ethnicity and minority status.

No.	Paris Principle	Key requirements for the National Commissioner
8)	Selection & appointment of decision-making body	The enshrining legislation should set out a clear, transparent and participatory selection and appointment process for the National Commissioner, as well as for any accompanying decision-making or advisory bodies (i.e. committees and councils). Pre-determined and objective criteria for the National Commissioner role should be made publicly available and vacancies in the role should be advertised broadly so as to maximise the number of potential applicants. In particular, the selection and appointment process should ensure that job listings are accessible by all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities. Consistent with best practice in self-determination, the legislation should also mandate that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people be involved in the selection process for the National Commissioner. In addition, the selection process should be designed to assess the applicant's ability to engage, communicate and interact with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people.
9)	Restriction on political representatives on NHRIs (independence from government)	The National Commissioner should be independent from Government and free from political interference. The independence of the National Commissioner from government and other political influences should form part of the National Commissioner's enacting legislation. The enacting legislation should restrict the involvement of political representatives in the National Commissioner's decision-making process. Where such involvement is unavoidable, the legislation should make clear that such persons are unable to participate in the National Commissioner's role in any more than an advisory capacity.
a)	Tenure	The grounds for dismissal of the National Commissioner should be both limited and clearly set out in the enshrining legislation. The dismissal process should involve more than just the sole discretion of the appointing authorities. Best practice suggests that the dismissal should be further supported by a decision of an independent body, such as Parliament.
b)	Recruitment	The National Commissioner should be empowered, and adequately resourced, to select staff and determine the staffing structure of his or her office. The selection process for the National Commissioner's staff should be open, transparent and merit-based. The National Commissioner should not be required to accept staff assigned by Government.
10)	Adequacy of funding	The National Commissioner should have both financial independence and adequate resources.

No.	Paris Principle	Key requirements for the National Commissioner
		In terms of financial independence, the National Commissioner should receive public funding through a mechanism that is not under the direct control of Government, such as through Parliament. The public funds allocated to the National Commissioner should be denoted as a separate line in the public budget and the National Commissioner should be entitled to determine how such funds are used. In addition to public funds, the National Commissioner should be permitted to raise funds from other sources (e.g. private donors) without being disqualified from receiving public funding or having the offices' public funding reduced. The National Commissioner's funding and financial probity should be transparent and easily assessable (e.g. through regular financial reporting and independent audits). In terms of adequate resourcing, the National Commissioner should receive all funds necessary to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ▪ perform his or her mandated activities; ▪ employ and remunerate staff; ▪ maintain an accessible office; and ▪ establish a well-functioning communications system. The National Commissioner should also receive remuneration equivalent to other individuals with similar responsibilities in other independent statutory offices (such any comparable national commissioners).
11)	Annual reports of NHRIs	The National Commissioner should be mandated to publish annual and special reports, highlighting any key developments of the office and setting out the National Commissioner's opinions, recommendations and proposals with respect to matters affecting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people. The reports should contain sufficient detail for the National Commissioner's effectiveness to be assessed. These reports should be made publicly available, including to remote communities, and should be discussed and considered by the legislature. Preferably, the National Commissioner should be entitled to table these reports in Parliament directly, as opposed to going through the Executive.

Question	Summary response
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The role of the CCYP is relatively clear under the Act and the CCYP's mandate is expressed in broad terms. However, the functions and powers of the CACYP are not clearly defined. • The Act provides the CCYP with some functional immunity and guarantee of tenure, including a due process that must be followed in order to terminate the CCYP's appointment. • The Act does not set out the terms and conditions of office for the CCYP and, in the absence of any enshrining legislation, the terms and conditions of the CACYP's office are even less clear. • The role of the CACYP is currently filled by an identified Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person, however this does not appear to be a mandated requirement for the position. • The appointment process is not sufficiently transparent for either the CACYP or the CCYP (albeit there is a recruitment scheme provided for in the Regulations for the CCYP, which involves children and young people in the recruitment process).⁴²⁸ • The tenure for the CACYP is comparatively short (three years in comparison to the seven-year initial term / maximum ten-year term if re-appointed of the CCYP). • The CCYP and CACYP do not appear to have complaints-handling powers. However, the CCYP has own-motion powers of inquiry, including the power to compel access to information. The Act imposes penalties for non-compliance. • The CCYP and CACYP both describe their roles as being underpinned by the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, and the commissioners may have regard to "any relevant international human rights instrument". The CACYP also refers to the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People. • Because the CACYP is not a statutory role the CACYP is not included in a regular meeting of all South Australian statutory oversight bodies convened by the CCYP. The CACYP has independently reached out to the Guardian for Children and Young People and the Ombudsman's Office about complaints made to the CACYP by or on behalf of individual children and young people, where these complaints require investigation with powers that CACYP does not have. The CACYP has been invited to participate and regularly participates in the Australian and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG) meetings and regularly meets with the Aboriginal Children's Commissioners in Victoria and Queensland. • In practice, the CCYP and CACYP publish a wide range of information on their websites, making that information publicly accessible. • The annual reporting requirements of CCYP are closely aligned with the GANHRI General Observations. • The CACYP is not adequately resourced. There was a three year budget allocation to the CACYP in the 2017-18 budget which is administered by the CCYP. Unlike the CCYP who has adequate budget to fulfil the statutory role, the CACYP who is not appointed under statute does not have sufficient resources to fulfil the role according to the Paris Principles,

The Commissioner promotes and advocates for the rights, development and well-being of all children and young people in South Australia. B. The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and The Commissioner for Children and Young People in South Australia: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

Note: As a general and introductory statement, the following sections concentrate primarily on the CCYP. The CACYP, having been established under the Constitution Act 1934 (SA), as opposed to being legislated for within the Act, is more challenging to analyse as many of the available comparators are less readily apparent or available.

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs⁴⁹⁷

Summary: in respect of the CCYP, the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs. The CACYP does not comply with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs.

Entrenched in law⁴⁹⁸

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.⁴⁹⁹

The Act sets out the CCYP's mandate and powers,⁵⁰⁰ including the CCYP's lines of accountability and independence.⁵⁰¹ However, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the CCYP holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor.⁵⁰²

As is noted at the outset of this section, despite having been established pursuant to the Constitution Act, the CACYP's mandate is not enshrined in that Act, or in a standalone Act.

As a result of the powers and functions of the CCYP being contained within the Act, any modifications to those power and functions require the approval of Parliament. The same cannot be said for the functions of the CACYP.

⁴⁹⁷ See especially GANHRI General Observation, G.O. 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

⁴⁹⁸ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

⁴⁹⁹ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

⁵⁰⁰ See especially Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 14.

⁵⁰¹ Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) ss 7(2), 8.

⁵⁰² Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 8(1).

Mandate and powers⁵⁰³

The Act broadly sets out the functions of the CCYP,⁵⁰⁴ including:

- to promote and advocate for the rights and interests of all children and young people in South Australia;
- to promote the participation by children and young people in the making of decisions that affect their lives;
- to advise, and make recommendations to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;
- to inquire into matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level (whether a Governmental system or otherwise);
- to assist in ensuring that the State, as part of the Commonwealth, satisfies its international obligations in respect of children and young people;
- to undertake or commission research into topics related to children and young people;
- to prepare and publish reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level; and
- such other functions as may be conferred on the Commissioner by or under the Act or any other Act.

Section 14(2) of the Act provides that the CCYP should consult with and engage children and young people in the performance of functions under the Act, and particularly those whose ability to make their views known is limited for some reason.

The appointment of the CACYP under the Constitution Act excludes the granting of powers and functions that would usually occur if appointed under a standalone Act.⁵⁰⁵ However, the CACYP's inaugural report provides that the CACYP's functions include:⁵⁰⁶

- developing culturally safe and informed strategies and promoting Aboriginal voice with regard for the safety and wellbeing of all Aboriginal children and young people;
- promoting the wellbeing of Aboriginal children, their culture, and both their rights to Aboriginality and indigeneity (underpinned by the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People); and
- addressing systemic policy and practice barriers to improving outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people under 18 years of age in the areas of health and wellbeing, education, youth justice and child protection.

⁵⁰⁷ See GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

The Act provides that the CCYP is appointed by the Governor, provided that the Statutory Officers Committee⁵⁰⁸ has approved the proposed appointment after receiving a referral from the Minister.⁵⁰⁹

The Act does not contain any fixed experience or qualification requirements for the CCYP role, which might suggest that the appointment mechanisms for the CCYP are not sufficiently transparent. However, the Act provides that the Governor may establish a scheme for the recruitment of the CCYP (by regulation) and the recruitment of the Commissioner must comply with that scheme.⁵¹⁰

The Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Regulations 2017 (SA)⁵¹¹ came into operation in 2017 and regulation 6(1) of the provides for a scheme of recruitment for the CCYP (which is set out in detail at Item 1.8 below). However, the regulation does not provide any further information as to the qualifications of experience required, and there is no requirement for the CCYP to be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person.

The current CCYP was selected through a process involving children and young people.⁵¹²

In respect of the CACYP position, the recruitment process, and the qualifications and experience required for the role and, are not transparent. Those requirements are likely to be set out in the position description at the time of recruitment and, given the absence of a governing statute, are likely to change from time to time. The current CACYP, April Lawrie, is an Aboriginal woman who heralds from the Mirning and Kokatha peoples in South Australia.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)⁵¹³

The CCYP does not have a specific complaints-handling function under the Act and, in fact, is prevented from conducting inquiries into isolated incidents.⁵¹⁴ However, the CCYP may conduct an inquiry into a matter of a systemic nature as a consequence of becoming aware of a matter affecting a particular child of young person.⁵¹⁵

Therefore, the CCYP has quasi-judicial competence in the broad sense, as it has the power to hold inquiries (with the powers of a Royal Commission⁵¹⁶), gather information compulsorily⁵¹⁷ and publish reports, including the ability to table the report directly with Parliament in certain circumstances.⁵¹⁸ Furthermore:

- the CCYP (or the Guardian) may, on behalf of a child or young person, make a complaint in respect of an administrative act or a prescribed child protection complaint to the Ombudsman;⁵¹⁹ and
- the CCYP (or the Guardian) may make a complaint to the Health and Community Services Complaints Commissioner on behalf of a child or young person, or a class of children or young people, in respect of a ground referred to in the Health and Community Services Complaints Act 2004 (SA).⁵²⁰

The CCYP's 2018-19 Annual Report indicates that the CCYP received and responded to a total of 34 enquiries into matters concerning potential rights protection issues and the nature of the enquiries included filing complaints about government and non-government community bodies and organisations in contact with young people.⁵²¹

With regards to the CACYP's powers, the CACYP's Inaugural Report indicated that the Commissioner "[a]ddressed 15 individual advocacy cases involving children's matters in either regional or metropolitan Adelaide, South Australia".⁵²² Therefore, while the CACYP does not have a statutory mandate to deal with complaints, this evidence of the work of the CACYP in the first year of operation indicates that the role has been considered to encompass individual advocacy.

1.2 Human rights mandate⁵²³

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of the CCYP's human rights mandate. The CACYP is largely not compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of its human rights mandate (as a result of being established without a governing statute).

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.⁵²⁴ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).⁵²⁵

Competence and responsibilities⁵²⁶

Both the CCYP and CACYP are vested with the competence to promote and protect human rights. The Act requires each State authority, in carrying out its functions or exercising its powers, to protect, respect and seek to give effect to the rights set out from time to time in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and in any other relevant international human rights instruments affecting children and young people.⁵²⁷ State authorities are defined in such a way that encompasses both the CCYP and the CACYP.⁵²⁸ In this regard, both the CCYP and CACYP are obliged to promote and protect human rights through the Act. However, only the CCYP has a legislative mandate with specific statutory functions to promote and protect human rights.

Powers of investigation and inquiry

In addition to the functions set out in the sections above, the CCYP has own-motion powers to conduct inquiries into:⁵²⁹

⁵²⁰ Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Act 2016 (SA) s 43.

⁵²¹ South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People, Annual Report 2018/2019 (Report, 2019) 56, available at <<https://www.ccyp.com.au/wp-content/uploads/2019/11/201909-2019-Annual-Report-%C6%92-web.pdf>>.

- the policies, practices and procedures of a State authority or authorities as they relate to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people generally, or a particular group of children and young people; or
- any other matter declared by the regulations.

However, there are some limitations on the scope of the inquiry powers afforded to the CCYP. The CCYP may only conduct inquiries if the CCYP suspects that:⁵³⁰

- the matter raises an issue of particular significance to children and young people;
- the matter is of a systemic nature, rather than being limited to an isolated incident; and
- it is in the public interest to conduct the inquiry.

The CCYP (or Guardian) also has the power to give written notice requiring a specified person to provide such information or documents as are reasonably required for the performance of their functions under the Act.⁵³¹ The person does not have to be a State authority or an employee or officer of a State employee. A person who fails to comply with such notice is guilty of an offence under the Act (maximum penalty $10,000).⁵³² This compulsory information gathering power is limited to the production of documents or provision of information (i.e. does not extend to the ability to inspect premises).⁵³³

In addition, the CCYP is empowered to provide an immediate report to Parliament on any matter related to the CCYP's functions under the Act if satisfied the matter is of significant importance to the safety or wellbeing of children and young people.⁵³⁴

The CACYP, despite the absence of statutory mandate, nevertheless appears to achieve a number of the 'promotion' of human rights aspects, such as education, training, advising, public outreach and advocacy.⁵³⁵ One of the functions set out in the CACYP's inaugural report is the promotion of the wellbeing of Aboriginal children, their culture, and both their rights to Aboriginality and indigeneity (underpinned by the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People).⁵³⁶

It is the 'protection' of human rights function that appears most compromised by the absence of statutory mandate for the CACYP – functions and powers for monitoring, inquiring, investigating and reporting on human rights violations.⁵³⁷ While one of the functions set out in the CACYP's report entails addressing systemic policy and practice barriers to improving outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people,⁵³⁸ the CACYP has recently called on the SA Government to give her powers, noting that without defined legislated powers she is unable to conduct inquiries or formal investigations into issues brought to her office's attention.⁵³⁹

Without investigative powers, the CACYP is not able to rely on the co-operation from agencies when seeking information about matters, especially where there is suspicion human rights abuses may be occurring in child protection, youth justice, education or health. This is compounded by a lack of adequate resources to undertake the role, as well as a lack of any requirement for the Guardian or CCYP to refer matters to the CACYP.

The CCYP has undertaken a number of projects that have resulted in reports being provided to Parliament. An example is the CCYP's Bullying Project, which was developed as a result of a Listening Tour with children and young people conducted by the CCYP in 2017.⁵⁴⁰ One of the top five priorities for the CCYP role based on responses provided by the children and young people consulted in the Listening Tour was for the CCYP to "help stop bullying".⁵⁴¹ In response, Commissioner Helen Connolly established the "Bullying Project" to understand the nature of the issue – in the Commissioner's words "I wanted to be clear about what 'it' is they wanted me to stop".⁵⁴² The Bullying Project Report details recommendations from children and young people based on the CCYP's consultations,⁵⁴³ findings that the CCYP thought have policy implications for the development of an anti-bullying strategy for SA,⁵⁴⁴ and includes an Appendix comprising research on the jurisdictional legal responses to bullying in other countries, including a summary of the laws that cover bullying conduct in SA and the Commonwealth.⁵⁴⁵ The Bullying Project Report was presented to the South Australian Parliament. Following the release of the Report, the CCYP has continued the work to reduce bullying and in 2020 is undertaking a comprehensive consultation across sporting codes to develop child-designed bullying prevention initiatives to build respectful and inclusive sporting events.⁵⁴⁶

No examples of investigations or inquiries were identified for the CACYP since its commencement, given the structure of the establishment of the role through the Constitution Act and lack of any statutory role or power to investigate or inquire into matters.

The CACYP's Inaugural Report details the work done by the CACYP in the 'Be Seen. Be Heard. Flourish.' community engagement process, which occurred between April and October 2019. The initiative involved "Youth Forums" and "Community Conversation Forums".⁵⁴⁷ The 'Be Seen. Be Heard. Functional immunity⁵⁵¹

The Act grants the CCYP, and some of those involved in the CCYP's functions, with express protections, privileges and immunities.⁵⁵² For example:

- no liability attaches to the CCYP (or the Guardian, a member of the Committee, a member of the Council or any other person) for any act or omission done in good faith in the exercise, or purported exercise, of powers or functions under the Act or any other act;⁵⁵³
- in conducting an inquiry under the Act,⁵⁵⁴ the CCYP has the same protection, privileges and immunities as a Judge of the Supreme Court;⁵⁵⁵
- a person who provides information or a document to an inquiry has the same protection, privileges and immunities as a witness in proceedings before the Supreme Court;⁵⁵⁶
- a legal practitioner who represents a person in connection with an inquiry has the same protection, privileges, immunities and obligations as counsel involved in Supreme Court proceedings.⁵⁵⁷

These are important procedural immunities and, in being consistent with the standard for Supreme Court proceedings, accord with traditional procedural considerations.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments. The CACYP is largely not compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.⁵⁵⁸ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.⁵⁵⁹

⁵⁵⁸ GANHRI General Observations, G. O. 1.3.

⁵⁵⁹ GANHRI General Observations, G. O. 1.3.

The Act defines a reference to the “rights” of children and young people as including a reference to rights recognised in accordance with statutory and common law, rights as set out in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and rights set out in any other relevant international human rights instruments.⁵⁶⁰ This broad definition of rights is in accordance with the comments in the General Observations about the need to promote a progressive definition of human rights.⁵⁶¹

There is no express obligation in the Act to encourage ratification of or accession to international human rights instruments. However, the CCYP is empowered to:

- to promote and advocate for the rights and interests of all children and young people in South Australia;⁵⁶²
- to advise, and make recommendations to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;⁵⁶³
- to assist in ensuring that the State, as part of the Commonwealth, satisfies its international obligations in respect of children and young people;⁵⁶⁴ and
- to prepare and publish reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level.⁵⁶⁵

Arguably, these functions could be used to promote discussion about any laws, policies, practices and services that are inconsistent with the requirements of international human rights standards, particularly in relation to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level.

The CCYP has a limited history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters. For instance, in February 2020, the CCYP invoked articles of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and UN General Comment No. 24 in its submissions to the SA Attorney Generals Department with regard to raising the age of criminal responsibility.⁵⁶⁶

In contrast, there is little evidence of the CACYP consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters. This could in part be due to the fact that the CACYP role has not been established for long but this is largely due to the lack of legislated mandate for the CACYP.

One of the key messages raised by Aboriginal children and young people who attended the CACYP’s forums in its first year of operation was that they felt the distinct rights afforded to them by the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples are under threat.⁵⁶⁷

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the CCYP is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system, the CACYP is partially compliant with those same principles.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.⁵⁶⁸ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.⁵⁶⁹

One of the express functions of the CCYP is to assist in ensuring that the State satisfies its international obligations in respect of children and young people.⁵⁷⁰ Furthermore, the most recent Reports of both the CCYP and the CACYP make it clear that the work and functions of those bodies is underpinned by the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and,⁵⁷¹ in the case of the CACYP, the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.⁵⁷²

There are some examples of the CACYP and CCYP interacting with the international human rights system in practice. In addition to the example listed at Item 1.3 above, these include:

- in August 2018, the CACYP authored and co-presented a paper at the 5th International Indigenous Voices in Social Work Practice Conference in Taiwan;⁵⁷³
- in the 2018-19 reporting year, the CCYP increased awareness of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and the work of the South Australian Commissioner for Children and Young People through 6 formal presentations to key adult stakeholders;⁵⁷⁴
- in May 2019, the CCYP released a comment to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child in regard to children's rights in relation to the digital environment;⁵⁷⁵ and
- in June 2019, the CCYP partnered with UN Youth SA to deliver The Poverty Summit, which workshopped ideas on how poverty could be alleviated, if not eradicated, in South Australia by 2030 in line with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal 2030.⁵⁷⁶

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: in practice, both the CCYP & CACYP largely comply with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.⁵⁷⁷ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.⁵⁷⁸

While the Act does not expressly mandate cooperation with other entities, in practice, the CCYP maintains consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.⁵⁷⁹ For example:

- the CCYP interacts with the other human rights bodies set out within the Act, being the Guardian, the Committee and the Council;
- the CCYP has partnered with the YMCA's Youth Parliament Program to build a platform for young people who are interested in advocacy and policy creation, known as the Policy Advocates program;⁵⁸⁰
- the CCYP is partnering with three youth focused organisations to develop a peer based participation research approach;⁵⁸¹
- the CCYP has co-authored joint reports. For example, in 2018, the CCYP co-authored the Leading for our Future: Youth Symposium Report with the Australian Migrant Resource Centre;⁵⁸² and
- in June 2019, the CCYP partnered with UN Youth SA to deliver The Poverty Summit (see more at Item 1.4 above).⁵⁸³

Despite the lack of statutory mandate, the CACYP engages with the Aboriginal Children's Commissioners from other States and Territories. Between December 2018 and December 2019:

- the CACYP, with the Victorian Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People, met with the Federal Aboriginal Affairs Minister in relation to the call for a national Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children's Commissioner;⁵⁸⁴ and
- the CACYP coordinated the first meeting of the three Aboriginal Children's Commissioners in Australia (SA, Victoria and Queensland).⁵⁸⁵

The CACYP also engaged with other bodies, such as SNAICC, by partnering or participating in events. In September 2019, the CACYP facilitated an Aboriginal youth panel at the SNAICC Conference in Adelaide.⁵⁸⁶

Both the CCYP and CACYP attend meetings of the Australian and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG) and the CCYP has participated in ANZCCG Joint papers.⁵⁸⁷ The CACYP Inaugural Report indicated that the CACYP had attended three ANZCCG Forums in the reporting period (December 2018 – December 2019).⁵⁸⁸

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs. In the absence of a statutory mandate, the CACYP is largely not compliant with those same Paris Principles (although shows some compliance in practice).

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.⁵⁸⁹ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.⁵⁹⁰ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.⁵⁹¹

The CCYP has specified functions to:

- advise, and make recommendation to, Ministers, State authorities and other bodies (including non-Government bodies) on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level;⁵⁹² and
- to prepare and publish reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level.⁵⁹³

Upon completion of an inquiry under the Act, the CCYP may, by notice in writing, recommend to a State authority that it take particular action.⁵⁹⁴ The responsible authority for that State authority must then provide the CCYP with a report setting out whether the State authority proposes to implement the recommendation, and how, or setting out an explanation as to why the recommendation is not to be implemented.⁵⁹⁵ If the CCYP is of the opinion that the State authority has failed or refused to implement a recommendation, the CCYP may require the State authority to provide a report on the reasons for such failure or refusal.⁵⁹⁶

The CCYP must also prepare and give the Minister reports of any inquiries (including details of any recommendations made in respect of the inquiry).⁵⁹⁷ The Minister must table such report in both Houses of Parliament within 6 sitting days of receiving it.⁵⁹⁸ Furthermore, the Minister must prepare a report setting out the Minister's response to the CCYP's report, any action taken (or proposed to be taken) and, if no action is proposed to be taken, the reasons why.⁵⁹⁹ The Minister's report must be tabled in both Houses of Parliament within 6 sitting days of completion.⁶⁰⁰

The CCYP also has additional reporting powers, such as:

- the CCYP may prepare and provide to any responsible Minister reports on matters related to the rights, development and wellbeing of children and young people at a systemic level.⁶⁰¹ That Minister must table the report in both Houses of Parliament within 6 sitting days;⁶⁰² and
- the CCYP (or the Guardian or the Committee) may make a report to Parliament on any matter related to their functions if satisfied that the matter raises issues of such importance to the safety or wellbeing of children and young people that the Parliament should be made aware of the matter as a matter of urgency.⁶⁰³

The CCYP may publish all or part of its reports once they have been laid before Parliament (and after consultation with the Minister).⁶⁰⁴ The CCYP regularly publishes its reports on its website.⁶⁰⁵ These powers and functions give the CCYP a broad mandate and sufficient mechanisms for effecting change and drawing attention to inadequate implementation of recommendations.

The CACYP does not have equivalent powers in the absence of a governing statute. However, the CACYP does have space on its website to publish any reports,⁶⁰⁶ and the CACYP's inaugural report set out three recommendations.⁶⁰⁷

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI⁶⁰⁸

Summary: the Act and the CCYP partially comply with the Paris Principles with respect to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI. In the absence of enshrining legislation, the CACYP largely does not comply with those same Paris Principles.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles is the requirement for an NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.⁶⁰⁹ This enhances an NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism⁶¹⁰

⁶¹⁰ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.7.

Where the NHRI is a single-member body, such as the CCYP or CACYP, it is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society.⁶¹¹ However, there are no clear requirements for the CCYP's role under the Act. The Act instead provides that the Governor may establish a scheme for the recruitment of the CCYP (by regulation) and the recruitment of the Commissioner must comply with that scheme.⁶¹²

As is set out at Item 1.1 above, the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Regulations 2017 (SA)⁶¹³ came into operation in 2017. The regulation does not provide any further information as to the qualifications of experience required, and there is no requirement for the CCYP to be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person, however the scheme does enable children and young people to be involved in the recruitment and selection process:⁶¹⁴

- the Minister must appoint a selection panel of up to 5 persons (of whom 2 must be young people) to propose the appointment of an applicant to the position of Commissioner; and
- the interview process for the position of Commissioner must include (but need not be limited to) an exercise designed to assess the applicant's ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people, conducted in accordance with any requirements determined by the Minister.

The current CCYP was selected through a process involving children and young people.⁶¹⁵

The CCYP's "Front & Centre" strategic agenda for 2018-2022 includes the following aspects relevant to ensuring the pluralism of the CCYP:

- a key objective of the CCYP to "champion children and young people's rights and work with the broader community to respect and support their inclusion in laws, policies and decision making";⁶¹⁶ and
- a priority of the CCYP is to "Promote equality, equal access, equal rights, equal treatment and acceptance for people from diverse race, gender, sexual, religious and socio-economic backgrounds".⁶¹⁷

Similarly, the CCYP's Annual Report refers to a variety of activities involving diversity of participants in the activities conducted by the CCYP. Commissioner Connolly's letter to the Minister within the Report states that the Commissioner's engagement with children and young people involved more than 2,783 children and young people in the past twelve months.⁶¹⁸ Commissioner Connolly noted that the figure "represents children and young people from diverse backgrounds and ethnicities, age-groups and interests."⁶¹⁹

The current CACYP, April Lawrie, is an Aboriginal woman who heralds from the Mirning and Kokatha peoples in South Australia,⁶²⁰ however there is no legislated requirement for the CACYP to be of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander descent.

The CACYP's inaugural report highlights the efforts made by Commissioner Lawrie to reach a broad range of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples from a variety of communities in South Australia and in a variety of ways (for example, through family consultations and school-based consultations).⁶²¹

Staff of the CCYP / CACYP

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.⁶²²

The Act provides that the CCYP may engage employees on terms and conditions employed by the CCYP and, although the employees are not public service employees, they will be taken to be so for the purposes of the Public Sector (Honesty and Accountability) Act 1995 (SA)⁶²³.⁶²⁴ The CCYP may also make an agreement with the Minister responsible for an administrative public service unit to use the staff of that unit.⁶²⁵

The position on ensuring pluralism within the CCYP as an organisation itself is less clear. The Annual Report sets out an organisational chart of the agency, indicating there are seven 1 FTE staff (including the CCYP) and four less than 1 FTE staff (ranging from 0.4 – 0.9 FTE).⁶²⁶

The recruitment process for the CACYP's staff and diversity of that staff is not transparent.

Full-time members⁶²⁷

The CCYP is to be appointed by the Governor on conditions, and for a term (not exceeding 7 years), determined by the Governor and specified in the instrument of appointment.⁶²⁸ The CCYP is eligible for re-appointment, but cannot hold office for a term of more than 10 years in total.⁶²⁹ The Act does not expressly require the Commissioner to be appointed on a full-time basis. The Act therefore does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office.

In contrast, the current CACYP was appointed for a three-year period.⁶³⁰ The Gazette announcement of Commissioner Lawrie's appointment did not specify whether she would be eligible for reappointment, nor any specified terms of office.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the CCYP largely complies with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs. In the absence of enshrining legislation, the CACYP largely does not comply with those same Paris Principles.

The GANHRI Observations emphasise the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.⁶³¹

The Act provides for several decision-making bodies: the CCYP, the Guardian, the Council and the Committee. This section concentrates on the CCYP role in light of the scope of this report, however we note that the recruitment processes set out in the Act for the other advisory roles is sparse and are largely at the discretion of the Governor or Minister.⁶³²

As summarised in the preceding Items, there is a formal recruitment scheme set out within the regulations to the Act.⁶³³ Regulation 6(1) of the Children and Young People (Oversight and Advocacy Bodies) Regulations 2017 (SA) sets out the following:

- the Minister must make arrangements for the involvement of children and young people in the recruitment and selection process (including by allocating sufficient resources for that purpose);
- the Minister must appoint a selection panel of up to 5 persons (of whom 2 must be young people) to propose the appointment of an applicant to the position of Commissioner;
- the interview process for the position of Commissioner must include (but need not be limited to) an exercise designed to assess the applicant's ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people, conducted in accordance with any requirements determined by the Minister;
- the selection panel may propose to the Minister that a specified applicant be appointed as the Commissioner (and the Minister must refer that applicant to the Statutory Officers Committee in accordance with section 8 of the Act);
- the Minister may consult or cooperate with, or be assisted by, such persons and bodies as the Minister thinks fit in relation to the recruitment and selection process;
- subject to the regulations, and to any direction of the Minister, the selection panel may determine its own procedures;
- the Minister may take such other actions in relation to, or impose such other requirements on, the recruitment and selection process for a Commissioner as the Minister thinks fit.

Regulation 6(2) provides that a failure to comply with the above requirements does not, of itself, affect the validity of an appointment of a CCYP.

This recruitment scheme is broadly in accordance with the recommendation that broad consultation and/or participation in the application, screening and selection process take place.⁶³⁴ The position description for the CCYP position was advertised publicly and identified the selection criteria, form of application required and the essential skills for the role.⁶³⁵ The current CCYP was selected through a process involving children and young people.⁶³⁶

No requirement that the CACYP be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person was identified in research conducted. The position / role description advertised at the time the CACYP was established was not able to be located from research conducted. Accordingly, it is possible that the position / role description included an eligibility requirement that the successful candidate be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs. In the absence of enshrining legislation, the CACYP largely does not comply with those same Paris Principles.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.⁶³⁷ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The Act provides that the office of CCYP becomes vacant if the holder is nominated for election as a member of an Australian Parliament.⁶³⁸ In effect, this provision achieves the result that a Member of Parliament cannot also hold the office of CCYP. However, the office of the Guardian does not become vacant in the same circumstance. Similarly, Members of Parliament are not precluded by the Act from being appointed to the Council or the Committee.

The position in respect of the CACYP is less clear, given the absence of a governing statute. The current Commissioner is not a Member of Parliament.

Tenure

The Act sets out a specific duration for the CCYP's mandate, which is the period in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding a seven-year term).⁶³⁹ At the end of the term, the CCYP is eligible for re-appointment, provided the total term in office (including any time as Acting Commissioner) does not exceed 10 years (i.e. the CCYP may be eligible for a second term to a maximum of three years).⁶⁴⁰

The Act specifies the circumstances for suspension and removal from office.⁶⁴¹ The Governor may, on the address of both Houses of Parliament, remove the CCYP from office.⁶⁴² The Governor may also suspend the CCYP from office for:⁶⁴³

- contravention of a condition of appointment; or
- misconduct or conduct that may bring the office of Commissioner into disrepute; or
- failure or incapacity to carry out official duties satisfactorily.

If the Governor suspends the CCYP, a full statement of the reason must be laid before both Houses of Parliament within 7 days.⁶⁴⁴ If, at the end of 20 sitting days after the statement is laid before Parliament, neither House has presented an address to the Governor requiring the CCYP to be restored to office, then the CCYP is removed from office.⁶⁴⁵

In contrast, the current CACYP was appointed for a three-year period.⁶⁴⁶ The Gazette announcement of Commissioner Lawrie's appointment did not specify whether she would be eligible for reappointment, nor any specified terms for her removal from office.

The initial seven-year term of the CCYP allows time for the CCYP to undertake longer-term projects and to develop a deep understanding of the role and the particular needs of the children and young people in South Australia.

The Act provides for the circumstances in which the CCYP may be removed from their role. While these grounds are specified in the Act and are thus transparent and publicly known, some of the grounds appear to be more discretionary in nature. For example, the ground for suspension that the CCYP has engaged in "conduct that may bring the office of the Commissioner into disrepute" may be interpreted differently depending on the person holding the office of Governor (and potentially also the underlying political motivations at the time), as opposed to a more objective factor such as a conviction for a criminal offence. However, the requirement for due process through both Houses of Parliament may go further towards ensuring some objectivity in the removal of the CCYP from office.

The Act also provides that the CCYP must not, without the consent of the Minister, engage in any remunerated employment or activity apart from official duties, which provides a form of safeguard for the independence of the CCYP role.⁶⁴⁷ It is worth noting that this safeguard requires political involvement (from the Minister), as opposed to review by an independent panel or advisory body.

The Act also expressly provides that CCYP is independent of direction or control by the Crown or any Minister or officer of the Crown.⁶⁴⁸ This same provision applies to the Guardian,⁶⁴⁹ but does not apply to the Committee.⁶⁵⁰

In contrast, the three-year term for which the CACYP requires the person fulfilling the role to very quickly get up to speed and implement projects as the timeframe for fulfilment and completion of those projects for that Commissioner is much shorter. To illustrate: the Bullying Project undertaken by the CCYP (summarised in section 1.2 above) arose from a Listening Tour in 2017, was followed by the Bullying Project Report in 2018 (which was presented to Parliament) and in 2020 involves a further process to consider child-designed anti-bullying strategies in sport. The Bullying Project has spanned the entire first term of the CACYP, demonstrating that the CACYP is more likely to be constrained in the work that can be undertaken by the shorter term of appointment.

Recruitment

The CCYP is appointed by the Governor, provided that the Statutory Officers Committee has approved the proposed appointment after receiving a referral from the Minister. The requirement for a referral from the Minister is an inherently politicised process, and the Statutory Officers Committee is comprised of Members of Parliament.⁶⁵¹

The CACYP is also appointed by the Governor. The recruitment process is less transparent than that of the CCYP and it is therefore difficult to assess the level of independence from government.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the CCYP largely complies with the Paris Principles with respect to adequate funding of NHRIs. In the absence of enshrining legislation, there is a lack of transparency around the funding of the CACYP. However, in practice, the CACYP funding does not comply with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs as the CACYP funding is inadequate to effectively discharge the role.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.⁶⁵² The Act has an equivalent provision for each of the CCYP, the Guardian, the Committee and the Council, requiring the Minister to provide staff and other resources that the body reasonably needs for carrying out their functions.⁶⁵³

Both the CCYP and the CACYP are funded by the Government of South Australia through the Department for Education. The financial operations of the CCYP & CACYP are consolidated into and audited through the Department for Education and therefore the CCYP does not provide full financial reports as part of its annual reports.⁶⁵⁴ In the 2018-19 reporting period, the Department for Education reported that in 2019 it received $5,580,000 from the SA Government for “Advocacy bodies”⁶⁵⁵ (which consists of the CCYP, the CACYP and the Guardian).⁶⁵⁶ The Department reports that, after income and expenses, left the “Advocacy bodies” with a net result of $911,000.⁶⁵⁷ However, the Department is not transparent as to what amounts were allocated to which body.

In its first year, the CCYP role had a budget of $843,000 for salaries and wages plus goods and services.⁶⁵⁸ The position description for the inaugural CCYP role provided that the salary range for the CCYP (an SAES Level 2 role) was $211,810 - $353,017.⁶⁵⁹ The CCYP’s most recent Annual Report (2018-19) recorded total expenditure for the CCYP as $1,818,000.⁶⁶⁰

The position for the CACYP is less clear. The CCYP’s most recent annual report recorded the total expenditure for the CACYP as $209,000.⁶⁶¹

Accessibility and communications infrastructure⁶⁶²

Both the CCYP and CACYP share a physical office, which appears to be open to the public. In addition to this office, the CCYP and CACYP maintain a communications system for general enquiries.⁶⁶³ These systems comprise of an email address and phone number and, for the CACYP, an additional postal address and online form. The CCYP and CACYP are also active on social media platforms such as Facebook.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the CCYP largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs. In the absence of enshrining legislation, the CACYP is assumed to be partially compliant in practice, however further analysis may be required.

The CCYP is required to produce annual reports for the Minister, which the Minister must table to both Houses of Parliament within 6 sitting days.⁶⁶⁴ The CCYP's annual reports must set out the performance of the CCYP's functions during the preceding financial year,⁶⁶⁵ and are made available on its website.⁶⁶⁶

In practice, the CCYP's annual reports include key summaries of the CCYP's achievements, highlights and outputs from the reporting period (including lists of direct consultations with children and young people and speeches made by the CCYP). The reports also set out more in-depth detail regarding the CCYP's systemic reporting, project reporting and statutory reporting throughout the reporting period.

GANHRI General Observation 1.11 notes that it is preferable for an NHRI to have an explicit power to table reports directly in the legislature. While the Minister must table the CCYP's annual reports, the Act also provides a method by which the CCYP may report directly to Parliament, but only if satisfied that the matter which is the subject of the report is of such importance to the safety and wellbeing of children and young people that Parliament should be made aware as a matter of urgency.⁶⁶⁷

The CACYP has provided one Annual Report since her appointment, which spans the period December 2018 – December 2019.⁶⁶⁸ It is assumed that the CACYP will continue to provide annual reports for the December – December period each year.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

2.1 Criticism regarding the CCYP role

We have been unable to locate any specific criticisms regarding the CCYP role.

2.2 Absence of enshrining legislation for the CACYP

The CACYP's Inaugural Annual Report states:

*Community expectation is that the role of Commissioner be legislated with the necessary powers to effectively improve better outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people.*⁶⁶⁹

Legislating for the role of the CACYP is also the third recommendation made by the CACYP in the CACYP's Inaugural Report.⁶⁷⁰

Commissioner April Lawrie has publicly criticised the lack of legislated mandate for the CACYP role, stating that she is unable to investigate “pressing systemic issues” because the role had not been legislated for by the State Government.⁶⁷¹

SNAICC itself highlighted this concern in 2019:⁶⁷²

In an important move, the first SA Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People (CACYP) was appointed by the Government in October 2018. The CACYP’s key areas of focus are improving health, education, child protection and justice outcomes for Aboriginal children and young people. While this is a significant step forward, the CACYP has no independent powers in legislation yet, limiting the provision of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander systems oversight.

2.3 Discrepancy between the role and powers of the CCYP and CACYP

Family Matters is a national campaign which aims to eliminate the over-representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children in out-of-home care by 2040 and is led by SNAICC.

The relevant Family Matters webpage, which is not dated, states:

*On a positive note, South Australia has appointed a Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People, but there are concerns that the role and powers of the Aboriginal commissioner are not equivalent to the principal children’s commissioner in the state.*⁶⁷³

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The CCYP has strong own-motion investigatory and information-gathering powers, including the power to make an immediate report to Parliament in urgent cases. These powers give effect to the broad human rights mandate given to the CCYP.⁶⁷⁴ These powers should be applied to the CACYP to provide the role with like strength.
- The CCYP is vested with robust procedural immunities, consistent with the standard for Supreme Court proceedings.⁶⁷⁵
- The legislatively mandated recruitment and selection process for the CCYP must involve at least 2 young people on the selection panel, and the interview must include an exercise designed to assess the applicant’s ability to engage, communicate and interact with children and young people.⁶⁷⁶
- The Act is explicit in providing that the CCYP is independent of direction or control by the Crown or any Minister or officer of the Crown.⁶⁷⁷
- Both commissioners appear to maintain consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.⁶⁷⁸

1.2 CACYP Inaugural Report

The CACYP's inaugural report gives a sense of the progress achieved by the CACYP in the 2018-19 year, including:

- engaging with more than 400 Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people and organisations in relation to the safety and wellbeing of Aboriginal children and young people;⁶⁹⁵
- conducting more than 430 face-to-face consultations with Aboriginal children and young people in SA schools;⁶⁹⁶
- convening 16 forums which connected with at least 362 Aboriginal families and communities across SA;⁶⁹⁷
- making five submissions (verbal and written);⁶⁹⁸
- participating in 12 media interviews;⁶⁹⁹
- attending 27 keynote speaking engagements or presentations;⁷⁰⁰ and
- participating in various advocacy and regular meetings with Ministers and Government Department executives.⁷⁰¹

B. The National Children's Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

Note: The AHRC is accredited 'A' by the Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions,⁷⁵¹ which indicates that it is fully compliant with the Paris Principles.⁷⁵² An analysis of the NCC's compliance with the Paris Principles is set out below.

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs⁷⁵³

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs. There is a lack of transparency around the appointment mechanisms for the NCC.

Entrenched in law⁷⁵⁴

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.⁷⁵⁵ The role of the NCC is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to Part IIAA of the Act.⁷⁵⁶ The Act sets out the NCC's mandate and powers,⁷⁵⁷ including the NCC's lines of accountability.⁷⁵⁸ However, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the NCC holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor-General.⁷⁵⁹

Mandate and powers⁷⁶⁰

The Act broadly sets out the powers of the NCC,⁷⁶¹ including:

- to promote discussion and awareness of matters relating to the human rights of children in Australia;
- to undertake research, or educational or other programs, for the purpose of promoting respect for the human rights of children in Australia, and promoting the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia; and
- to examine existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments for the purpose of ascertaining whether they recognise and protect the human rights of children in Australia, and to report to the Minister the results of any such examination.

In performing its functions, or exercising its powers, the NCC may give particular attention to children who are at risk or vulnerable.⁷⁶²

This mandate appears to be expressed in broad enough terms to give the public the protection of a wide range of international human right standards and, in fact, the NCC is required to have

regard to a number of international human rights standards when exercising its powers and functions.⁷⁶³

Appointment mechanisms⁷⁶⁴

While the appointment mechanisms for the NCC are set out in the Act,⁷⁶⁵ it is arguable that they are not sufficiently transparent. The only clear requirement is that the person has “appropriate qualifications, knowledge or experience.”⁷⁶⁶

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)⁷⁶⁷

The Act does not set out an ability for the NCC to receive or investigate complaints. However, the AHRC President is able to receive complaints from or about the treatment of children in relation to discrimination and breaches of their human rights.⁷⁶⁸ The NCC may also seek leave to appear as an intervener or as amicus curiae in court cases that involve human rights, including children’s rights.⁷⁶⁹

1.2 Human rights mandate

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate. However, we would note that the NCC’s investigatory powers are unduly limited.

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.⁷⁷⁰ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).⁷⁷¹

Competence and responsibilities⁷⁷²

As set out above, s 46MB of the Act outlines the broad human rights mandate of the NCC. The broad mandate allows the NCC to consider and involve itself on a wide range of human rights issues within the context of the experiences of children in Australia.

The NCC is also mandated to report to the Minister on the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia.⁷⁷³ Within these reports, the NCC may make recommendations as to the action that should be taken to ensure the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia.⁷⁷⁴

The NCC’s investigatory powers are able to be exercised without a Ministerial recommendation. The NCC also has the power to compel access to documents or information, however this power is (unduly) limited to Commonwealth government agencies and requires reasonable written notice to be given.⁷⁷⁵ That is, if the NCC has reason to believe that a Commonwealth government agency has information or documents relevant to the performance of the NCC's functions, it may give written notice requiring the agency to give information to the NCC or to produce the document to the NCC.⁷⁷⁶ While a Commonwealth government agency does not have to comply with the NCC's request if it would reveal the identity of a particular individual without that individual's consent, the agency must comply with the request if it is possible to do so by producing a copy with any identifying information deleted.⁷⁷⁷

While the NCC does not have express powers of inquiry under Part IIAA of the Act, the AHRC's powers of inquiry may be delegated to the NCC upon written notice.⁷⁷⁸ This would allow the NCC to make an examination or hold an inquiry in such manner as the NCC sees fit and, in informing itself in the course of the inquiry, the NCC would not be bound by the rules of evidence.⁷⁷⁹

AHRC – broader mandate

The NCC also sits within the AHRC, which is empowered to perform its duties with regard for:⁷⁸⁰

- the indivisibility and universality of human rights;
- the principle that every person is free and equal in dignity and rights.

Duties of the AHRC include:⁷⁸¹

- functions conferred on the Commission by the Age Discrimination Act 2004, the Disability Discrimination Act 1992, the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 and the Sex Discrimination Act 1984;
- examining enactments and proposed enactments to ascertain if they are inconsistent with human rights;
- inquiring into any act or practice that may be inconsistent with human rights and if appropriate, endeavour to effect a settlement of the matters;
- promoting an understanding and acceptance of human rights in Australia;
- undertaking research and education programs for the purpose of promoting human rights;
- reporting to the Minister as to the laws that should be made by Parliament on matters relating to human rights;
- reporting to the Minister about any actions that needs to be taken by Australia in order of comply with provisions of the Covenant, of the Declarations or any other relevant international instrument;
- preparing and publishing guidelines for the avoidance of acts or practices which are inconsistent with human rights.

As such, the NCC has a specific human rights mandate within an organisation which has an even broader human rights mandate.

Functional immunity⁷⁸²

The Act provides the AHRC (and, accordingly, the NCC)⁷⁸³ with express protection from civil actions or other proceedings for damages for or in relation to an act done, or omitted to be done, in good faith in performance, or purported performance, of any function, or in the exercise of any power conferred on the AHRC.⁷⁸⁴

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments⁷⁸⁵

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.⁷⁸⁶ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.⁷⁸⁷

The Act empowers the NCC to:

- undertake research, or educational or other programs, for the purpose of promoting respect for the human rights of children in Australia, and promoting the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia;⁷⁸⁸ and
- examine existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments for the purpose of ascertaining whether they recognise and protect the human rights of children in Australia, and to report to the Minister the results of any such examination.⁷⁸⁹

The NCC may submit reports that deal with matters relating to the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia to the Minister,⁷⁹⁰ including any recommendations the NCC considers appropriate as to the action that should be taken.⁷⁹¹ In practice, these reports could be used to encourage the ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system⁷⁹²

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

In performing its functions or exercising its powers, the NCC must, as appropriate, have regard to:⁷⁹³

- the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;
- the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination;
- the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;

⁷⁸² See Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism, principle 3; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.3.

⁷⁹⁰ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46MB(3).

⁷⁹¹ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46MB(3A).

⁷⁹² See Paris Principles, Methods of operation; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.4.

⁷⁹³ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46MB(6).

- the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;
- the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women;
- the Convention on the Rights of the Child;
- the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities; and
- such other instruments relating to human rights as the NCC considers relevant.

The NCC is also entitled to engage with international organisations and agencies and any other organisations, agencies or persons as the NCC considers appropriate.⁷⁹⁴ This allows for dialogue with relevant treaty body committees.

In general, the NCC's powers with respect to promoting, recognising, protecting and reporting on human rights are broad (see Item 1.3 above). As such, the NCC is empowered to provide information and consult on reports to human rights mechanisms.

One recent example of this is the NCC's reporting to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child (UN Committee):⁷⁹⁵

- in November 2018, the NCC prepared an independent report for submission to the UN Committee,⁷⁹⁶ setting out information relating to Australia's joint fifth and sixth report under the Convention on the Rights of the Child, second report on the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and second report on the Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict,⁷⁹⁷ which Australia had submitted earlier in the year on 15 January 2018;⁷⁹⁸
- in February 2019, the NCC addressed the UN Committee and assisted them in looking at the major issues facing children living in Australia;
- following this, the UN Committee provided the Australian Government with a list of issues to address in writing by August 2019;
- in September 2019, the UN Committee provided Australia with its Concluding Observations and recommendations.

Regular engagement with international bodies is an 'important dimension' of NHRIs.⁷⁹⁹ Compliance with this Paris Principle ensures that domestic mechanisms are strengthened through communication and cooperation with international organisations.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies⁸⁰⁰

Summary: the NCC largely complies with the Paris Principles on cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.⁸⁰¹ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.⁸⁰²

The NCC is empowered to consult with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights, including:

- Departments and authorities of the Commonwealth, and of the States and Territories;
- non-governmental organisations;
- international organisations and agencies; and
- such other organisations, agencies or persons as the Commissioner considers appropriate.⁸⁰³

In practice, the NCC regularly consults with other bodies and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.⁸⁰⁴ For example:

- the NCC attends biannual members meetings of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand;⁸⁰⁵
- in September 2019, the NCC attended the inaugural meeting of the International Network on Infants, Toddlers and Child Protection at Oxford University. This involved representatives from 17 countries sharing data and setting out a forward research agenda in areas like evidence based risk assessment and decision making, pre and post-birth notification policies, child removal practices, placement and reunification;⁸⁰⁶
- in October 2019, the NCC travelled to Indonesia to take part in a two-day conference on children's right to a healthy environment, sponsored by range of agencies including the German and Indonesian Governments, UNICEF, the United Nations and Terre des Hommes.⁸⁰⁷

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs⁸⁰⁸

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs. However, while the AHRC is mandated to submit annual reports, the NCC's power to submit reports is not mandated.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.⁸⁰⁹

Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.⁸¹⁰

One of the main functions of the NCC is to report to the Minister the results of any examinations of existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments.⁸¹¹

The NCC may submit reports that deal with matters relating to the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children in Australia to the Minister,⁸¹² including any recommendations that the NCC considers appropriate as to the action that should be taken.⁸¹³ The Minister must cause a copy of each report received from the NCC to be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 sitting days.⁸¹⁴

We note that the language of the legislation indicates that these reports and recommendations are not mandatory or annual. This is likely because the NCC sits within the AHRC, which makes its own annual report to Parliament under s 46 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).⁸¹⁵

Publication in practice⁸¹⁶

The NCC submits a report to federal Parliament each year on the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children and young people in Australia. These reports contain a number of recommendations for improvement. The NCC publishes the reports, summaries of key findings and children's versions of the report on the AHRC website.⁸¹⁷ In 2019, to mark the 30th anniversary of the Convention of the Rights of the Child, the NCC also published a "scorecard" setting out how well children's rights are protected and promoted across Australia.⁸¹⁸

In addition to the NCC's annual reports, the annual reports produced by the AHRC evaluate the impact of the AHRC's submission work on law and policy by monitoring appearances before committees and inquires and examining the extent to which any AHRC recommendations are reflected in reports.⁸¹⁹

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI⁸²⁰

Summary: the Act and the AHRC are partially compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of ensuring the pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.⁸²¹ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism⁸²²

The NCC

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the NCC, it is important that the NHRI is representative of the diverse segments of society.⁸²³ However, the only clear requirement for the NCC under the Act is that the person has “appropriate qualifications, knowledge or experience.”⁸²⁴

Staff of the AHRC

The AHRC’s staff are employed pursuant to the Public Service Act 1999 (Cth).⁸²⁵ One of the Australian Public Service (APS) Employment Principles which agency heads must uphold and promote⁸²⁶ is to recognise the diversity of the Australian community and foster diversity in the workplace.⁸²⁷

The AHRC’s website states that the AHRC “currently exceeds APS targets for the employment of people from a non-English speaking background, people with a disability and for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.”⁸²⁸ The AHRC also reports that it supports diversity through its:

- Diversity Strategy (incorporating our Disability Action Plan, Reconciliation Action Plan, Indigenous Employment Strategy, and Agency Multicultural Plan);
- active membership of the Australian Employers Network on Disability;
- Workplace Reasonable Adjustment Policy;
- Internship priority; and
- Mentoring activities.

Full-time members⁸²⁹

The NCC is to be appointed by the Governor-General by written instrument, on a full-time basis.⁸³⁰ The Act sets out a specific duration for the NCC mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 7 years),⁸³¹ and the Governor-General’s power of appointment in respect of the NCC is taken to also include a power of re-appointment.⁸³² The Act does not appear to limit re-appointment in any way, which may not constitute appropriate mechanisms of pluralism, particularly given the NCC is a single-body NHRI.

The Act states that the NCC is entitled to be paid remuneration, as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or, in the absence of a determination, by the regulations.⁸³³ The Remuneration Tribunal is the independent statutory body that handles the remuneration of key Commonwealth offices.

The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the NCC holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor-General.⁸³⁴

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs⁸³⁵

Summary: the Act is sparsely drafted and largely does not comply with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs. However, the “in practice” selection of the inaugural NCC is commendable.

The GANHRI Observations emphasise the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.⁸³⁶

The appointment of the NCC is to be made by the Governor-General.⁸³⁷ While the appointment mechanisms for the NCC are set out in the Act,⁸³⁸ the only clear requirement is that the person has “appropriate qualifications, knowledge or experience.”⁸³⁹ The Act does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment and there is limited statutory or administrative material available as to how the Minister assesses this criteria, which raises concerns about whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent, and participatory.⁸⁴⁰

However, while not specifically formalised in the Act, the selection process for the position of the inaugural NCC considered children’s views about the criteria and characteristics required for the role. Children (aged 9 to 11 years) from Kingsford Smith Primary School in the Australian Capital Territory participated in the interview process.⁸⁴¹ The selection process for the most recently appointed NCC has not yet been publicly disclosed.

We further note that the AHRC has a “Jobs” page on its website on which it publicly advertises job vacancies at the AHRC (as a whole).⁸⁴²

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act should be better drafted in order to expressly comply with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

In order to maintain a NHRI’s structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.⁸⁴³ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

As outlined above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the NCC. The Act does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission.⁸⁴⁴

However, the Act does provide that the NCC must not engage in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister,⁸⁴⁵ which might operate to prevent a member of parliament from holding the role of NCC at the same time.

There is nothing express in Part IIAA of the Act to suggest that the NCC is not subject to any direction or oversight by the Minister or Governor-General, and in fact, the Governor-General sets the terms and conditions of the NCC's office.⁸⁴⁶ This may undermine the perceived (and real) independence of the NCC office.

Tenure⁸⁴⁷

The Act sets out a specific duration for the NCC mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 7 years).⁸⁴⁸ The Governor-General's power of appointment in respect of the NCC is taken to also include a power of re-appointment.⁸⁴⁹

Furthermore, the NCC may only be dismissed by the Governor-General on the following specified grounds:⁸⁵⁰

- for misbehaviour;
- if the NCC is unable to perform the duties of his or her office because of physical or mental incapacity;
- if the NCC becomes bankrupt, or applies to take the benefit of any law for the relief of bankrupt or insolvent debtors, or compounds with his or her creditors, or makes an assignment of remuneration for the benefit of his or her creditors;
- if the NCC is absent, except on leave of absence, for 14 consecutive days or for 28 days in any 12 months; or
- if the NCC engages in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister.

While this complies with the Paris Principles, the Act itself does not expressly require the Governor-General to provide specific reasons for the dismissal, nor does the Act expressly provide the NCC with an ability to contest any dismissal.

Recruitment⁸⁵¹

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.⁸⁵²

There is no evidence that the NCC hires any staff directly. However, the AHRC is entitled to employ "the staff necessary to assist the Commission".⁸⁵³ The recruitment of staff for the AHRC is made under the Public Service Act 1999 (Cth), thereby making it equivalent to the recruitment of staff of other APS bodies.⁸⁵⁴

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is a lack of transparency around the funding available to the NCC (as opposed to the AHRC as a whole). However, in practice, the NCC partially complies with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

⁸⁴⁶ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46MK.

⁸⁵³ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 43.

⁸⁵⁴ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 21(a).

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.⁸⁵⁵

Allocation for activities and accountability⁸⁵⁶

The NCC position is not allocated funding as a separate budget line item⁸⁵⁷ and instead the AHRC receives the funding for the NCC.

The Finance Minister⁸⁵⁸ may give directions about the amounts in which, and the times at which, money payable to the AHRC is to be paid to the AHRC.⁸⁵⁹

The Act provides that such funding may only be applied:⁸⁶⁰

- in payment or discharge of the costs, expenses and other obligations incurred by the AHRC in the performance of its functions and the exercise of its powers; and
- in payment of any remuneration or allowances payable under the Act.

Money that is not immediately required for the purposes of the AHRC may be invested pursuant to the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).⁸⁶¹

The AHRC is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to public sector bodies under the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth). The AHRC's statement of comprehensive income in its Annual Report for 2018-19 states that in the 2019 year, the AHRC received $16,709,000 in revenue from the Australian Government.⁸⁶² The statement also refers to a deficit of $1,185,000 attributable to the Australian Government,⁸⁶³ which might suggest that the AHRC as whole does not receive adequate public funding to perform its mandated activities.

As is outlined below, inadequacy in funding was one of the main criticisms of the Bill for the Amendment Act when it was first introduced to Parliament in 2012.

In addition to the funding received from the Australian Government, the AHRC reports that it received $10,100,000 in "own-source income" in 2019.⁸⁶⁴

NHRI staff and members⁸⁶⁵

The Act states that the NCC is entitled to be paid remuneration, as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or, in the absence of a determination, by the regulations.⁸⁶⁶ The AHRC publishes workforce data, such as executive remuneration, in its annual reports.

In the 2018-19 financial year, the NCC received a base salary of $291,725.96 (and a total remuneration of 346,211.31).⁸⁶⁷ We note that this is less than the base salary and total remuneration of some of the other AHRC Commissioners, including:

- the Social Justice Commissioner;
- the Sex Discrimination Commissioner;
- the Age Discrimination Commissioner; and
- the Human Rights Commissioner.⁸⁶⁸

This discrepancy may raise questions as to whether the salary awarded to the NCC is comparable to other civil servants performing similar tasks.

Accessibility and communications infrastructure⁸⁶⁹

The AHRC actively seeks submissions from a broad cross section of the community.⁸⁷⁰ However, the AHRC does not appear to have a permanent physical regional presence.

The AHRC also maintains a communications system for general enquiries.⁸⁷¹ This system includes a telephone line, email address, mailing address and social media accounts. A National Relay Service is also available for people who are deaf or have a hearing or speech impairment.⁸⁷²

While the NCC itself does not have a complaint-handling role, the AHRC President is able to receive complaints from or about the treatment of children in relation to discrimination and breaches of their human rights. These complaints can be submitted online through the AHRC website.⁸⁷³

To assist with its complaints-handling function, the AHRC also runs the National Information Service (NIS), which is free and confidential service that provides information and referrals for individuals, organisations and employers about a range of human rights and discrimination issues.⁸⁷⁴ The NIS can:

- provide information on rights and responsibilities under federal human rights and anti-discrimination law;
- discuss whether individuals are able to make a complaint to the AHRC or how the law might apply to their situation;
- provide information about how to make a complaint, respond to a complaint or deal with specific discrimination issues; and
- refer individuals on to other organisations that might be able to assist (to the extent that the NIS is unable to).

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs⁸⁷⁷

Summary: the Act and the NCC partially comply with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs. However, the AHRC as a whole largely complies with those same Principles.

The President of the AHRC is required to produce annual reports for the Minister, for presentation to the Parliament, under section 46 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).⁸⁷⁸ The report must set out the AHRC's activities, annual performance statements and annual financial statements with respect to the reporting period.⁸⁷⁹ The AHRC's annual reports are made available on its website.⁸⁸⁰

In practice, the NCC also submits a report to federal Parliament each year. Each report outlines the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by children and young people in Australia. These reports contain a number of recommendations for improvement. The NCC publishes the reports, summaries of key findings and children's versions of the report on the AHRC website.⁸⁸¹

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

The Bill digest for the Amendment Act expressly recognised some criticisms of the proposed Bill.⁸⁸² For example, the Centre for Independent Studies publicly opposed the establishment of the NCC, expressing the view that the NCC would be ineffective in achieving its stipulated tasks.⁸⁸³

In addition, a number of public interest groups made submissions on the proposed Bill. These submissions made a number of recommendations on bettering the NCC role (none of which appear to have been implemented before the Bill was passed). In its inquiry report, the Standing Committee on Social Policy and Legal Affairs noted a number of general concerns raised in many of the submissions, including:

- that the NCC should have specific regard to the rights of particularly vulnerable children, such as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children, children in immigration detention in Australia and children with disabilities;
- that the NCC should have a positive duty to engage with children; and
- that the list of international treaties to which the NCC must have regard should be extended.

⁸⁸³ See ABC Life Matters, National Children's Commissioner: what will it do?, available at <<https://www.abc.net.au/radionational/programs/lifematters/national-childrens-commissioner/4047628>>.

The submissions of the Australian Children's Commissioners and Guardians, a group consisting of the children's commissioners from across Australia, provide further examples of recommendations with respect to the NCC, such as:⁸⁸⁴

- that guiding principles should be included in the legislation to reinforce the Bill's underlying core beliefs (e.g. "this Act is to be administered under the principle that the best interests of children are paramount");
- that the role of the NCC should not be confined to "examining existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments" but should also include the capacity to examine Commonwealth policies, programs and services; and
- that a requirement for the NCC to take a lead role in making an independent submission to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child should be formally included in the legislation.

Furthermore, when the role of the NCC was first announced, a number of political bodies and children's advocates, including the Standing Committee on Social Policy and Legal Affairs,⁸⁸⁵ called on the government to ensure that the AHRC's funding was sufficiently increased to ensure that the NCC could appropriately fulfil its functions.⁸⁸⁶

A number of these bodies expressed particular concern that only $3.5 million had been allocated to the NCC for its first 4 years,⁸⁸⁷ with some noting that the state and territory commissioners received significantly more funding and that limited funding may render the NCC's establishment tokenistic.⁸⁸⁸ The AHRC itself expressed concerns that the funding would not be adequate to allow the NCC to engage in any substantial project work.⁸⁸⁹ Despite these concerns, it does not appear that funding was increased from the initial four-year $3.5 million allocation before the Bill was passed.⁸⁹⁰

The broader AHRC itself has come under criticism for being political,⁸⁹¹ and questions of its effectiveness are raised when Australia is criticised for its human rights record.⁸⁹²

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The NCC's functions and powers with respect to promoting, recognising, protecting and reporting on human rights are broad.⁸⁹³
 - the NCC is able to provide recommendations to the Minister (which must be laid before Parliament);⁸⁹⁴
 - the NCC must consider certain international human rights instruments;⁸⁹⁵
 - the NCC is able to consult with national and international human rights organisations and bodies.⁸⁹⁶
- Although not legislatively mandated, the selection process for the inaugural NCC involved consultation with, and the participation of, Australian children.⁸⁹⁷ The Human Rights Law Centre has described this process as a "positive guide for other jurisdictions".⁸⁹⁸
- The NCC appears to maintain consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.⁸⁹⁹
- In practice, the NCC and AHRC publish a wide range of information (including submissions, reports and inquiries) on the AHRC website, making it publicly accessible.
- The AHRC publicly tracks and reviews the implementation of its recommendations (including those made by the NCC).⁹⁰⁰
- The annual reporting requirements of AHRC are closely aligned with the GANHRI General Observations and may act as a useful model.⁹⁰¹

C. The National Children's Commissioner: Impacts

In its 2019 Annual Report, which was submitted to the Attorney General on 28 October 2019, the NCC listed a number of recommendations for the Australian Government to act on in order to improve children's rights.⁹⁰² The NCC based its 2019 Annual Report on its 2018 Report to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (the UN Committee).

4 Report to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child

In November 2018, the NCC prepared a report for the UN Committee,⁹⁰³ setting out information relating to Australia's joint fifth and sixth report under the Convention on the Rights of the Child, second report on the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and second report on the Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict,⁹⁰⁴ which Australia had submitted earlier in the year on 15 January 2018.⁹⁰⁵

In preparing its report, the NCC consulted widely with children, key advocates, government and non-government stakeholders. In particular, the NCC:⁹⁰⁶

- consulted, in person, with approximately 450 children, and with 22,700 children through an online national poll on children's rights; and
- held 10 roundtables with 162 stakeholders and met with over 100 stakeholders individually, and received 127 written submissions.

In its report, the NCC acknowledged the positive steps taken by the Australian Government to protect children's rights since its last report to the UN Committee but noted that the Australian Government did not respond to the UN Committee's recommendations / Concluding Observations on the fourth periodic report in 2012 until it submitted the joint report in 15 January 2018.⁹⁰⁷

The NCC's report was submitted to the UN Committee in December 2018.

In February 2019 the NCC addressed the UN Committee in Geneva and assisted in looking at the major issues facing children living in Australia.⁹⁰⁸ Following this, the UN Committee provided the Australian Government with a list of issues to address in writing by August 2019.⁹⁰⁹

In September 2019, Australia appeared before the UN Committee to answer questions about how it is working to advance the rights of children in Australia. The UN Committee provided a range of Concluding Observations, calling for urgent measures to be taken in order to protect children:

In response, in November 2019, the AHRC published a 'scorecard' of children's rights in Australia.⁹¹⁰ The scorecard is intended to help hold the Australian Government to account for the wellbeing of Australian children. The scorecard is available to the public via the AHRC's website, and the Appendix to the scorecard contains a summary of the recommendations made in the UN Committee's Concluding Observations.

5 General actions in 2018-19

Based on the AHRC's Annual Report,⁹¹¹ in the 2018-19 financial year, the NCC also:

- led the development of the National Principles for Child Safe Organisations, based on the ten 'child safe standards' recommended by the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse;⁹¹² and
- provided reflections on justice for children in the NT and Australia more broadly at the inaugural Human Rights Day Oration.⁹¹³

A. Commissioner for Children and Young People (Tasmania): Summary table

Question	Summary response
Country/State/Territory	Tasmania, Australia
Commissioner entity name	Commissioner for Children and Young People (Commissioner)
Date established	The first Commissioner was appointed in 2000, ⁹¹⁴ when the statutory Office of the Commissioner for Children (Commission) was established on 1 July 2000 by the Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1997 (Tas). ⁹¹⁵ Currently, the Commissioner is appointed pursuant to the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) (the Act).
Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	The Commissioner is mostly compliant with the Paris Principles. Some areas of improvement are required to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Clearly specify the appointment process of the Commissioner to ensure transparency; - Clearly state the purpose and objective of the Commissioner role in the Act. - While the Act provides some functional immunity for the Commissioners, by including a specified term and limited powers of removal. However, the maximum term of the roles is unduly short, and the removal powers provide the Governor in Council with some discretion – both of which may undermine the independence of the Commissioners.
Structure Where does the role sit, is it: (a) a stand-alone office; or (b) part of an existing institution (specify which institution) What relationships are there between this role and other Commissioners or institutions?	The Commissioner is an independent statutory officer. ⁹¹⁶ The Commissioner is to interact with other agencies and authorities including the Tasmanian Police, the Ombudsman, the Integrity Commission and the Anti-Discrimination Commissioner – to the extent that the matter is received by the Commissioner or identified as part of an inquiry). ⁹¹⁷
Accountability arrangements What is the reporting line for the role? Who sets the budget?	The role is responsible to the Parliament of Tasmania. The Commissioner must prepare an annual report and provide it to the Minister for Human Services (Minister) and the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services. ⁹¹⁸

B. Commissioner for Children and Young People (Tasmania): Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs⁹³⁷

Summary: The Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in relation to the establishment of NHRIs. There can be improvement made around transparency of appointment and selection and clear funding sources in the Act.

Entrenched in law⁹³⁸ / Mandate and powers⁹³⁹

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.⁹⁴⁰

The Commissioner for Children and Young People (CCYP) for Tasmania has been established by legislation and has been given sufficiently broad mandate in relation to children and young people. The role was initially established pursuant to the Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1997 (Tas) and has been transitioned to the Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) (Act) which was enacted to enhance the powers and functions of the role.⁹⁴¹

The CCYP's functions and powers are clearly set out in ss 8 and 11 of the Act.⁹⁴² The legislation has however failed to clearly set out the role or purpose or objective of the CCYP in a clear introductory section.

Appointment mechanisms

Terms of appointment of the CCYP are contained in a schedule to the Act,⁹⁴³ however the mechanism of appointment or appointment process is not clear other than that the Governor on recommendation of the Minister is to appoint the Commissioner⁹⁴⁴ – there is no clear criteria of appointment.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints handling)

In relation to General Observation 2.9, the CCYP does not have express power to deal with, investigate or settle complaints. It does have the power to initiate its own investigations on systemic issues, however, the dealing of individual complaints and concerns has been left to the Ombudsman.⁹⁴⁵

1.2 Human rights mandate⁹⁴⁶

Summary: The Act is compliant with Paris Principles regarding human rights mandate, and this requirement should be broadened in the Act to be more compliant.

⁹³⁷ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

⁹³⁸ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

⁹³⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

⁹⁴⁰ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

⁹⁴² Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) ss 8, 11.

⁹⁴³ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) Schedule 1.

⁹⁴⁴ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 5.

⁹⁴⁵ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 14.

⁹⁴⁶ Consider also: General Observation 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

Competence and responsibilities⁹⁴⁹

One of the principles to be observed by the CCYP or any other person performing a function or exercising a power under the Act is to observe relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention of the Rights of the Child.⁹⁵⁰ As part of its mandate, the CCYP is to assist in ensuring the State satisfies its national and international obligations in respect of children and young people,⁹⁵¹ which would extend to protecting human rights. Additionally, the CCYP has an enshrined role to act as an advocate for a detainee under the Youth Justice Act 1997.⁹⁵²

The CCYP has the power to investigate government policies, practices or procedures relating to the wellbeing of children and young people, which should also extend to monitoring human rights affecting children and young people within the relevant public authorities.⁹⁵³ In conjunction with this (and to assist with this function), the CCYP has the power to compel information. This extends to requiring a person to answer questions either orally or in writing, and also to produce any specified documents. There is a penalty associated with non-compliance of a request for information.⁹⁵⁴ The CCYP does not have powers to access premises. With the information sharing provisions in the Act, the CCYP is also able to request non-identifying information relating to a child or young person from an “information sharing entity”^{955 956}

Additionally, the CCYP can advise and make recommendations in relation to the rights and wellbeing of children and young people to any organisation (including the Minister and State authorities).⁹⁵⁷

In relation to General Observation 2.8, besides the general function to promote, monitor and review the wellbeing of children and young people generally,⁹⁵⁸ the CCYP does not have specific monitoring oversight of domestic agencies. Its power in this respect is limited to:

- investigating and making recommendations in respect of systems, policies and practices of organisations (government or non-government) that provides services which affect young people;⁹⁵⁹ and
- advising and making recommendations to Ministers and State authorities in relation to the wellbeing of children and young people.⁹⁶⁰

⁹⁴⁷ GAHNRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

⁹⁴⁸ GAHNRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

⁹⁴⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GAHNRI General Observations, G.O. 2.6.

⁹⁵⁰ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 3(1)(b).

⁹⁵¹ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 8(1)(f).

⁹⁵² Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 10.

⁹⁵³ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 11(2)(d).

⁹⁵⁴ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 12. The penalty for non-compliance with this section is a fine not exceeding 100 penalty units and in the case of a continuing offence, a further fine not exceeding 10 penalty units for each day during which the offence continues.

⁹⁵⁵ As defined in Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1997 (Cth) s 3.

⁹⁵⁶ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 16.

⁹⁵⁷ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 11(2)(e).

⁹⁵⁸ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 8(1)(d).

⁹⁵⁹ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 11(2)(c).

⁹⁶⁰ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) s 11(2)(e).

The human rights mandate of the CCYP is narrower than the General Observations and Paris Principles require and does not quite cover the ambit of “promotion” such as specific functions relating to education, training and public outreach.

Functional immunity⁹⁶¹

In relation to General Observation 2.3, the CCYP and any other person performing a power or function under the Act is protected from liability which is enshrined in the Act.⁹⁶² Specifically “The Commissioner, and any other person, performing a function or exercising a power under this Act does not incur any personal liability, civil or criminal, in respect of any act done or omitted to be done in good faith in the performance or exercise, or purported performance or exercise, of that function or power.”⁹⁶³

Powers of investigation and inquiry

The CCYP may investigate or review any matter they consider appropriate.⁹⁶⁴ The drafting of this power is sufficiently broad, however the Act does restrict this by not permitting the CCYP to deal with complaints made by or on behalf of an individual and does not have the authority to investigate or review the circumstances of individual children (unless requested to do so by the Minister).⁹⁶⁵ However, the above restriction does not prevent the CCYP from investigating or otherwise dealing with matters affecting the wellbeing of children generally when it is raised through a matter relating to a specific child.⁹⁶⁶ An example of the CCYP exercising this power is through the Memorandum of Advice in relation to Searches of children and young people in custody in custodial facilities in Tasmania.⁹⁶⁷ The advice enquires into the use of searches of children and young people in custodial facilities, in the context of human rights standards and principles.

In conjunction with the above general powers to investigate and inquire into matters, the CCYP also has the power to compel information.⁹⁶⁸

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: While the Act is not strictly compliant with the Paris Principles in relation to encouraging ratification or accession to the international human rights instruments, in practice, the CCYP has been shown to participate relevant discussions.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.⁹⁶⁹ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.⁹⁷⁰

In compliance with General Observation 1.3, one of the CCYP’s functions is to assist in ensuring the State is satisfying its national and international obligations in respect of children and young people.⁹⁷¹ This function can be exercised through the CCYP’s power to investigate and make recommendations in relation to the effects of existing or proposed legislation.⁹⁷² As stated above, the CCYP must observe the United Nations Convention of the Rights of the Child in performing its functions or exercising powers. Besides the above, CCYP has broad function to research, investigate and influence policy development, which is sufficiently broad to cover General Observation 1.3.⁹⁷³

The CCYP has a history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia. For instance:

- In June 2018, the CCYP provided comments to the National Children's Commissioner on Australia's progress to implement the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child;⁹⁷⁴
- In September 2018, the CCYP contributed to the Australian Human Rights Commission's consultations about the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT);⁹⁷⁵ and
- In December 2019, the CCYP wrote a submission to the Joint Select Committee on Australia's Family Law System which reflected upon the Convention on the Rights of the Child.⁹⁷⁶

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: While the Act is not strictly compliant, the CCYP generally complies with the Paris Principle on interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.⁹⁷⁷ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.⁹⁷⁸

The Act does not specify a mechanism for the CCYP to engage with or interact with the international human rights system – other than to assist in ensuring the State is satisfying its international obligations.⁹⁷⁹ This function must be exercised by the CCYP independently, impartially and in the public interest. Therefore, the Commission could arguably express its independent opinion on a report to be submitted to the United Nations bodies and committees.⁹⁸⁰

The most recent Annual Report outlined the contributions made by the CCYP to the implementation of the OPCAT.⁹⁸¹ The CCYP's history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters is detailed above.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: The Act is largely compliant with General Observation 1.5, as the CCYP has regular and constructive engagement with relevant stakeholders.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.⁹⁸² This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.⁹⁸³

The CCYP engages with the following entities:

- The CCYP is a member of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which is a group of national, state and territory children and young people commissioners, guardians and advocates. The ANZCCG aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand.⁹⁸⁴ The ANZCCG meet bi-annually to discuss priority areas
- In its 2018-19 Annual Report, the CCYP reflected on the following from the year:
 - Partnering with the Australian Institute of Family Studies to co-host a forum on hearing the voices of children and young people in family law.
 - Joining Anglicare's Social Action and Resource Centre, the Australian Research Alliance for Children and Youth and the Youth Network of Tasmania, to host a forum to export ways to strengthen care responses for unaccompanied homeless children in Tasmania.⁹⁸⁵
- The establishment of the CCYP Expert Advisory Council on Wellbeing with a focus on supporting the CCYP's work. The council meets regularly.⁹⁸⁶
- Development of the CCYP Ambassador Program which is a program that creates an opportunity for children and young people to have their voices heard on how things could be improved for them across Tasmania.

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: While there is no express ability of the CCYP to follow up on recommendations made, its functions are sufficiently broad to allow it to do so. The Act is therefore partially compliant with the Paris Principles regarding recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.⁹⁸⁷ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.⁹⁸⁸ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.⁹⁸⁹

The CCYP has the power at any time to prepare a report on any matter or issue relating to children that the CCYP considers appropriate.⁹⁹⁰ The report may include recommendations relating to changes in law, policy, practice or procedure or to recommendations to take action.⁹⁹¹

The Act does not prohibit the CCYP from undertaking follow up activities to promote and advocate for the implementation of its recommendations.

The CCYP is quite active in making submissions on policy and law reform relating to issues affecting children and young people (including submissions to government bodies and agencies). The Commission openly publishes its key submissions and reports on its website.

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI⁹⁹²

Summary: The Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in relation to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI. While it is drafted to include pluralism in the establishing of Committees, it is not broad enough to be largely compliant.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.⁹⁹³ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism

In relation to General Observation 1.7, the Act legislates for Committees to be established including the Children and Young People Advisory Council and the Children and Young People Consultative Council.⁹⁹⁴

In June 2019, the CCYP established the CCYP Export Advisory Council (as part of its mandate to form a Children and Young People Advisory Council). This council has a focus on supporting the CCYP's role in promoting, monitoring and reviewing the wellbeing of children and young people in Tasmania. Members assist the CCYP in providing high-level strategic, analytical or technical advice to the CCYP as needed.⁹⁹⁵

When appointing members of the Children and Young People Advisory Council, the CCYP must have regards to ensure the committee has persons with a range of experience and backgrounds including people from:⁹⁹⁶

- non-government organisations and community organisations;
- groups which represent the diversity of the Tasmanian population;
- persons employed by government agencies or employed in private practice that is relevant to the health, welfare, care, protection, development or legal rights of children.

The CCYP Ambassador Program (formerly known as the Children and Young People Consultative Council) is made up of children and young people aged 9 to 17 from diverse backgrounds and locations around Tasmania. The program provides a forum for children to share their opinions and ideas about what is important to them, learn about and promote the rights of children and young people and complete special projects.⁹⁹⁷ ⁹⁹⁷ See Commissioner for Children and Young People Tasmania, About (Webpage) <<https://www.childcomm.tas.gov.au/about/>>.

In appointing members of the Children and Young People Advisory Council, the CCYP must ensure that the members are children and from groups which represent the diversity of the Tasmanian population.⁹⁹⁸

Full time members

In relation to General Observation 2.2, the Act is silent as to whether the appointment is on a full-time basis, however this is implied as one of the terms of appointment is that the CCYP must not hold any other office or engage in any paid employment outside the office of CCYP.⁹⁹⁹ There is no minimum term of appointment; rather, there is a maximum terms of 5 years. However, the CCYP may be reappointed after this period for a further term not exceeding 5 years.¹⁰⁰⁰

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The Act is weakly drafted and does not comply with the Paris Principles in relation to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs. The Act is not transparent in this regard. However, in practice, selection criteria for the CCYP has been made publicly available. As such, the selection and appointment of the CCYP is partially compliant with the Paris Principles.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹⁰⁰¹

The appointment process of the CCYP is unclear in the Act, other than to specify that the Governor on recommendation of the Minister for Human Services, is to appoint the CCYP.¹⁰⁰²

In the recruitment of the CCYP in August 2017, the Information Package notes the following in relation to the Selection Criteria:

In considering a nomination for the office of Commissioner for Children and Young People, the Minister for Human Services will take account of the demonstrated skills, experience and commitment of the nominee to children and young people, including relevant tertiary or professional qualifications.

It is therefore suggested that the following criteria provides a guide to any prospective applicant in writing an application for the position.

1. An extensive and demonstrated professional involvement with, and an understanding and sensitivity to the health and wellbeing, needs and desires, of children and young people, particularly vulnerable children and young people.

2. High level communication and interpersonal skills including the ability to negotiate, consult and resolve conflict over complex personal, interpersonal and organisational issues with children, young people and their families, and with a diverse range of community and government representatives, demonstrating political impartiality, and an understanding of the balance and sensitivity required in engaging with multiple stakeholders, including children and young people, government, and the broader community.

3. Demonstrated high level knowledge of, and commitment to, the rights of children, young people and their families, advocacy practice and the principles of empowerment.

4. High level discretion and credibility in managing highly confidential and sensitive issues and materials; in establishing priorities, researching and analysing complex issues; and in speaking publicly and providing leadership to issues on the basis of evidence.

5. Demonstrated high level knowledge of state and federal legislation pertaining to children and young people.

6. An outcomes focus with a demonstrated high level ability to work in partnership with government to manage change, and achieve positive results, with state-wide impact in an environment of competing priorities and fiscal challenges.

7. Sophisticated knowledge of, and experience in, government processes and procedures, particularly regarding policy development, policy analysis and evaluation of service quality.

The above selection criteria appear to be objective, pre-determined and publicly available and promotes the merit-based appointment of candidates. However, the legislative framework around this appointment is minimal and does not provide sufficient certainty or consistency around the selection and appointment process.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: The Act does not directly address the Paris Principles in respect of political representatives on NHRIs, however is partially compliant in practice.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹⁰⁰³ Further, the a NHRI should be independent from government.

The Act specifies that the CCYP must act independently, impartially and in the public interest when performing a function or exercising a power under the Act.¹⁰⁰⁴ The CCYP is not a member of parliament or a government representative. However, there the Act does not specify that that CCYP is not subject to the direction of anyone in relation to the way in which its functions are performed or the order of priority it gives to investigations. While the Minister may request the CCYP undertake an investigation or review, that investigation is independent and does not affect the impartiality of the CCYP to determine the procedure for the investigation or review.¹⁰⁰⁵ In fact the Act mandates that a request of the Minister under s 9(1) of the Act may not set the terms of the investigation or review, state what is to be considered as part of the investigation or review or otherwise specify how the investigation or review is to be held.¹⁰⁰⁶

As outlined above there is however, a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the CCYP in the Act.

Tenure

The tenure provisions of the Act reinforce that the CCYP is also largely not interfered by any political representative. The termination of appointment provisions in the Act are clearly defined and appropriately confined to actions which adversely impact on the capacity of the CCYP to fulfil its mandate.¹⁰⁰⁷ Dismissal is not allowed solely based on the discretion of the Minister. However, the Act allows for removal of the CCYP if the CCYP is "unable to perform adequately or competently" which could be a subjective standard that may inappropriately interfere and undermine the independence of the role. The Governor must provide written notice to the CCYP if it elects to remove the CCYP from office in accordance with the Act.¹⁰⁰⁸ ¹⁰⁰⁸ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2016 (Tas) Schedule 1(4)(2).

Recruitment

The CCYP has the power to appoint members of the Children and Young People Advisory Council and the Children and Young People Consultative Council.¹⁰⁰⁹ Additionally the CCYP may make arrangement with the Head of a State Service Agency for State Service officer or employee to be made available to assist the CCYP. Similarly, a person may be employed for the purpose of enabling the CCYP to perform their functions.¹⁰¹⁰

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: There is a lack of transparency in respect of funding of the CCYP in the Act. In practice (and there is no public criticism to the contrary), the Paris Principles in relation to adequate funding of NHRIs is complied with.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹⁰¹¹

The statutory provisions do not provide an indication as to the source or amount of funding for the Commissioner and the Commissioner's annual reports do not appear to set out the Commissioner's annual financial statements.

The Tasmanian government State budget includes separate provision for funding for the CCYP office. The Tasmanian Budget for 2019-20 allocates $1,335,000 as a separate line item for the Office of the Commissioner for Children and Young People. Additionally, in the 2019-20 budget, additional funding of $112,000 per annum was provided to the CCYP office to provide for an additional resource to support strategic communication and media services for the CCYP.¹⁰¹² Further to this, in the 2017-18 Budget, the Tasmanian Government allocated $250,000 per annum for 4 years for the CCYP to provide independent monitoring for out-of-home care.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: The Act largely complies with the Paris Principles in relation to annual reporting of NHRIs.

The CCYP is required to provide an annual report within 3 months after the end of each financial year. The contents of the report should outline the performance of powers and the exercise of functions of the CCYP during the financial year.¹⁰¹³ The annual reports are publicly available on the CCYP website which increases the transparency and public accountability of the CCYP.

The report is also required to be directly laid before each House of Parliament, rather than through the Executive.¹⁰¹⁴

3 What are the best features of this role?

Some of the best features include:

- Broad powers to compel and access information which is enshrined in the Act.
- Broad general functions in relation to children and young people.
- Advocacy functions for children generally, but specifically for children and young people detained under the Youth Justice Act 1997.

C. Commissioner for Children and Young People (Tasmania): Impacts

4 Impacts of the Tasmanian Commissioner for Children and Young People

- In the 2017-18 budget, the Tasmanian Government allocated $250,000 per annum for four years for the CCYP to provide independent monitoring of out-of-home care.¹⁰¹⁵ This increase in funding arose from the Tasmanian Government's decision to accept the former Commissioner Morrissey recommendation in his January 2017 report into out-of-home care, Children and Young People in Out of Home Care in Tasmania.¹⁰¹⁶ Specifically Recommendation Five of this report called for the establishment of independent external oversight and monitoring of the out-of-home care system, and sought the provision of additional resources for the CCYP to perform this role under its existing expanded functions and powers.¹⁰¹⁷
- On 7 May 2019, the CCYP provided an advice to the Tasmanian Government on Searches of children and young people in custody in custodial facilities in Tasmania.¹⁰¹⁸ In response the Tasmanian Government accepted all recommendations including proposals to amend or draft legislation to address specific issues raised by CCYP.¹⁰¹⁹
- In March 2020, the Tasmanian Government responded to Commissioner McLean's October 2019 report of the CCYP's independent monitoring of Tasmania's Out-of-Home Care system.¹⁰²⁰ Some of these recommendations provided by the CCYP has been actioned and responded to by the Tasmanian Government, while others remain unresolved. Importantly, the CCYP is seeking further information and clarification from the Tasmanian Government on these points.¹⁰²¹

B. The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

Note: The AHRC is accredited 'A' by the Global Alliance of National Human Rights Institutions,¹⁰⁶³ which indicates that it is fully compliant with the Paris Principles.¹⁰⁶⁴ An analysis of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner's compliance with the Paris Principles is set out below.

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs¹⁰⁶⁵

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs. There is a lack of transparency around the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner.

Entrenched in law¹⁰⁶⁶

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.¹⁰⁶⁷ The Commissioner's role is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to Part IIA of the Act. The Act sets out the Commissioner's mandate and powers,¹⁰⁶⁸ including the Commissioner's lines of accountability.¹⁰⁶⁹ However, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Commissioner holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor-General.¹⁰⁷⁰

Mandate and powers¹⁰⁷¹

The Act broadly sets out the Commissioner's powers,¹⁰⁷² including:

- to promote discussion and awareness of human rights in relation to Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders;
- to undertake research and educational programs and other programs for the purpose of promoting respect of the human rights of Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders and promoting their enjoyment and exercise of human rights;
- to examine existing and proposed enactments for the purpose of ascertaining whether they recognise and protect human rights of Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders and report findings to the Minister.

The Act empowers the Commissioner to submit reports to the Minister regarding the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by Aboriginal and Torres Strait islanders as well as make recommendations to ensure the continued and enjoyment and exercise of said right.¹⁰⁷³ ¹⁰⁷³ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) ss 46C(2A), 46C(2C).

The Commissioner may also consult stakeholders in the community including organisations established by Aboriginal and Torres Strait islander communities, international organisations and agencies and any other organisations the Commissioner considers relevant.¹⁰⁷⁴

This mandate appears to be expressed in broad enough terms to give the public the protection of a wide range of international human right standards and, in fact, the Commissioner is required to have regard to a number of international human rights standards when exercising its powers and functions.¹⁰⁷⁵

Appointment mechanisms¹⁰⁷⁶

While the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner are set out in the Act,¹⁰⁷⁷ it is arguable that they are not sufficiently transparent. The only clear requirement is that the person has “significant experience in community life of Aboriginal persons or Torres Strait Islanders.”¹⁰⁷⁸

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)¹⁰⁷⁹

The Act does not set out an ability for the Commissioner to receive or investigate complaints. However, the AHRC President is able to receive complaints in relation to discrimination, including racial discrimination, and breaches of human rights.¹⁰⁸⁰

1.2 Human rights mandate

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate. However, we would note that the Commissioner’s investigatory powers are unduly limited.

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.¹⁰⁸¹ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).¹⁰⁸²

Competence and responsibilities¹⁰⁸³

As is set out above, s 46C of the Act outlines the broad human rights mandate of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner. The broad mandate allows the Commissioner to consider and involve itself on a wide range of human rights issues within the context of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples’ experiences in Australia.

The Commissioner is also mandated to report to the Minister on the operation of human rights for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.¹⁰⁸⁴ Within these reports, the Commissioner may make recommendations as to improve the enjoyment and exercise of these rights.

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Commissioner’s investigatory powers are able to be exercised without a Ministerial recommendation. The Commissioner also has the power to compel access to documents or information, however this power is (unduly) limited to Commonwealth government agencies and requires reasonable written notice to be given.¹⁰⁸⁵ That is, if the Commissioner has reason to believe that a Commonwealth government agency has information or documents relevant to the performance of the Commissioner's functions, it may give written notice requiring the agency to give information to the Commissioner or to produce the document to the Commissioner.¹⁰⁸⁶ While a Commonwealth government agency does not have to comply with the Commissioner's request if it would reveal the identity of a particular individual without that individual's consent, the agency must comply with the request if it is possible to do so by producing a copy with any identifying information deleted.¹⁰⁸⁷

While the Commissioner does not have express powers of inquiry under Part IIA of the Act, the AHRC's powers of inquiry may be delegated to the Commissioner upon written notice.¹⁰⁸⁸ This would allow the Commissioner to make an examination or hold an inquiry in such manner as the Commissioner sees fit and, in informing itself in the course of the inquiry, the Commissioner would not be bound by the rules of evidence.¹⁰⁸⁹

Examples of the Commissioner exercising their investigation powers include the Bringing them Home Report,¹⁰⁹⁰ Closing the Gap Review¹⁰⁹¹ and Indigenous Deaths in Custody.¹⁰⁹²

AHRC – broader mandate

The Commissioner also sits within the AHRC, which is empowered to perform its duties with regard for:¹⁰⁹³

- the indivisibility and universality of human rights;
- the principle that every person is free and equal in dignity and rights.

Duties of the AHRC include:¹⁰⁹⁴

- functions conferred on the Commission by the Age Discrimination Act 2004, the Disability Discrimination Act 1992, the Racial Discrimination Act 1975, the Sex Discrimination Act 1984;
- examining enactments and proposed enactments to ascertain if they are inconsistent with human rights;
- inquiring into any act or practice that may be inconsistent with human rights and if appropriate, endeavour to effect a settlement of the matters;
- promoting an understanding and acceptance of human rights in Australia;
- undertaking research and education programs for the purpose of promoting human rights;
- reporting to the Minister as to the laws that should be made by Parliament on matters relating to human rights;

- reporting to the Minister about any actions that needs to be taken by Australia in order of comply with provisions of the Covenant, of the Declarations or any other relevant international instrument; and
- preparing and publishing guidelines for the avoidance of acts or practices which are inconsistent with human rights.

As such, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner has a specific human rights mandate within an organisation which has an even broader human rights mandate.

Functional immunity¹⁰⁹⁵

The Act provides the AHRC (and, accordingly, the Commissioner)¹⁰⁹⁶ with express protection from civil actions or other proceedings for damages for or in relation to an act done, or omitted to be done, in good faith in performance, or purported performance, of any function, or in the exercise of any power conferred on the AHRC.¹⁰⁹⁷

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.¹⁰⁹⁸ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.¹⁰⁹⁹

The Act empowers the Commissioner to:

- to undertake research and educational programs and other programs for the purpose of promoting respect of the human rights of Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders and promoting their enjoyment and exercise of human rights;¹¹⁰⁰
- to examine existing and proposed enactments for the purpose of ascertaining whether they recognise and protect human rights of Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders and report findings to the Minister.¹¹⁰¹

The Commissioner may also submit reports to the Minister regarding the operation of human rights for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, having regard to these international instruments.¹¹⁰² Within these reports, the Commissioner may make recommendations as to improve domestic compliance with international standards. In practice, these reports could be used to encourage the ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

The Commissioner appears to be upholding this aspect of the Paris Principles well. It is a goal of the Commissioner to see international human rights commitments made by the Australian Government in accordance with international standards. In particular, the Commissioner encourages compliance with the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous People, which Australian pledged is support in in April 2009.¹¹⁰³

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

In performing its functions of exercising its powers, the Commissioner must, as appropriate, have regard to:¹¹⁰⁴

- the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,
- the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;
- the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights;
- the Convention on Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination;
- the Convention of the Rights of the Child; and
- such other instruments relating to human rights the Commissioner considers relevant.

In the performance of its functions, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commission may engage with international bodies, alongside other domestic organisations, to share information, promote good practice and advocate for the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.¹¹⁰⁵ This allows for communication and cooperation between the Commission and key international bodies in improving domestic compliance with international materials in respect of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander human rights.

In general, the Commissioner's powers with respect to promoting, recognising, protecting and reporting on human rights are broad (see Item 1.3 above). As such, the NCC is empowered to provide information and consult on reports to human rights mechanisms.

Examples of the Commissioner's engagement with international bodies include:¹¹⁰⁶

- in March and August 1999, the Commissioner made submissions to the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, responding to the Committee's requests for information;
- in September 2003, the Commissioner made three submissions to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child, relating to three of the themes to be considered during the Day of General Discussion on the Rights of Indigenous Children;
- in 2018, the Commissioner spoke at the 38th regular session of the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva to discuss the Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) project for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women;¹¹⁰⁷ and
- in 2019, the Commissioner launched the Hear Us, See Us exhibition at the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva.¹¹⁰⁸

Regular engagement with international bodies is an ‘important dimension’ of NHRIs.¹¹⁰⁹ Compliance with this Paris Principle ensures that domestic mechanisms are strengthened through communication and cooperation with international organisations.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles on cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Commissioner is also empowered to consult with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights, including:

- organisations established by Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander communities;
- organisations of Indigenous people in other countries;
- International organisations and agencies; and
- such other organisations, agencies and persons as the Commissioner considers appropriate.¹¹¹⁰

In practice the Commissioner consults with other bodies and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.¹¹¹¹ For example:

- the Commissioner is the co-chair of the Closing the Gap Steering Committee and, in producing the Closing the Gap reports, has consulted with a range of stakeholders including the Aboriginal Health Council of South Australia, Australian Medical Association, Indigenous Dentists' Association of Australia, and the NSW Aboriginal Land Council;¹¹¹²
- in May 2015, the Commissioner co-convened an Indigenous Leaders Roundtable on economic development and property rights on Yawuru country in Broome, Western Australia;¹¹¹³
- on 24 July 2017, the Commissioner convened a meeting of a number of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander advocates and supporters, including the Uluru Statement Co-Chairs, Reconciliation Australia and the Lowitja Institute, and prepared a joint statement urging all Australians and First Nations peoples to focus their collective attention on the recommendations of the Referendum Council;¹¹¹⁴ and
- in 2018, the Commissioner appeared at the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Legislation Committee in Canberra to give an update to the Committee on progress of the Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) project, which has involved nationwide stakeholder engagement.¹¹¹⁵

Cooperation with other Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander communities and organisations are a clear indication that the Commission is developing relations domestically to actively promote and protect human rights.¹¹¹⁶

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs. However, while the AHRC is mandated to submit annual reports, the Commissioner's power to submit reports is not mandated.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.¹¹¹⁷ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.¹¹¹⁸

One of the main functions of the Commissioner is to report to the Minister the results of any examinations of existing and proposed Commonwealth enactments.¹¹¹⁹

The Commissioner may submit reports that deal with matters relating to the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders to the Minister.¹¹²⁰ The Commissioner may also submit reports to the Minister dealing with the operation of the Native Title Act 1993 (Cth) and the effect of that Act on the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders.¹¹²¹ These reports may include recommendations that the Commissioner considers appropriate to ensure the enjoyment and exercise of human rights by Aboriginal persons and Torres Strait Islanders.¹¹²² The Minister must cause a copy of each report received from the NCC to be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 sitting days.¹¹²³

However, the language of the legislation indicates that the Commissioner's reports and recommendations are not mandatory or annual. This is likely because the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner sits within AHRC, which makes its own annual report to Parliament under s 46 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).¹¹²⁴

Publication in practice¹¹²⁵

Until 2017, the Commissioner had an obligation to submit an annual Social Justice and Native Title Report to federal Parliament each year,¹¹²⁶ outlining the human rights perspective on native title issues in Australia.¹¹²⁷ While the Commissioner no longer produces these annual reports, the Commissioner continues to produce reports at the culmination of key project.¹¹²⁸

For example, the next report, the Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) Report, will outline the Commissioner's national consultation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls in 2018, and will elevate their voices on a wide range of human rights issues, including Native Title.¹¹²⁹

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI¹¹³⁰

Summary: the Commissioner and the AHRC are partially compliant with this Paris Principles in respect of ensuring the pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles is the requirement for an NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.¹¹³¹ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism¹¹³²

The Commissioner

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the Commissioner, it is important that the NHRI is representative of the diverse segments of society.¹¹³³ The only clear requirement for the Commissioner under the Act is that the person has “significant experience in community life of Aboriginal persons or Torres Strait Islanders.”¹¹³⁴

Staff of the AHRC

The AHRC's staff are employed pursuant to the Public Service Act 1999 (Cth).¹¹³⁵ One of the Australian Public Service (APS) Employment Principles which agency heads must uphold and promote¹¹³⁶ is to recognise the diversity of the Australian community and foster diversity in the workplace.¹¹³⁷

The AHRC's website states that the AHRC “currently exceeds APS targets for the employment of people from a non-English speaking background, people with a disability and for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.”¹¹³⁸ The AHRC also reports that it supports diversity through its:

- Diversity Strategy (incorporating their Disability Action Plan, Reconciliation Action Plan, Indigenous Employment Strategy, and Agency Multicultural Plan);
- Active membership of the Australian Employers Network on Disability;
- Workplace Reasonable Adjustment Policy;
- Internship priority; and
- Mentoring activities.

Full-time members¹¹³⁹

The Act does not provide that the Commissioner must hold office on a full-time basis. The Act sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 7 years).¹¹⁴⁰

¹¹³⁰ Consider also: General Observation 2.1 – Guarantee of tenure for members of the NHRI decision-making body; General Observation 2.2 – Full-time members of an NHRI; General Observation 2.4 – Recruitment and retention of NHRI staff.

¹¹⁴⁰ Australian Human Rights Commission Act 1986 (Cth) s 46D(1).

The Commissioner is also eligible for re-appointment.¹¹⁴¹ Although the Paris Principles allow re-appointment, there should be mechanisms in place to ensure pluralism.¹¹⁴² The Act does not appear to limit reappointment in any way, which may not constitute appropriate mechanisms of pluralism, particularly given the Commissioner is a single-body NHRI.

The Act states that the Commissioner is entitled to be paid remuneration, as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or, in the absence of a determination, as prescribed.¹¹⁴³ The Remuneration Tribunal is the independent statutory body that handles the remuneration of key Commonwealth offices.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The Act is sparsely drafted and only partially complies with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

The GANHRI Observations emphasise the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹¹⁴⁴

The Commissioner is appointed by the Governor-General.¹¹⁴⁵ While the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner are set out in the Act,¹¹⁴⁶ the only requirement is that the Minister be satisfied the person has significant experience in community life of Aboriginal persons or Torres Strait Islanders.¹¹⁴⁷ The Act does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment and there is limited statutory or administrative material available as to how the Minister assesses this criteria, which raises concerns about whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent and participatory.¹¹⁴⁸

With respect to the AHRC more broadly, we note that the AHRC has a “Jobs” page on its website on which it publicly advertises job vacancies at the AHRC as a whole.¹¹⁴⁹

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act should be better drafted in order to better expressly comply with the Paris Principles with respect to political involvement and influence.

In order to maintain a NHRI’s structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹¹⁵⁰ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

As outlined above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the Commissioner. The Act does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission.¹¹⁵¹

¹¹⁵¹ See Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism, principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.9.

However, the Act does provide that the Commissioner must not engage in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister,¹¹⁵² which might operate to prevent a member of parliament from holding the role of Commissioner at the same time.

There is nothing express in Part IIA of the Act to suggest that the Commissioner is not subject to any direction or oversight by the Minister or Governor-General, and in fact, the Governor-General sets the terms and conditions of the Commissioner's office.¹¹⁵³ This may undermine the perceived (and real) independence of the Commissioner's office.

Tenure¹¹⁵⁴

The Act sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 7 years), and the Commissioner is eligible for re-appointment¹¹⁵⁵

Furthermore, the Commissioner may only be dismissed by the Governor-General on the following specified grounds:¹¹⁵⁶

- for misbehaviour;
- if the Commissioner is unable to perform the inherent requirements of office due to a disability;
- if the Commissioner becomes bankrupt, or applies to take the benefit of any law for the relief of bankrupt or insolvent debtors, or compounds with his or her creditors, or makes an assignment of remuneration for the benefit of his or her creditors;
- if the Commissioner is absent, except on leave of absence, for 14 consecutive days or for 28 days in any 12 months; or
- if the Commissioner engages in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister.

While this complies with the Paris Principles, the Act itself does not expressly require the Governor-General to provide specific reasons for the dismissal, nor does the Act expressly provide the Commissioner with an ability to contest any dismissal.

Recruitment¹¹⁵⁷

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.¹¹⁵⁸

There is no evidence that the Commissioner hires any staff directly. However, the AHRC is entitled to employ "the staff necessary to assist the Commission".¹¹⁵⁹ The recruitment of staff for the AHRC is made under the Public Service Act 1999 (Cth), thereby making it equivalent to the recruitment of staff of other APS bodies.¹¹⁶⁰

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is a lack of transparency within the Act around the funding available to the Commissioner specifically (as opposed to the AHRC as a whole). However, in practice, the Commissioner partially complies with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹¹⁶¹

Allocation for activities and accountability¹¹⁶²

The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner is not allocated funding as a separate budget line item,¹¹⁶³ and the Act provides no specific funding for the Commissioner.

Instead, the Finance Minister¹¹⁶⁴ may give directions about the amounts in which, and the times at which, money payable to the AHRC is to be paid to the AHRC.¹¹⁶⁵

The Act provides that such funding may only be applied:¹¹⁶⁶

- in payment or discharge of the costs, expenses and other obligations incurred by the AHRC in the performance of its functions and the exercise of its powers; and
- in payment of any remuneration or allowances payable under the Act.

Money that is not immediately required for the purposes of the AHRC may be invested pursuant to the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).¹¹⁶⁷

The AHRC is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to public sector bodies under the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth). The AHRC's statement of comprehensive income in its Annual Report for 2018-19 states that in the 2019 year, the AHRC received $16,709,000 in revenue from the Australian Government.¹¹⁶⁸ The statement also refers to a deficit of $1,185,000 attributable to the Australian Government,¹¹⁶⁹ which might suggest that the AHRC as whole does not receive adequate public funding to perform its mandated activities.

In addition to the funding received from the Australian Government, the AHRC reports that it received $10,100,000 in "own-source income" in 2019.¹¹⁷⁰

¹¹⁷¹ Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism, principle 1; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.10.

The Act states that the Commissioner is entitled to remuneration as is determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or as prescribed.¹¹⁷² The AHRC publishes workforce data, such as executive remuneration, in its annual reports. In the 2018-19 financial year, the Commissioner received a base salary of $356,756.33 (and a total remuneration of $425,383.38).¹¹⁷³ This is the second-highest remuneration package of all AHRC executive members, with the exception of the President.

Accessibility and communications infrastructure¹¹⁷⁴

The AHRC actively seeks submissions from a broad cross section of the community.¹¹⁷⁵ However, the AHRC does not appear to have a permanent physical regional presence.

The AHRC also maintains a communications system for general enquiries.¹¹⁷⁶ This system includes a telephone line, email address, mailing address and social media accounts. A National Relay Service is also available for people who are deaf or have a hearing or speech impairment.¹¹⁷⁷

While the Commissioner does not have a complaints-handling role, the AHRC President is able to receive complaints in relation to discrimination, including racial discrimination, and breaches of human rights. These complaints can be submitted online through the AHRC website.¹¹⁷⁸

To assist with its complaints-handling function, the AHRC also runs the National Information Service (NIS), which is free and confidential service that provides information and referrals for individuals, organisations and employers about a range of human rights and discrimination issues.¹¹⁷⁹ The NIS can:

- provide information on rights and responsibilities under federal human rights and anti-discrimination law;
- discuss whether individuals are able to make a complaint to the AHRC or how the law might apply to their situation;
- provide information about how to make a complaint, respond to a complaint or deal with specific discrimination issues; and
- refer individuals on to other organisations that might be able to assist (to the extent that the NIS is unable to).

The NIS can be contacted by phone, email, online or by fax. A National Relay Service is available for people who are deaf or have a hearing or speech impairment,¹¹⁸⁰ and a translating and interpreting service is available for non-English speakers.¹¹⁸¹

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles. The Commissioner itself is not mandated to produce their own report, but the AHRC produces an annual report which captures the activities of the Commissioner.

The President of the AHRC is required to produce annual reports for the Minister, for presentation to the Parliament, under section 46 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).¹¹⁸² The report must set out the AHRC's activities, annual performance statements and annual financial statements with respect to the reporting period.¹¹⁸³ The AHRC's annual reports are made available on its website.¹¹⁸⁴

In practice, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner contributes to the AHRC's annual report but does not release their own specific annual report.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

While not a criticism of the Commissioner directly, in 2017, Oxfam recommended that a legislative requirement or other mechanism be established to require the federal Government to provide a formal response to the Commissioner's reports.¹¹⁸⁵ The Oxfam report noted that:¹¹⁸⁶

"...the lack of political will among governments and lack of engagement by parliament on issues raised by the Commissioner have been significant limitations in ensuring the protection and realisation of rights for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Ultimately, the vast majority of recommendations made by successive Social Justice Commissioners remain largely unimplemented."

The broader AHRC, of which the Commissioner is a part, has come under criticism for being political¹¹⁸⁷ and questions of its effectiveness are raised when Australia is criticised for its human rights record.¹¹⁸⁸

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner has a relatively broad human rights mandate to promote and protect human rights, which is an essential requirement of the Paris Principles. Furthermore, it sits within a broader structure, the Australian Human Rights Commission, which also has a broad human rights mandate.
- The Minister must consider a person's lived experience within Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities before appointing them as the Commissioner.¹¹⁸⁹ This ensures a culturally competent and appropriate appointment.
- The Commissioner appears to maintain consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships. This obligation is also enshrined well within the legislation.¹¹⁹⁰

C. The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner: Impacts

4 Recent or Continuing Projects

4.1 Close the Gap Indigenous Health Campaign

The Close the Gap Steering Committee (the Committee), which is co-chaired by the Commissioner, has been working with peak Indigenous and non-Indigenous health bodies, NGOs and human rights organisations to work to achieve quality in health and life expectancy for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.¹¹⁹²

The Close the Gap Indigenous Health Campaign aims to close the health and life expectancy gap between Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and non-Indigenous Australia within a generation. In February 2018, the Committee released a 10-year review, examining the reasons why Australian governments have not succeeded in closing the health gap and why they will not succeed by 2030 if the current course continues.¹¹⁹³

4.2 Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) Project

The Wiyi Yani U Thangani (Women's Voices) Project is a major project let by the Commissioner and funded by the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet.¹¹⁹⁴ The project aims to explore:

- the needs, challenges and aspirations of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls today;
- the key achievements in relation to the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls over the past 30 years;
- ways to enhance the lives of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls so that they can lead happy, healthy and fulfilling lives; and
- ways to promote and protect culture.¹¹⁹⁵

As part of the project, during 2018, the Commissioner led a national conversation with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and girls to hear their priorities, challenges and aspirations for themselves, their families and their future. A report of these engagements is currently being prepared.¹¹⁹⁶ In 2019 and 2020, the project will also engage with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander senior women through a limited number of additional gatherings.

4.3 Constitutional reform to recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in the Constitution

In 2018, the current Commissioner and all of the former Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioners called for a referendum on constitutional recognition within five years.¹¹⁹⁷ In addition to advocating for this five-year commitment, the joint submission:

- set out a four step process, which included a new Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples Recognition Act, to set out the framework for participation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples;

- recommended a regular parliamentary motion to hold parliamentarians to account on whether they support removing racism from the Constitution; and
- sought a negotiation process between parliamentarians, the government and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples to finalise the wording of constitutional recognition.

The Commissioner also spoke at the final day of hearings of the Joint-Select Committee on constitutional recognition.

4.4 Bringing Them Home – interactive educational resource

In 2017, the Commissioner created an interactive education website to mark the 20th anniversary of the release of the Bringing them Home Report, the final report of the National Inquiry into the Separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander from Their Families (see Item 2.5 below).¹¹⁹⁸ The website features a map, lesson plans and all of the stories from the report.¹¹⁹⁹

5 Notable Past Projects

5.1 Social Justice and Native Title Reports

Until 2017, the Commissioner had an obligation to submit an annual Social Justice and Native Title Report to federal Parliament each year,¹²⁰⁰ outlining the human rights perspective on native title issues in Australia.¹²⁰¹ While the Commissioner no longer produces these annual reports, the Commissioner continues to produce reports at the culmination of key project.¹²⁰²

5.2 The Declaration dialogues

In 2012, a series of dialogues was conducted in order to ensure that the principles and rights outlined in the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples was fully integrated into the Australian policy landscape.¹²⁰³ The dialogue series provided a mechanism to develop a comprehensive National Strategy as to those principles and rights.

5.3 National Congress of Australia's First Peoples

In 2008, the Commissioner assisted with the early creation of a new national representative body, the National Congress of Australia's First Peoples, to provide a new national representative voice for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in Australia.¹²⁰⁴

5.4 Northern Territory 'Emergency Response' intervention

From 2007 to 2012, the Commissioner contributed to ensuring that the Australian Government's "national emergency response to protect Aboriginal children in Northern Territory" from sexual abuse and family violence, was consistent with Australia's international human rights obligations and particularly with the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth).¹²⁰⁵ The publications, speeches and media releases made by the AHRC with respect to the 'Emergency Response' intervention have been made publicly available on the AHRC's website.¹²⁰⁶

5.5 The Bringing them Home Report and the Moving Forward Conference

In April 1997, the Commissioner released the Bringing them Home Report.¹²⁰⁷ The report resulted from the Commission's national inquiry into the laws, policies and practices which separated Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children from their families. The Inquiry's recommendations were directed to healing and reconciliation for the benefit of all Australians.

Four years later, in August 2001, the AHRC, the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission and the Public Interest Advocacy Centre hosted a national conference to facilitate public debate about the reparations for the stolen generations.¹²⁰⁸ The reports, issues paper, recommendations and speeches from the Moving Forward Conference have all been made publicly available on the AHRC's website.¹²⁰⁹

5.6 Indigenous Deaths in Custody

In October 1996, the Commissioner prepared a report into Indigenous Deaths in Custody from 1989 - 1996.¹²¹⁰ The report analysed findings of coronial inquests in order to examine the circumstances of each death and determine whether the 179 recommendations made by the 1989 Royal Commission into Indigenous deaths in custody were implemented in the years between 1989 to 1996. The Report found a failure by State and Territory Governments to properly implement the findings of the Royal Commission and noted that this failure raised serious questions as to whether international human rights instruments were being complied with by Australia.¹²¹¹

14 The Advocate for Children and Young People in New South Wales

A. The Advocate for Children and Young People in New South Wales: Summary table

Question	Summary response
Country/State/Territory	New South Wales, Australia
Commissioner entity name	The Advocate for Children and Young People (the Advocate)
Date established	The Advocate for Children and Young People Bill 2014 (NSW)¹²¹² (the Bill) was assented on 24 June 2014,¹²¹³ to establish the office of the Advocate and to provide for the functions of that office. The Advocate for Children and Young People Act 2014 (NSW)¹²¹⁴ (the Act) was commenced by Regulation 713 of 2014 on 9 January 2015.¹²¹⁵
Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	The Advocate is largely compliant with the Paris Principles, however there are some gaps: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The role of the Advocate is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to the Act. • The Act does not contain any express human rights references. However, the Advocate's functions are expressed on broad terms and may arguably be extended for the promotion of these rights. • The Act provides the Advocate, and its advisory council, with functional immunity with respect to any actions, liability, claim or demand. • The Advocate does not have a complaints-handling power. • While the Advocate has powers of inquiry and reporting, it may only launch an inquiry by request to the Minister or on the Minister's own initiative. • The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office for the Advocate. • There is a significant lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the Advocate. However, the Act contains detailed provisions as the selection and appointment of part-time members of the Advocate's Youth Advisory Council. • The Advocate maintains consultation with stakeholders and other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights. • The Act contains no limit on political representatives and in fact it appears that the Minister has some influence over the Advocate.

Structure Where does the role sit, is it: (a) a stand-alone office; or (b) part of an existing institution (specify which institution) What relationships are there between this role and other Commissioners or institutions?	The Advocate is an independent statutory office reporting to the NSW Parliament through the Parliamentary Joint Committee on Children and Young People (the Joint Committee).¹²¹⁶ The Joint Committee is a joint statutory committee which monitors and reviews the Advocate's work.¹²¹⁷ It consists of three members from the Legislative Council of NSW Parliament and four from the Legislative Assembly of NSW Parliament.¹²¹⁸ The Advocate is supported by a small team of staff in the Department of Communities and Justice,¹²¹⁹ and provides secretariat support to the NSW Youth Advisory Council.¹²²⁰ Notably, the Advocate's website has a New South Wales Government domain (www.acyp.nsw.gov.au) and both the Advocates' website and annual reports contain the New South Wales Government logo. B. The Advocate for Children and Young People in New South Wales: Further analysis

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs¹²⁶⁰

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles with respect to the establishment of NHRIs. However, there is some suggestion that the Advocate is not sufficiently distinguished as an independent state agency.

Entrenched in law¹²⁶¹

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.¹²⁶² The Advocate is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to the Act. The Act broadly sets out Advocate's functions and powers (see below). However, the Act also establishes a Parliamentary Joint Committee (the Committee) which monitors and reviews the actions of the Advocate,¹²⁶³ and the Advocate receives funding as part of the Department of Family and Community Services (FACS).¹²⁶⁴

Furthermore, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and the Advocate's employment is governed by a separate contract of employment between the Advocate and the Minister.¹²⁶⁵ The Act also provides that some of the provisions which govern the employment of public service senior executives under the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 (NSW)¹²⁶⁶ also apply to the Advocate.¹²⁶⁷

When considered as whole, these provisions might suggest that the Advocate is not sufficiently distinguished as an independent state agency.¹²⁶⁸

Mandate and powers¹²⁶⁹

The Act establishes clear general principles which guide the Advocate's role and functions, including:¹²⁷⁰

- the safety, welfare, and wellbeing of children are the paramount consideration;
- the views of children and young people are to be given serious consideration and taken into account; and
- a co-operative relationship between children and young people and their families and communities.

¹²⁷⁰ Advocate for Children and Young People Act 2014 (NSW) s 14.

The Act also sets out the specific functions of the Advocate, including:¹²⁷¹

- to advocate for and promote the safety, welfare and well-being of children and young people;
- to promote the participation of children and young people in the making of decisions that affect their lives and to encourage government and non-government agencies to seek the participation of children and young people appropriate to their age and maturity;
- to conduct special inquiries into issues affecting children and young people;
- to make recommendations to government and non-government agencies on legislation, reports, policies, practices, procedures and services affecting children and young people;
- to conduct, promote and monitor research into issues affecting children and young people;
- to promote the provision of information and advice to assist children and young people;
- to prepare, in consultation with the Minister, a 3-year strategic plan for children and young people in the State; and
- such other functions as are conferred or imposed on the Advocate by the Act or under this or any other Act.

In performing its functions, the Advocate must:¹²⁷²

- focus on systemic issues affecting children and young people;
- give priority to the interests and needs of vulnerable and disadvantaged children and young people,
- consult with children and young people from a broad range of backgrounds and age groups throughout the State;
- work co-operatively with other organisations that provide services to or represent the interests of children and young people; and
- work co-operatively with the Youth Advisory Council.

This mandate appears to be expressed in broad enough terms to give the public the protection of various human right standards, particularly those which relate to the “safety, welfare and well-being of children and young people”.

Appointment mechanisms¹²⁷³

The appointment mechanisms for the Advocate are not sufficiently transparent under the Act.¹²⁷⁴ This can be contrasted with the appointment mechanisms for the members of the Youth Advisory Council.¹²⁷⁵ With respect to the membership of the Council, the Act provides that members:

- must have such experience, skills and qualifications as the Minister considers necessary;¹²⁷⁶

- must reflect the diversity of young people in NSW;¹²⁷⁷ and
- at least 6 of the 12 part-time members appointed must be persons under the age of 25 years at the time of appointment.¹²⁷⁸

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)¹²⁷⁹

The Act expressly provides that the Advocate does not have the function of dealing directly with the complaints or concerns of particular children or young people.¹²⁸⁰ As part of the second reading speech for the Bill, it was explained that the Ombudsman would monitor complaints, while the Advocate would provide a systemic approach to ensure that children and young people are able to bring issues of concern to them.¹²⁸¹ As part of this role, the Advocate and the Ombudsman were set to work together on child friendly complaints standards.¹²⁸²

Furthermore, as part of the Advocate's power to conduct special inquiries,¹²⁸³ the Advocate may hold hearings and public seminars,¹²⁸⁴ request information and documents,¹²⁸⁵ and refer any findings or information to other investigative agencies such as the Commissioner of Police, the Ombudsman and FACS.¹²⁸⁶ These powers suggest at least partial compliance with the quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs.¹²⁸⁷

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.¹²⁸⁸ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).¹²⁸⁹

Competence and responsibilities¹²⁹⁰

As is described above, the Act sets out the broad mandate of the Advocate. This mandate allows the Advocate to advocate for the rights of children and young people,¹²⁹¹ conduct inquiries into issues affecting children and young people,¹²⁹² make recommendations to government and non-government agencies,¹²⁹³ and promote the interests and needs of vulnerable or disadvantage children.¹²⁹⁴

Functional immunity¹²⁹⁵

The Act provides that any matter or thing done or omitted to be done by the Advocate does not, if done in good faith for the purposes of executing the Act (or any other legislation), subject the Advocate to any action, liability, claim or demand.¹²⁹⁶ This protection also applies to Advocate's staff, the Youth Advisory Council and any advisory committees.¹²⁹⁷

Powers of investigations and inquiry¹²⁹⁸

The Advocate is vested with the competence to launch inquiries into any issue affecting children or young people.¹²⁹⁹ However, the Advocate may only do so by request to the Minister or on the Minister's own initiative.¹³⁰⁰ As part of an inquiry, the Advocate:

- may hold hearings or public seminars, conduct workshops or establish working groups and task forces for the purposes of a special inquiry.¹³⁰¹
- may give written notice requiring a person to give information or documents or attend a hearing, and any such person is under a duty to comply with the notice and to answer any question at the hearing.¹³⁰²

The Act also creates penalties (50 penalty units or imprisonment for 6 months, or both) to be imposed on persons providing the Advocate with false or misleading material.¹³⁰³

Part 5 of the Advocate for Children and Young People Act 2014 governs the Advocate's power of special inquiry.

In theory one of the main functions of the Advocate is to conduct special inquiries into issues affecting children and young people, and in addition to its annual report may also make a report to Parliament on any particular issue or general matter relating to the Advocate's functions, on his own initiative or as requested by the related Minister.

For the purpose of a special inquiry, the Advocate may hold hearings, consult with such persons as the Advocate thinks fit and require employees of government agencies to attend hearings or to provide specified information.

The Advocate conducts regular consultations in Juvenile Justice Centres and is trialling an exit interview program for young people leaving detention.

In reality, the powers of investigation and inquiry are largely only exercised jointly with other parties and are utilised through the Parliamentary Joint Committee on Children and Young

No systemic monitoring program is legislatively required. Only 6 results come up on the Parliament website for the Committee on Children and Young People, all regarding their annual report (rather than an investigation or inquiry).¹³⁰⁷ Since December 2018 the only inquiry being considered by Parliament is the Support for Children of Imprisoned Parents in New South Wales by the Committee on Children and Young People.¹³⁰⁸ Since March 2014 the only inquiries made are:¹³⁰⁹

- Support for Children of Imprisoned Parents in New South Wales (14/11/2019);
- 2020 Review of the annual reports and other matters of the Office of the Advocate for Children and Young People and the Office of the Children's Guardian (14/11/2019);
- 2018 Review of the Annual Report of the Advocate for Children and Young People and functions of the Children's Guardian (05/03/2018);
- Prevention of youth suicide in New South Wales (22/06/2017);
- 2017 Review of the Annual Reports of the Advocate for Children and Young People and the Children's Guardian (03/04/2017);
- Review of the 2015 Annual Report of the Advocate for Children and Young People (20/10/2015); and
- Sexualisation of children and young people (20/10/2015).

No special inquiries have been conducted since 2017, according to the annual reports since that time.¹³¹⁰ In the 2018 – 2019 reporting period, the Advocate made one submission to Government Inquiries - Review of Consent in Relation to Sexual Assault Offences.¹³¹¹

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.¹³¹² Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.¹³¹³

The Act contains no express references to international instruments and there is no legislative responsibility for the Advocate to encourage accession to any international human rights instruments. However, the Act empowers the Advocate to make recommendations to government and non-government agencies on legislation, reports, policies, practices, procedures and services affecting children and young people.¹³¹⁴ This power could arguably be used to encourage ratification or accession to international human rights instruments, provided that such instruments affect children and young people.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.¹³¹⁵ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.¹³¹⁶

In general, the Advocate's powers with respect to promoting the safety, welfare and well-being of children and young people are broad (see Item 1.3 above). The Advocate for Children and Young People is not required to report to any organisation or body beyond the NSW Parliament (annual report),¹³¹⁷ the Minister (special reports),¹³¹⁸ and the Secretary of FACS (for inquiry-related matters).¹³¹⁹ However, the language of the Act does not preclude other forms of interaction with the international human rights system. For example, s 15(2)(d) of the Act mandates that the Advocate must 'work co-operatively with other organisations that provide services to or represent the interests of children and young people'.

In practice, the Advocate shows some limited interaction with the international human rights system. For example:

- in November 2018, the Advocate launched an educational video resource that covers the meaning, history and significance of child rights and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child;¹³²⁰ and
- the Advocate holds registered training courses for teachers, helping the teachers to gain an understanding of the history of the child rights movement and the major rights embedded in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.¹³²¹

The work of the Advocate has been reviewed in 2020, and, in summary, the Advocate:¹³²²

- produced a disaster report, documenting the stories of young people during the bushfires;
- engaged with diverse groups of children and young people in face-to-face consultations and online;
- Visited every juvenile justice centre twice to conduct trial exist interviews, allowing these disadvantaged groups to express their views (in the 2018-2019 period, the Advocate consulted with 86 young people on what is working well and what is not working so well);
- Attending every meeting of and briefing the Youth Advisory Council, who provide advice to the Minister on issues, policies and laws.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Advocate largely complies with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.¹³²³ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.¹³²⁴

Under the Act, the Advocate must cooperate with other government and non-government agencies regarding issues or services affecting children and young people.¹³²⁵ Under this provision, the Minister must make arrangements for co-operation, including for access to information and documents, with the Minister to whom the government agency is responsible.¹³²⁶

In practice, the Advocate regularly consults with other organisations and bodies and has a number of formalised and workable relationships.¹³²⁷ Some recent examples include:

- the Advocate attends biannual members meetings of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand;¹³²⁸
- in 2017, the Advocate partnership with Multicultural NSW to create IDEATION – Creation your Campaign – a youth-led campaign to increase inclusion and a sense of belonging for all children and young people in NSW;¹³²⁹
- between November 2018 and January 2019, the Advocate partnered with the Coordinator-General for Refugee Resettlement in NSW, the Joint Party Working Group Refugee Youth Sub Group and Multicultural NSW to conduct a series of focus group style consultations with young refugees and asylum seekers;¹³³⁰ and

- in both 2017 and 2018, the Advocate delivered the NSW Children's Week Parliament program in partnership with the YMCA.¹³³¹

Furthermore, the Advocate (or its delegates) hold membership in or provide council to a number of government and non-government entities. These include the Youth Justice Coalition, NCOS Children Young People and Families Alliance, NSW Family Matters Collective, NESA's Board Endorsed Alternative Education Panel and the Social Innovation Council.¹³³²

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.¹³³³ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.¹³³⁴ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.¹³³⁵

One of the key functions of the Advocate to make recommendations to government and non-government agencies on legislation, reports, policies, practices, procedures, and services affecting children and young people.¹³³⁶

The Advocate must also prepare annual reports to Parliament each year.¹³³⁷ Under the Act, these reports should:¹³³⁸

- outline the Advocate's activities during that year;
- evaluate responses to its recommendations;
- set out recommendations for changes in laws or administrative action; and
- describe any requests made for special inquiries which were not approved by the Minister.

In addition to its annual reports, the Advocate:

- must prepare special reports on any particular issue or general matter requested by the Minister and may furnish these reports to Parliament;¹³³⁹ and
- may make a report on any particular issue or general matter relating to the Advocate's functions and may furnish that report to Parliament.¹³⁴⁰

The Minister must review a draft of any annual, special or general report to be furnished to Parliament and may provide comments.¹³⁴¹ The Advocate is not bound to amend the report

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI¹³⁴⁴

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of ensuring the pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.¹³⁴⁵ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism¹³⁴⁶

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the Advocate, it is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society.¹³⁴⁷ However, there are no clear requirements for the Advocate under the Act.

Staff of the Advocate

The FACS website states that the department is “committed to building a workplace culture that values diversity and inclusion” and that it actively promotes the employment of people with disability, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, members of the LGBTI community and other diversity groups.¹³⁴⁸

The Youth Advisory Council

Although the Advocate itself is a singular role, Part 4 of the Act establishes a Youth Advisory Council, which comprises of 12 part-time members appointed by the Minister and an ex-officio person appointed by the Advocate.¹³⁴⁹ While the Minister is responsible for appointing members, the Minister must consider any recommendations made by the Advocate in relation to the appointment of members.¹³⁵⁰

The Youth Advisory Council must consist of at least 6 people under the age of 25, and the appointments should reflect the diversity of young people in the State.¹³⁵¹ Each member may only hold office for a period of 2 years but is eligible for re-appointment.¹³⁵² Schedule 1 of the Act sets out extensive provisions relating to the membership and procedure of the Youth Advisory Council.

Under Part 4, the Advocate can also appoint any other advisory committees he or she considers appropriate to assist in the Advocate's functions.¹³⁵³ The Advocate has wide discretion and power when appointing members of any additional committees.

Full-time members¹³⁵⁴

The Advocate is required to hold office on a full-time basis, unless otherwise permitted by the Minister.¹³⁵⁵ This can be contrasted with the members of the Youth Advisory Council, who are part-time members.¹³⁵⁶

The Act sets out a specific duration for the Advocate's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years), with capacity for reappointment.¹³⁵⁷ Although the Paris Principles allow re-appointment, there should be mechanisms in place to ensure pluralism.¹³⁵⁸ The Act provides such mechanism by mandating that a person cannot be reappointed for more than 2 tenures as an Advocate (whether they are consecutive terms is irrelevant).¹³⁵⁹

The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Advocate holds office on the terms set out in a contract of employment between the Advocate and the Minister.¹³⁶⁰

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of the NHRI.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹³⁶¹

The Advocate is appointed by the Governor.¹³⁶² The Act does not mandate a clear selection and appointment process, which raises issues as to whether the appointment process is sufficiently 'clear, transparent, and participatory'.¹³⁶³ The appointment of staff of the Advocate is also up to the discretion of the Advocate, subject to the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 (NSW),¹³⁶⁴ and therefore lacks a transparent and prescribed process within the legislation.¹³⁶⁵

However, while the selection and appointment of the Advocate position lacks transparency under the Act, the selection process of the Youth Advisory Council mostly complies well with the Paris Principles requiring transparency.¹³⁶⁶ The twelve part-time members of the Youth Advisory Council are appointed by the Minister.¹³⁶⁷ The criteria for selection is well-contained within the legislation.¹³⁶⁸ The Minister must only appoint members who they consider have the skills, experience, and qualifications necessary for them to make a contribution to the work of the council.¹³⁶⁹ Six of those twelve members should be under 25 years old and the Council should reflect the diversity of young people within the State.¹³⁷⁰

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act should be better drafted in order to expressly comply with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

In order to maintain a NRHI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹³⁷¹

There is no legislative provision preventing a political representative from being appointed as the Advocate. As mentioned above, there is therefore a lack of transparency surrounding the Advocate selection and appointment process.

Notably, the Advocate's website has a New South Wales Government domain (www.acyp.nsw.gov.au) and both the Advocates' website and annual reports contain the New South Wales Government logo. This signalling may go towards undermining the perceived independence of the Advocate from Government.

Tenure¹³⁷²

The Act sets out a specific duration of the Advocate's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years).¹³⁷³ The Advocate is eligible for re-appointment but is not eligible to be appointed for more than 2 terms.¹³⁷⁴

The Governor has the power to remove the Advocate from office, but only for incompetence, incapacity or misbehaviour.¹³⁷⁵ While this technically complies with the Paris Principles, the Act itself does not expressly require the Governor to provide specific reasons for the dismissal, nor does the Act expressly provide the Advocate with an ability to contest any dismissal.

Recruitment¹³⁷⁶

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.¹³⁷⁷

The Advocate may employ staff in the public service under the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 (NSW)¹³⁷⁸ to enable the Advocate to exercise his or her functions.¹³⁷⁹

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹³⁸⁰

The statutory provisions do not provide an indication as to the source or amount of funding for the Advocate for Children and Young People,¹³⁸¹ however the Advocate's annual reports state that the Advocate's budget is part of the FACS operating budget.¹³⁸²

In general, there is some lack of transparency around the Advocate's budget and funding – for example, the Advocate's annual report for 2018-19 states that its operating budget is being reported as part of FAC's annual report,¹³⁸³ however the FACS annual report for 2018-19 states that the Advocate produced its own annual report containing financial statements.¹³⁸⁴ Despite this confusion, in 2018-19, the FACS annual report indicated a $50.5 million surplus, suggesting that the office of the Advocate is well funded and not lacking in budget.¹³⁸⁵

Furthermore, the NSW Budget Estimates for 2018-19 allocated $6.8 billion ($6.7 billion recurrent expenses and $119.4 million capital expenditure) to the FACS cluster (as a whole).¹³⁸⁶ One of the "key initiatives" listed in the Estimates (with respect to protecting vulnerable people from harm) is the allocation of $4.1 million for the Advocate to improve safety, welfare and wellbeing of all children and young people in New South Wales.¹³⁸⁷

NHRI staff and members¹³⁸⁸

The Advocate's remuneration, employment benefits and allowances are governed by the Government Sector Employment Act 2013 (NSW).¹³⁸⁹ FACS publishes workforce data, such as executive grades and remuneration, in its annual reports.

Accessibility and communications infrastructure¹³⁹⁰

In the course of its functions, the Advocate is required to maintain engagement with a broad cross section of the community, including children from a broad range of backgrounds and age groups.¹³⁹¹ The office of the Advocate can also provide children, young people and their families, friends and advocates with information about and referral to government and non-government programs and services.¹³⁹²

As part of these roles, the Advocate maintains a communications system for general enquiries. This system includes a telephone line, email address and mailing address. However, we note that there is a wait time of up to 2 weeks for enquiries sent by emails.¹³⁹³

The Advocate's website is also made more accessible by providing a quick button function to translate it into over 100 different languages.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to prepare, publicise, and submit an annual report on its activities and recommendations, to assess how well it has furthered its mandate that year.¹³⁹⁴ The report can include recommendations, opinions, proposals, or to address human rights concerns. Reporting is an essential aspect of ensuring the accountability of an independent agency.¹³⁹⁵

The Advocate must prepare annual reports to Parliament each year.¹³⁹⁶ Under the Act, these reports should:¹³⁹⁷

- outline the Advocate's activities during that year;
- evaluate responses to its recommendations;
- set out recommendations for changes in laws or administrative action; and
- describe any requests made for special inquiries which were not approved by the Minister.

The Minister must review a draft of any annual report to be furnished to Parliament and may provide comments.¹³⁹⁸ The Advocate is not bound to amend the report based on this review but must consider any comments before furnishing the report to Parliament.¹³⁹⁹

The Advocate makes its annual reports available on its website.¹⁴⁰⁰ The 2018-19 Annual Report can be accessed here.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

We have been unable to locate any specific criticisms about this role.

The Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory noted that the Advocate does not have an individual complaints resolution and investigatory function (unlike the equivalent bodies in the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory).¹⁴⁰¹

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Advocate's functions are set out in broad terms,¹⁴⁰² which gives the Advocate a wide scope to promote human rights with respect to children.
- The Act sets out transparent criteria for the appointment of Youth Advisory Council members,¹⁴⁰³ and upholds the Paris Principles with respect to pluralism by:¹⁴⁰⁴

C. The Advocate for Children and Young People in New South Wales: Impacts

In its 2018/2019 Annual Report, which was received by Parliament on 1 October 2019, the Advocate sets out the following statistics for the reporting year:

- the Advocate released three reports;¹⁴¹⁰
- the Advocate made one submission to a Government Inquiry;¹⁴¹¹
- the Advocate attended or held 393 meetings, forums, seminars and related events;¹⁴¹²
- the Advocate made no independent recommendations (outside of its usual government consultation process);¹⁴¹³ and
- the Advocate received no responses to recommendations, other than the tabling of its annual report.¹⁴¹⁴

4 Strategic Plan for Children and Young People

Pursuant to s 15(1)(g) of the Act, one of the main functions of the Advocate is to prepare, in consultation with the Minister, a three-year strategic plan for children and young people in NSW.

On 26 July 2016, the NSW Government officially launched the first legislated Strategic Plan for Children and Young People, which applies to the whole of government.¹⁴¹⁵ The plan captures the government's priorities and initiatives with respect to children and young people and provides a common set of agreed objectives and indicators against which NSW Government policies and services for children and young people can be aligned.

The goal of the plan was for children and young people in NSW to be safe, connected, respected, healthy and well, with opportunities to thrive and have their voice heard in their communities.¹⁴¹⁶

As part of developing the plan, the Advocate consulted with more than 4,000 children and young people to inform the themes and directions of the plan. These themes relate to ensuring that children and young people are safe, connected, respected, have opportunities, are healthy and well and have a voice in decisions that affect them.¹⁴¹⁷ In addition to publishing the strategic

5 Consultations

Throughout the 2018/2019 reporting period, the Advocate held a number of targeted consultations with children and young people across NSW.¹⁴¹⁹ We have summarised some of these consultations below.

5.1 Regional consultations¹⁴²⁰

In late July and early August 2018, the Advocate worked with the Department of Premier and Cabinet to conduct 26 workshops with 640 children across regional NSW in order to prepare a Regional Youth Strategy for NSW.

5.2 Refugee consultations¹⁴²¹

Between November 2018 and January 2019, the Advocate partnered with the Coordinator-General for Refugee Resettlement in NSW, the Joint Party Working Group Refugee Youth Sub Group and Multicultural NSW to conduct a series of 36 focus group consultations with 176 young refugees and asylum seekers. These consultations were held to gain insights which could be used to inform the NSW Government's Refugee Youth Policy Initiative.

5.3 Juvenile Justice consultations¹⁴²²

During the reporting period, the Advocate conducted consultations with 86 young people in the Acmena, Riverina, Cobham, and Orana Juvenile Justice Centres. These consultations formed part of a wider series of consultations being held across Juvenile Justice Centres, in which the Advocate has consulted with over 242 young people. The consultations focus on what services, programs, and supports the young people thought would be helpful to young people prior to coming into custody, whilst they are in custody, and when they return to the community.

5.4 Aboriginal children and young people – Nations of Origin¹⁴²³

From 16 to 18 July 2018, the Advocate attended the PCYC Nations of Origin event, an annual sport, cultural, education and leadership program with a focus on cultural identity. The Advocate undertook consultations about community and culture with 354 young people from regional and urban areas across a number of netball, football and rugby league tournaments.

6 Key Reports

6.1 Children and Young People's Experience of Disaster Report (2020)¹⁴²⁴

The Advocate recently visited bushfire and flood affected areas of NSW and spoke to more than 400 children and young people about their experiences. In addition to these face-to-face consultations, the Advocate conducted quantitative polling of a further 1,000 children and young people. The feedback from this process formed the basis of the Children and Young People's

- how best to support their needs before, during and after disaster; and
- the ways in which children and young people want to be included in the planning and implementation of solutions as to preparing for and recovering from disaster.

The report makes a number of recommendations across ten key areas, including community recovery and raising awareness.

6.2 Mental health and wellbeing needs of children and young people Report (2019)¹⁴²⁵

In 2019, the Advocate held face-to-face consultations with more than 10,000 children and young people and conducted online polling of a further 2,000 children and young people in order to report on the mental health and wellbeing needs of children and young people. Through this process, children and young people gave detailed feedback and provided recommendations about how best to support and improve the mental health and wellbeing of children and young people. The report makes a number of recommendations, which are broken down into the following key areas:

- access to information;
- schools;
- health and community services; and
- the broader community.

6.3 What Aboriginal children and young people have to say Report (2019)¹⁴²⁶

In 2019, the Advocate held face-to-face consultations with 2,800 Aboriginal children and young people. These consultations formed the basis of a report, which set out 38 recommendations across the following key areas:

- connection to culture;
- racism and discrimination;
- education;
- accessible activities and programs;
- supportive workers and services; and
- justice.

B. Western Australia: The Commissioner for Children and Young People: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs

Summary: The Act partially complies with this requirement, as whilst enacting legislation exists it lacks sufficient detail

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.¹⁴³⁸

Entrenched in law¹⁴³⁹

The Commissioner for Children and Young People is established pursuant to section 6(1) of the Act.

Mandate and powers¹⁴⁴⁰

Functions of the office are specifically set out in section 19 of the Act and matters relevant to the performance of the functions are set out in section 20. The office of the Commissioner is given broad power by the Act to do all things necessary or convenient to be done for or in connection with the performance of the Commissioner's functions.¹⁴⁴¹ No specific mandate is set out in the Act.

The office of the Commissioner makes a series of high-level statements about the role, which don't provide much detail¹⁴⁴². However, usefully the office of the Commissioner releases 5-year plans, which outlines the "approach and priorities" for the period.

Appointment mechanisms¹⁴⁴³

A person is to be appointed to the position of Commissioner for Children and Young People by the Governor by commission under the Public Seal of the State on the recommendation of the ¹⁴³⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

¹⁴⁴⁰ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

¹⁴⁴¹ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 21(1).

¹⁴⁴³ See GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

Premier.¹⁴⁴⁴ The Act also sets out circumstances where the Commissioner may be either suspended or removed from office,¹⁴⁴⁵ and the term of office for the Commissioner.¹⁴⁴⁶

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)¹⁴⁴⁷

Some complaints oversight functions have been included in the Act as follows:

- to monitor the way in which a government agency investigates or otherwise deals with a complaint made by a child or young person and the outcome of the complaint; and
- to monitor the trends in complaints made by children and young people to government agencies.¹⁴⁴⁸

The Act otherwise specifically excludes the Commissioner from investigating or otherwise dealing with a complaint made by or relating to a particular child or young person.¹⁴⁴⁹

1.2 Human rights mandate¹⁴⁵⁰

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant in this respect, with a special investigative power and broad mandate

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.¹⁴⁵¹ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).¹⁴⁵²

Competence and responsibilities¹⁴⁵³

Functions of the Commissioner include:

- to initiate and conduct inquiries into any matter, including any written law or any practice, procedure or service, affecting the wellbeing of children and young people;
- to monitor and review written laws, draft laws, policies, practices and services affecting the wellbeing of children and young people;
- to promote public awareness and understanding of matters relating to the wellbeing of children and young people;
- to consider, and make recommendations in relation to, any written laws, draft laws, reports, policies, practices, procedures or other matters relating to the wellbeing of children and young people that are referred to the Commissioner by the Minister or the Standing Committee; and

- to conduct, coordinate, sponsor, participate in and promote research into matters relating to the wellbeing of children and young people.¹⁴⁵⁴

The Commissioner holds a broad power to “do all things necessary or convenient to be done for or in connection with the performance of the Commissioner’s functions.”¹⁴⁵⁵

Functional immunity

Under section 59 of the Act an action in tort does not lie against a person for anything that the person has done (or omitted to do), in good faith, in the performance or purported performance of a function under the Act. Similar relief from liability is also afforded to the State.¹⁴⁵⁶

In addition, the general protection from civil liability for public servants may be available under the Civil Liability Act 2002 (WA).¹⁴⁵⁷

Powers of investigation and inquiry

As discussed above, the Act specifically excludes the Commissioner from investigating or otherwise dealing with a complaint made by or relating to a particular child or young person.¹⁴⁵⁸

The Commissioner holds a power of special inquiry, allowing the Commissioner to investigate any matter affecting the wellbeing of children and young people on the Commissioner’s own motion.¹⁴⁵⁹ The Commissioner holds broad powers in conducting these special inquiries, and may enter premises,¹⁴⁶⁰ conduct hearings, compel the attendance of persons and require the production of documents.¹⁴⁶¹ These powers are augmented by significant enforcement measures. A person may face a fine of $12,000 or 12-months imprisonment for failing to attend or produce a document, and a person may not refuse to answer questions on the basis of self-incrimination.¹⁴⁶²

The Commissioner is also empowered to contribute to inquiries conducted by other entities. In its 2019 Annual Report the office of the Commissioner reported that it had made 31 submissions to other inquiries, including to:

- Review of the Carers Recognition Act 2004;
- UN CRC Alternate Report – Child Rights Taskforce; and
- Productivity Commission Inquiry – Social and economic benefits of improving mental health.

While the Commissioner must seek approval of the Minister prior to conducting a special enquiry under the Act, there does not appear to be a legislative right for the Minister to stop the Commissioner from conducting such an enquiry.¹⁴⁶³

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, as requiring only observance of international rights instruments

¹⁴⁵⁴ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 19.

¹⁴⁵⁶ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 59(2).

¹⁴⁵⁷ Either under subsection (e) or (g) of the definition of “public body or officer” in section 5U of the Civil Liability Act 2002 (WA).

¹⁴⁶² Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) ss 34, 35.

¹⁴⁶³ Th Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) ss 29, 30.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.¹⁴⁶⁴ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.¹⁴⁶⁵

The Act specifically requires the Commissioner, in performing its functions, to, among other things, have regard to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.¹⁴⁶⁶

The Commissioner has a history of advocating for human rights, including in:

- 2012 to the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Legislation Committee on the Inquiry into the Australian Human Rights Commission Amendment Bill 2012;¹⁴⁶⁷
- 2014 to the Australian Human Rights Commission on the National Inquiry into Children in Immigration Detention 2014;¹⁴⁶⁸ and
- 2018 to the Human Rights Commission on the Protecting the Human Rights of People Born with Variations in Sex Characteristics Project.¹⁴⁶⁹

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is not compliant in this respect, as it lacks any formal requirement for engagement with the international human rights system beyond compliance with certain instruments.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.¹⁴⁷⁰ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.¹⁴⁷¹

The Commissioner does not hold any specific legislative function or power to engage with the international human rights system. Whilst the Commissioner must promote children's rights and conduct research into matters affecting children, which may involve engaging with international actors, the lack of any formal requirement fails to satisfy the relevant criteria.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Act appears substantially complaint, in actively engaging with relevant human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.¹⁴⁷² This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.¹⁴⁷³

The Commissioner has an active history of advocating for human rights. In particular, the office of the Commissioner has:

- Established two Advisory Committees with representatives from Bunbury and the Perth metropolitan area who advised the Commissioner on the wellbeing needs and experiences of lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans or intersex (LGBTI) children and young people;¹⁴⁷⁴
- meets twice per year with the Australian and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians Group, consisting of each Australian state and territory Child Guardian and/or Commissioner office and the New Zealand National Commissioner;¹⁴⁷⁵
- chaired the "Responses to Child Sexual Abuse in Western Australia Executive Steering Group", a consortium of non-government service providers, government agencies and the Australian Centre for Child Protection in relation to improving responses to child sexual abuse;¹⁴⁷⁶ and
- engages with and provides submissions to organisations that promote human rights, including the Child Rights Taskforce of the United Nations, Office of Advocacy and Accountability in Aboriginal Affairs in WA (Department of Premier and Cabinet), the Australian Human Rights Commission, Law Reform Commission and the Mental Health Commission.¹⁴⁷⁷

Summary: the Act appears partially compliant with this requirement, in holding a general recommendation power without follow up provisions.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.¹⁴⁷⁸ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.¹⁴⁷⁹ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.¹⁴⁸⁰

In its 5 year plan, called "Our approach and priorities 2016 – 2020", one of the three key platforms for the office of the Commissioner is its role in monitoring and advocacy.¹⁴⁸¹ In particular, the office of the Commissioner has undertaken generally to promote and monitor recommendations of published reports by the Commissioner for Children and Young People.¹⁴⁸²

Examples of this monitoring work include:

- In late 2018 the Commissioner invited children and young people with experience of family separation to share their views as part of the national review of the family law system. The Commissioner published his recommendations and the views of young people in the Speaking Out About Family Separation report. The report was submitted to the Australian Law Reform Commission and the Family Court of Western Australia. The Commissioner has undertaken to monitor the Australian Law Reform Commission's findings and the implementation of their recommendations within WA;¹⁴⁸³

- In February 2019, the State Coroner released the Inquest into the deaths of thirteen children and young people in the Kimberley Region. The Commissioner provided feedback and input to the State Government's response to the Coroner's Inquest. The Commissioner has undertaken to continue to monitor and strongly advocate for the implementation of effective strategies in this area;¹⁴⁸⁴
- In 2019 the Commissioner published findings and recommendations in the report "Improving the odds for WA's vulnerable children and young people". The Commissioner has undertaken to monitor progress on his recommendations and to continue to work with relevant agencies.¹⁴⁸⁵

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI¹⁴⁸⁶

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, with insufficient requirement to consult in appointing the Commissioner

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.¹⁴⁸⁷ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism

In appointing the Commissioner, the WA Premier must:¹⁴⁸⁸

- advertise throughout Australia for expressions of interest from people with professional qualifications and substantive experience in matters affecting children; and
- consult with the leader of any political party with at least 2 members in either House.

Whilst difficult, it is still possible to achieve pluralism in the context of a single-person role. However, the requirement to consult only with members of political parties is not sufficient to promote pluralism. The Act also provides a requirement for children and young people to be involved in the selection of the Commissioner.¹⁴⁸⁹ The method by which this occurs is unclear.

The Commissioner may also appoint Ambassadors, who represent diverse backgrounds and presently include several people who identify as African and Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander.¹⁴⁹⁰ Of the 15 Ambassadors, 50% are women.

Further, given staff are engaged via the WA government jobs website, it is subject to their stated policies on diversity.¹⁴⁹¹

Full time members

Section 10 of the Act provides that the Commissioner is to be appointed on a full-time basis.

Recruitment and retention

The Act provides that staff are to be appointed or made available under the Public Sector Management Act 1994 (WA) to enable the Commissioner to perform his or her functions.¹⁴⁹²

While broadly this appears to grant the Commissioner the right to the staff needed to fulfil the role of the office, in the case that public service staff are to be made available, the Commissioner must do so by arrangement with the relevant employer.¹⁴⁹³

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant as requiring the creation of a range of decision-making entities, and requiring representation in the makeup of these entities.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹⁴⁹⁴

The Premier of WA appoints the Commissioner.¹⁴⁹⁵ The Act only prescribes that the Premier, before making a recommendation, advertises “throughout Australia for expressions of interest from people with professional qualifications and substantive experience in matters affecting children” and “consult with the leader of any political party with at least 2 members in either House”.¹⁴⁹⁶

The Act requires the creation of a standing Parliamentary standing committee comprising an equal number of members appointed from each House.¹⁴⁹⁷ The Standing Committee may request advice from the Commissioner on issues relating to children and young people and refer legislation, reports, policies and procedures to the Commissioner for consideration.

The Commissioner may also establish advisory committees and reference groups to assist with the performance of the Commissioner’s functions.¹⁴⁹⁸ These advisory committees should include representatives of non-government agencies concerned with the rights, interests and wellbeing of children and young people. The Commissioner must also establish advisory committees consisting of children and young people, who the Commissioner considers are from a broad range of socio-economic and cultural backgrounds and age groups, to assist in the performance of the Commissioner’s functions.¹⁴⁹⁹ These committees should be established in regional areas as well as the metropolitan area.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with this requirement.

In order to maintain a NHRI’s structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹⁵⁰⁰ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

¹⁴⁹⁹ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 52(2).

¹⁵⁰⁰ Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism, 3(e).

The Act states that the Commissioner is not subject to direction by the Minister or any other person in the performance of their duty,¹⁵⁰¹ except as specified in the Act. The Minister may give directions on matters of general policy relevant to the exercise of the Commissioner's functions.¹⁵⁰² Further, with the authorisation of the Governor, the Commissioner may hold another "office of profit or trust".¹⁵⁰³

Further, If a person was engaged by the public service prior to appointment as Commissioner, and the office held by that person expires by effluxion of time and he or she is not reappointed as Commissioner, then that person is entitled to be appointed to an office under the Public Sector Management Act 1994 of at least the equivalent level of classification as the office that person occupied immediately prior to appointment as Commissioner.¹⁵⁰⁴ Under the Act, prior service as a public servant will be treated as continuous service as Commissioner.¹⁵⁰⁵

In practice, the current Commissioner has been a senior public servant for some time, including:

- as a teacher and then principal in a number of regional schools in Western Australia;
- Executive Director Regional and Remote Education at the Western Australian Department of Education (for three years); and
- Secretary of Education for the Tasmanian Department of Education.¹⁵⁰⁶

Tenure

The Commissioner is appointed for a term of no longer than 5 years and is eligible for reappointment once.¹⁵⁰⁷ The Commissioner may be suspended or removed from office by both houses of WA parliament¹⁵⁰⁸ or suspended where the Governor is satisfied that the Commissioner is incapable of properly performing its duties of office, has shown themselves to be incompetent to properly to perform, or has neglected, their duties or is guilty of misconduct.¹⁵⁰⁹ Whether any of these events occurs is at the discretion of the Governor and is accordingly highly subjective, however, such a decision is temporary until a motion confirming the decision is moved in both houses of parliament.¹⁵¹⁰

Recruitment

As discussed above, the Act only prescribes that the Premier, before making a recommendation, advertises "throughout Australia for expressions of interest from people with professional qualifications and substantive experience in matters affecting children" and "consult with the leader of any political party with at least 2 members in either House".¹⁵¹¹

The Act does not further prescribe how the Premier should exercise its appointment discretion and no information has otherwise been provided detailing how the recruitment of the Commissioner occurs in practice.

¹⁵¹⁰ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 8(2).

¹⁵¹¹ Commissioner for Children and Young People Act 2006 (WA) s 8(2).

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹⁵¹²

Remuneration

The Act is limited in relation to remuneration, only going as far as to state that the remuneration and allowances of the Commissioner are to be determined by the Governor.¹⁵¹³

The Act does provide that the remuneration, allowances and conditions must not be changed while the Commissioner is in office so as to become less favourable to the Commissioner.¹⁵¹⁴

Funding

The Joint Standing Committee on the Commissioner for Children and Young People has oversight over the office of the Commissioner. The Treasurer of the WA Government sets the budget, having regard to any recommendation by the Standing Committee.¹⁵¹⁵

The Act does not otherwise prescribe how the Treasurer should set the budget of the office of the Commissioner, or how the budget should be utilised by the Commissioner.

Based on financial statements in the office of the Commissioner's 2019 annual report, the budget appears to have been approx. $3m from the WA state government in the FY19 financial year.¹⁵¹⁶ This budget is approximately $200k lower than for the FY18 financial year.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is complaint in this respect, holding an annual reporting power.

The Commissioner is required to prepare an annual report as to the Commissioner's general activities during the financial year.¹⁵¹⁷ Reports are public on the Commissioners website.¹⁵¹⁸

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

None about the role of Commissioner.

A criticism was made of the Act in 2007. The role of Commissioner arose from recommendations made in the 2003 Gordon Inquiry into child sex abuse and violence in Aboriginal communities in Western Australia. An additional recommendation was for the establishment of a Deputy Children's Commissioner with responsibility for issues in relation to Aboriginal children, in light of the particular vulnerability of Aboriginal children.¹⁵¹⁹ This was not followed.

Groups such as the Perth Aboriginal Women's Network have criticised the Act, and argued that there was insufficient pre-legislative consultation, especially with Aboriginal women's groups.

A review of the Act was undertaken in 2013. The Review made 16 recommendations, mostly clarifying administrative aspects of the Act.¹⁵²⁰

The recommendations also include that the Commissioner should not have a role in investigating individual child abuse complaints, as it would duplicate the role of existing investigative bodies..

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commissioner has a very strong advocacy role and, in addition to preparing submissions on various inquiries and professional bodies, the Commissioner consults widely with children and young people in the community, travelling extensively throughout WA to listen directly to the opinions of young people. This kind of direct involvement is effective in informing the Commissioner on issues which may be specific to a particular generation (for example, the emergence of cyber bullying) and appears to have worked effectively in WA.¹⁵²¹
- Annual reporting by the Commissioner is to a high standard. It is comprehensive and professional.
- Broad power to conduct special enquiries and require attendance or production of documents.¹⁵²²

The roles are partially compliant with the Paris Principles, however there are significant gaps: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The role of the CACYP not expressly enshrined in legislation (while the role of the CCYP is). The role of the CACYP is currently filled by an identified Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person with appropriate qualifications, knowledge and experience, however: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> this is not a mandated requirement for the position; and the appointment process is not transparent (for either the CACYP or the CCYP).¹⁵²⁶ The role of the Commission and of the CCYP is relatively clear under the Act, however the functions and powers of the CACYP are not clearly defined. The interaction of the two Commissioner roles is also unclear, with some resources suggesting they are side-by-side roles and others suggesting that the CACYP reports to the CCYP. While the Commission has own-motion powers of inquiry, the inquiries are limited to specific issues, and the power to compel access to information during an inquiry is limited to specific Departments and services. The Act provides some functional immunity for the Commissioners, by including a specified term and limited

B. The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and The Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People in Victoria: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs¹⁵⁶³

Summary: the Act is sparsely drafted and largely does not comply with the Paris Principles with respect to the establishment of NHRIs. This is particularly so for the role of the CACYP, which isn't explicitly recognised by the Act (other than under the broad provisions relating to "additional Commissioners")

Entrenched in law¹⁵⁶⁴

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.¹⁵⁶⁵ While both the Commission and the CCYP are legislatively enshrined in the Act,¹⁵⁶⁶ the CACYP was established under the broad powers to appoint an additional Commissioner¹⁵⁶⁷ and, therefore, the role is not formally entrenched in law.

Mandate and powers¹⁵⁶⁸

The Act sets out the specific functions of the Commission and the CCYP, including:¹⁵⁶⁹

- to provide advice to Ministers, Government Departments, health services and human services about policies, practices and the provision of services relating to the safety or wellbeing of vulnerable children and young persons;
- to promote the interests of vulnerable children and young persons in the Victorian community;
- to monitor and report to Ministers on the implementation and effectiveness of strategies relating to the safety or wellbeing of vulnerable children and young persons;
- to provide advice and recommendations to the Minister about child safety issues, at the request of the Minister;
- to promote child-friendly and child-safe practices in the Victorian community;
- the functions relating to working with children conferred by Part 3 of the Act;
- the functions relating to out of home care conferred by Part 4 of the Act;
- the functions relating to inquiries conferred by Part 5 of the Act;
- any other functions conferred on the Commission by or under this Act or any other Act.

The Part 3 functions referred to above are:

- to review and report on the administration of the Working with Children Act 2005; and ¹⁵⁶³ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

¹⁵⁶⁴ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

¹⁵⁶⁵ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

¹⁵⁶⁶ Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) s 6.

¹⁵⁶⁷ Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) s 12.

¹⁵⁶⁸ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

¹⁵⁶⁹ Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) s 8(1).

- in consultation with the Secretary to the Department of Justice, to educate and inform the community about that Act.¹⁵⁷⁰

The Part 4 functions referred to above are:

- to promote the provision of out of home care services that encourage the active participation of those children in the making of decisions that affect them;
- to advise the Minister and the Secretary on the performance of out of home care services; and
- at the request of the Minister, to investigate and report on an out of home care service.¹⁵⁷¹

In the exercise of these functions, the CCYP and the Commission must:

- act independently and impartially; and
- when performing a function in relation to a vulnerable child or young person, perform the function for the purpose of promoting the best interests of the child or person.¹⁵⁷²

While the Act broadly sets out the powers of the Commission and CCYP, the CACYP's mandate is not entirely clear. It appears that the functions of the CACYP are those that are deemed appropriate between the CCYP and the CACYP. The best articulations of the CACYP's mandate and powers are found within the Commission's Annual Reports,¹⁵⁷³ and job listings.¹⁵⁷⁴ In addition, it is unclear whether the role of CACYP sits alongside the CCYP, or whether the CACYP reports directly to the CCYP.¹⁵⁷⁵

Appointment mechanisms¹⁵⁷⁶

The appointment process is not transparent for either the CACYP or the CCYP.¹⁵⁷⁷ The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, appoint a person as the CCYP or CACYP.¹⁵⁷⁸ The only clear requirement is that the person is "qualified for appointment as a Commissioner because of his or her knowledge and experience".¹⁵⁷⁹

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)¹⁵⁸⁰

The Act does not set out an ability for the Commission, CCYP or CACYP to receive or investigate complaints. In fact, the Commission's website and resources expressly state that the Commission is not a formal complaints handling body and refer complainants on to the

1.2 Human rights mandate

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of the Commission's human rights mandate. While the Act provides the Commission with inquiry powers and some functional immunity, these are limited by other provisions and qualifications contained within the Act.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.¹⁵⁸² On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).¹⁵⁸³

Competence and responsibilities¹⁵⁸⁴

As is set out above, the Act sets out a broad mandate for the CCYP and the Commission. This mandate allows the CCYP to promote the interests of vulnerable children and young persons, monitor and report to Ministers on strategies relating to the safety or wellbeing of vulnerable children and young persons, provide advice and recommendations (upon request by the Minister) and promote child-friendly and child-safe practices in the community.¹⁵⁸⁵

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The CCYP and Commission are also vested with the competence to launch inquiries.¹⁵⁸⁶ The Commission's inquiry powers are able to be exercised without a Ministerial recommendation. However, the Commission's own-motion powers are limited to inquiries concerning:

- the death of child protection clients;¹⁵⁸⁷
- children or young persons; and
- the provision of services (where a persistent or recurring systemic issue is identified).¹⁵⁸⁸

Furthermore, while the Commission must be given access to information reasonably required in relation to any person or service that is the subject of an inquiry, this access is limited to information, documents or records held by three specified Departments, three specific services, or a school.¹⁵⁸⁹

The Commission may also request a health, welfare or education professional to provide any information reasonably required in relation to any person or service that is the subject of an ¹⁵⁸⁶ Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) Part 5.

¹⁵⁸⁷ As above, a child protection client is a person who is the subject of a report under ss 28, 33(2), 183 or 184 of the Children, Youth and Families Act 2005 and the Secretary has not recorded that the person's case is closed. In practical terms, these are children that have had reports made about them due to significant concern for their wellbeing or a perceived need for protection.

The relevant services are registered community services, health services and human services.

inquiry.¹⁵⁹⁰ However, the Act does not compel disclosure by the relevant professional (they are only compelled to have regard to certain matters in determining whether to disclose).¹⁵⁹¹

Despite this discretion, the Act does attempt to persuade professionals to disclose by providing that a disclosure made to the Commission in good faith by a relevant professional does not constitute unprofessional conduct or a breach of professional ethics and does not make the relevant professional subject to any liability.¹⁵⁹²

Functional immunity¹⁵⁹³

Unlike other Australian jurisdictions,¹⁵⁹⁴ the Act does not expressly provide protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith by the Commission, CCYP or CACYP.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.¹⁵⁹⁵ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.¹⁵⁹⁶

The Act does not explicitly reference international human rights standards and/or instruments. However, the functions of the Commission include:

- providing advice to Ministers, Government Departments, health services and human services about policies and practices;¹⁵⁹⁷ and
- monitoring and reporting to Minister on the implementation and effectiveness of strategies relating to the safety or wellbeing of vulnerable children and young persons.¹⁵⁹⁸

Arguably, these functions could be used to:

- review policies, practices and strategies to determine whether they are compatible with any obligations arising from international human rights standards; and
- propose the amendment or repeal of any policies, practices or strategies that are inconsistent with the requirements of these standards.¹⁵⁹⁹

In fact, the Commission has a history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters. For instance:

- in January 2016, the Commission wrote to Senator George Brandis about the progress of the Expatriate Adoption Working Group, and referenced compliance with the Hague

- in 2019, the Commission wrote to Corrections Victoria during public consultation on the proposed Corrections Regulations 2019. In its letter, the Commission referred to a number of human rights instruments, such as:¹⁶⁰³
 - the Convention on the Rights of the Child;
 - the United Nations Rules for the Protection of Juveniles Deprived of their Liberty;
 - the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Administration of Juvenile Justice;
 - the Victoria Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities; and
 - the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.¹⁶⁰⁴ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.¹⁶⁰⁵

While there are no human rights or convention references in the Act, the Commission's own Fact Sheet asserts that in delivering its functions, the Commission applies a "rights-based approach" to its work, "drawing on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and Victoria's Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities".¹⁶⁰⁶ The Commission also expressly lists the Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Vic) as one of the pieces of legislation that guides the Commission's day to day work.¹⁶⁰⁷

Furthermore, the Commission's most recent Annual Report indicates the Commission's desire to engage with newly ratified conventions like OPCAT, as well as well-founded Conventions like the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.¹⁶⁰⁸ The Commission's recent history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters is detailed above.

One of the functions of the Commission is to provide advice and recommendations to the Minister about child safety issues, at the request of the Minister.¹⁶⁰⁹ This function must be exercised independently and impartially.¹⁶¹⁰ Therefore, the Commission could arguably express its independent opinion on a report to be submitted to the United Nations bodies and committees,¹⁶¹¹ provided such opinion was:

- requested by the Minister; and
- related to child safety issues.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: in practice, the CCYP and CACYP largely comply with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.¹⁶¹² This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.¹⁶¹³

While the Act does not expressly mandate cooperation with other entities, in practice, the Commission maintains consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.¹⁶¹⁴ For example:

- the CCYP attends biannual members meetings of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand;¹⁶¹⁵
- the Commission commenced a joint taskforce with the Department of Justice and Community Safety to conduct a systemic inquiry into the over-representation of Aboriginal children and young people in Victoria's youth justice system;¹⁶¹⁶
- the Commission partnered with the Victorian Equal Opportunity and Human Rights Commission to undertake a project to promote the importance of cultural connection and

- the CACYP commenced a taskforce with the Department of Health and Human Services, Aboriginal community controlled organisations and community service organisations to examine the treatment of almost 1000 Aboriginal children in out-of-home care.¹⁶¹⁸

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.¹⁶¹⁹ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.¹⁶²⁰ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.¹⁶²¹

The Act provides that the Commission may provide advice and recommendations to the Minister about child safety issues, at the request of the Minister.¹⁶²² While it appears that the Commission may only make recommendations with the Minister's permission, the Commission is also vested with inquiry and reporting powers,¹⁶²³ and may provide advice to Ministers, Government Departments, health services and human services about policies, practices and the provision of services relating to the safety or wellbeing of vulnerable children and young persons.¹⁶²⁴

On completing an inquiry under the Act, the Commission must give a report of the inquiry to the Minister and the Secretary.¹⁶²⁵ The Commission must also give a copy of the report to any responsible Minister.¹⁶²⁶ The Commission may not give a report of an inquiry to a Minister or the Secretary if it contains any adverse comment or opinion on any person or specified service¹⁶²⁷ and that person or service has not had an opportunity to comment.¹⁶²⁸

If at least 14 days have elapsed after an inquiry report is provided to a Minister and the Secretary, the Commission may give a copy of the report to the clerk of each House of the Parliament of Victoria (unless it contains identifying information).¹⁶²⁹ Once a copy of the report has been given to the Parliament, the Commission may publish a copy of the report given to the Parliament on an "appropriate Internet site".¹⁶³⁰ In practice, once the Commission's inquiries reports have been tabled in Victorian Parliament, they are usually accompanied by a media release.¹⁶³¹

- the Ombudsman;
- the Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission established under the Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission Act 2011 (Vic);
- a coroner;

- the Mental Health Complaints Commissioner within the meaning of the Mental Health Act 2014 (Vic).

The Commission may also disclose to the Minister or the Secretary “any information acquired by the Commission in performing its functions and exercising its powers” under the Act (or under any other Act).¹⁶³³

In addition to its inquiry reports, the Commission also prepares an annual report under the Act.¹⁶³⁴

Publication in practice¹⁶³⁵

The Commission regularly publishes its systemic inquiries reports on its website.¹⁶³⁶ These reports usually contain a number of recommendations for improvement, and the Commission also publishes information on the responses to these recommendations on its website.¹⁶³⁷

The following inquiries are not public documents and are not published on the Commission's website:

- inquiries about the safety or wellbeing of an individual or group of vulnerable children and young people;¹⁶³⁸
- Ministerial inquiries;¹⁶³⁹ and

- child death inquiry reports.¹⁶⁴⁰

However, the Commission sometimes publishes de-identified summaries of these child safety and wellbeing inquiries in its annual reports.¹⁶⁴¹ Furthermore, the Minister may decide whether to make Ministerial inquiries public in full or in part.¹⁶⁴²

The Commission is also active in making submissions on policy and law reform relating to issues affecting children and young people (including submissions to government bodies and agencies). The Commission openly publishes its key submissions on its website (with the exception of submissions in relation to draft legislation, which are Cabinet in Confidence and unable to be published).¹⁶⁴³

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI¹⁶⁴⁴

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of ensuring the pluralism of the NHRI. While the Commission has a number of policies around diversity in the workplace, the Act itself is sparsely drafted and pluralism may be limited by the provisions and qualifications contained within the Act.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.¹⁶⁴⁵ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism¹⁶⁴⁶

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the CCYP or CAYP, it is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society.¹⁶⁴⁷ However, there are no clear requirements for these roles under the Act, other than that the Commissioners must be “qualified” for the role because of his or her “knowledge and experience”.¹⁶⁴⁸

The role of the CACYP is currently filled by an identified Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person with appropriate qualifications, knowledge and experience, however this is not a legislatively mandated requirement for the position.¹⁶⁴⁹ Nonetheless, we note that the last job listing for the position stated that the Commission was “seeking to appoint an Aboriginal leader”.¹⁶⁵⁰

Commission Staff

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.¹⁶⁵¹

The Commission may employ staff under the Public Administration Act 2004 (Vic)¹⁶⁵² to enable the Commission to perform its functions.¹⁶⁵³ The CCYP may also enter into agreements or arrangements for the use of the services of any staff of a Department, statutory authority or other public body.¹⁶⁵⁴

The Commission's website states that it is "committed to building an inclusive workplace that embraces diversity" and encourages job applications from "people with a disability, people from culturally diverse backgrounds, and people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, gender diverse and intersex".¹⁶⁵⁵ The Commission publishes workforce data, including demographic data on the age and gender of all its employees, in its annual reports.¹⁶⁵⁶

Furthermore, in 2016, the Commission introduced an Aboriginal Inclusion Action Plan (AIAP)¹⁶⁵⁷, which sets out the Commission's target for Aboriginal employment. The AIAP was intended to be implemented over a three-year period from 2016-2019 and an independent evaluation of the AIAP's implementation was due to occur in mid-2019. We have been unable to determine whether this evaluation occurred or to locate an updated action plan for the period commencing in 2020.

Full-time members¹⁶⁵⁸

The Act sets out a specific duration for the CCYP and CACYP mandate (the period specified in the instrument of appointment, not exceeding 5 years), and both the CCYP and CACYP are eligible for reappointment.¹⁶⁵⁹ The CCYP must be appointed on a full-time basis. However, the CACYP may be appointed on a full-time or part-time basis.¹⁶⁶⁰

The Act provides that the CCYP or CACYP hold office "on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor in Council".¹⁶⁶¹ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act. The Governor in Council also determines the remuneration and allowances of the CCYP or CACYP "from time to time".¹⁶⁶² As such, in practice, the remuneration, allowances and terms and conditions of the Commissioners' employ are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The Act is sparsely drafted and largely does not comply with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹⁶⁶³

The selection and appointment of the CCYP (or CACYP) is to be made by the Governor in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister.¹⁶⁶⁴ The only clear requirement for appointment is that the person is “qualified for appointment as a Commissioner because of his or her knowledge and experience”. The Act does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment, which raises concerns regarding whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent, and participatory.¹⁶⁶⁵

However, we were able to locate the previous job listing for the CACYP, which suggests that position vacancies are publicised broadly (at least in respect of the CACYP).¹⁶⁶⁶ We further note that the Commission has a “Careers” page on its website on which it advertises job vacancies at the Commission.¹⁶⁶⁷ We note that some positions are only advertised to existing Victorian Public Service employees and are not published on the Careers page.¹⁶⁶⁸

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act should be better drafted in order to expressly comply with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

In order to maintain a NHRI’s structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹⁶⁶⁹ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

As outlined above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the CCYP and CACYP. The Act does not expressly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission.¹⁶⁷⁰ However, the Act does provide that the CCYP (or CACYP) ceases to hold office if he or she “nominates for election for the Parliament of Victoria or of the Commonwealth or of another State or a Territory of the Commonwealth”.¹⁶⁷¹

Furthermore, while the Act provides that the Commission must act independently and impartially in performing its functions,¹⁶⁷² there is no express provision stating that the CCYP or CACYP is not subject to any direction or oversight by the Minister or Governor in Council. In fact, the Governor in Council sets the terms and conditions of office for both commissioners.¹⁶⁷³ This may undermine the perceived (and real) independence of the CCYP and CACYP.

Guarantee of tenure¹⁶⁷⁴

The Act sets out a specific duration for the CCYP and CACYP mandate (the period specified in the instrument of appointment, not exceeding 5 years), and both the CCYP and CACYP are eligible for reappointment.¹⁶⁷⁵

¹⁶⁷⁴ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.1.

¹⁶⁷⁵ Commission for Children and Young People Act 2012 (Vic) s 14.

While the Act sets out specific grounds for removal from office, it also allows the Governor in Council to remove the CCYP or CACYP on “any other ground” if satisfied that the CCYP or CACYP is “unfit to hold his or her office”.¹⁶⁷⁶ Arguably, this broad removal power could be exercised subjectively or on a partisan basis and may result in apprehension about inappropriate interference (and undermine the independence of the CCYP or CACYP).¹⁶⁷⁷

Finally, the Act provides that the CCYP or CACYP hold office “on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor in Council”.¹⁶⁷⁸ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act. As such, in practice, the terms and conditions of the Commissioners’ employ are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party. This does not provide the necessary independence and autonomy from government (an essential requirement under the Paris Principles).

Although the grounds for dismissal of a Commissioner are limited,¹⁶⁷⁹ they do not satisfy the recommendations made in the General Observations. As outlined above, the Act allows the Governor in Council to remove the CCYP or CACYP on “any other ground” if satisfied that the CCYP or CACYP is “unfit to hold his or her office”.¹⁶⁸⁰ Furthermore, the Act does not expressly require the Governor in Council to provide the Commissioner with specific reasons for dismissal or to provide the Commissioner with an ability to contest dismissal.

Recruitment¹⁶⁸¹

The Commission may employ staff under the Public Administration Act 2004 (Vic)¹⁶⁸² to enable the Commission to perform its functions.¹⁶⁸³ The CCYP may also enter into agreements or arrangements for the use of the services of any staff of a Department, statutory authority or other public body.¹⁶⁸⁴ In this respect, the Commission holds substantial independence to control its own staffing arrangements.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is a lack of transparency around the funding of the Commission (particularly under the Act). However, in practice, the Commission partially complies with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹⁶⁸⁵

The statutory provisions do not provide an indication as to the source or amount of funding for the Commission, CCYP or CACYP. However, the Victorian Budget for 2019-20 allocates $3.9 million of “output initiative” funding to the Commission to enable it to “continue to oversee the safety and quality of care for children and safeguard their rights and dignity”.¹⁶⁸⁶ The term “output initiative” relates to new programs or projects that deliver goods and services.¹⁶⁸⁷ The 2019-20 Budget also invests an additional $16.2 million for the Commission to administer the Reportable Conduct Scheme and Child Safe Standards.¹⁶⁸⁸

From 2016, the Commission's financial statements have been incorporated into the Department of Health and Human Services' annual reports. However, the Department's annual reports do not allocate a separate line item for the Commission and, as such, the Commission's budget is not transparent.¹⁶⁸⁹

In 2018-9, the Commission expenditure totalled $12,577,852.¹⁶⁹⁰ While the Commission has autonomy over the allocation of its budget, it is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to public sector bodies under the Financial Management Act 1994 (Vic) (see below).

NHRI staff and members¹⁶⁹¹

Both the CCYP and the CACYP are entitled to be paid the remuneration and allowances that are determined from time to time by the Governor in Council.¹⁶⁹² In practice, this means that remuneration and allowances are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party.

The Commission publishes workforce data, such as the salaries of executives and other non-executive senior staff in its annual reports.¹⁶⁹³

Accessibility and communications infrastructure¹⁶⁹⁴

While the Commission does not appear to have an open-to-the-public office, the Commission does maintain a communications system for general enquiries.¹⁶⁹⁵ This system includes a telephone line, email address, mailing address and social media accounts. Interpreter services are available for any calls made to the Commission.¹⁶⁹⁶ However, as outlined above, the Commission does not have complaints-handling powers and the Commission's communications infrastructure is provided for general enquiries only.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs¹⁶⁹⁷

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Commission is required to produce annual reports under Part 7 of the Financial Management Act 1994 (Vic).¹⁶⁹⁸ These reports must include proper accounts and records of the transactions and affairs of the Commission, as well as any other records required to sufficiently explain the financial operations and financial position of the Commission.¹⁶⁹⁹

The reports are then provided to the Minister for Child Protection and tabled before each House of the Victorian Parliament (provided that the expenses and obligations exceed $5,000,000).¹⁷⁰⁰ The Commission's annual reports are made available on the Commission's website.¹⁷⁰¹

In practice, the Commission's annual reports include a full summary of the activities undertaken in the financial year, as well as its opinions, recommendations and proposals. In addition, the reports often track the implementation of recommendations from past inquiries.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

We have been unable to locate any specific criticisms about this role.

The Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory noted that the Commission and the CCYP do not have an individual complaints resolution and investigatory function (unlike the equivalent bodies in the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory).¹⁷⁰²

In 2015, the Council for the Care of Children noted that there has been little formal recognition of the need to include children in the selection process of children's commissioners across Australia.¹⁷⁰³

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commission has own-motion inquiry powers and is able to compel access to information during inquiries.¹⁷⁰⁴ However, we note that these powers are unduly limited under the Act.
- The Commission maintains consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.¹⁷⁰⁵
- In practice, the Commission publishes a wide range of information (including submissions, reports and inquiries) on its website, making it publicly accessible.
- The Commission publicly tracks and reviews the implementation of its recommendations.¹⁷⁰⁶
- The annual reporting requirements of Commission are closely aligned with the GANHRI General Observations and may act as a useful model.¹⁷⁰⁷

C. The Commissioner for Aboriginal Children and Young People and the Principal Commissioner for Children and Young People in Victoria: Impacts

4 Improving outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children in 2018-19

4.1 Review of the Aboriginal Children's Forum

In the late 2018, the CACYP, in collaboration with a consultant, conducted a review of the Aboriginal Children's Forum (ACF), with the aim to support the ACF to continue its work in holding government and agencies to account for the gap between the stated objectives of laws and policies, and their real impact in the lives of Aboriginal children and young people.

The review report was completed in January 2019 and was presented to the Minister for Child Protection, the Secretary of Department of Health and Human Services, and members of the ACF. The ACF meetings in March and June 2019 accepted the recommendations made by the CACYP and developed processes to incorporate them into the structure and agenda of the ACF.¹⁷⁰⁸

4.2 Wungurilwil Gapgapduir Agreement

As part of a three-year action plan developed pursuant to the 2018 Wungurilwil Gapgapduir tripartite agreement between the Victorian Government, Victorian Aboriginal communities and the child and family services sector,¹⁷⁰⁹ the Commission had responsibility for two actions in 2018-19. These were to:

- evaluate and audit cultural support plans to determine the extent to which plans support Aboriginal children and young people to connect with Aboriginal community and culture, and
- convene an annual forum with Aboriginal children and young people in out-of-home care, supported by a series of regional forums.

In responding to the first action, the Commission commenced discussions and planning with 18 senior cultural advisers to develop a framework to assess the quality of cultural support plans. The Commission has plans to use the framework to:

- assess the quality of a random sample of current cultural support plans; and
- report on their ability to achieve effective connection to community and culture.¹⁷¹⁰

In response to the second action, the Commission developed a forum agenda and program for the first annual out-of-home care forum and worked with Child Protection practitioners and Aboriginal Community Controlled Organisations to identify and support Aboriginal children and young people aged 14–17 years in out-of-home care to attend.¹⁷¹¹

4.3 General actions

In addition to the above (and to the sections set out below), in the 2018-19 financial year, the Commission:¹⁷¹²

- began the development of specific communications for an Aboriginal audience, including videos to promote the Child Safe Standards and the Reportable Conduct Scheme;
- participated in work to progress independent, unannounced inspections of places of detention under the United Nations Optional Protocol to the Convention Against Torture;
- participated in the Aboriginal Justice Forum, working to ensure a greater youth focus;
- conducted 32 child death inquiries to review services provided to children who died after being involved with Child Protection in the year before their death (five inquiries related to Aboriginal children), resulting in 19 recommendations for improvement; and
- took Child Safe Standards compliance action with 77 organisations, proactively targeting organisations where compliance concerns were identified.

5 Systemic Inquiries

5.1 Systemic inquiries in 2019

In 2019, the Commission released two significant systemic inquiries related to young people's experiences of the out-of-home care system:

- the Lost, not forgotten Inquiry;¹⁷¹³ and
- the In our own words Inquiry.¹⁷¹⁴

The Lost, not forgotten Inquiry was tabled in the Victorian Parliament on 13 November 2019. The report captures the stories of the 35 children and young people that died by suicide within a year of their last involvement with Victoria's child protection system between 2007 and 2019. The report reflects on the responses the children received from different service systems and makes six recommendations aimed at improving these systems.¹⁷¹⁵

The In our own words Inquiry was initiated to examine what it is like to be a child or young person in the out-of-home care system, by hearing directly from those living in out-of-home care or with recent lived experience in care. As part of this inquiry, the Commission spoke to over 200 children and young people across care types (including over 80 Aboriginal children and young people) and consulted with carers and workers, both from Department of Health and Human Services and from community service organisations. The inquiry resulted in 17 separate recommendations and was tabled in the Victorian Parliament on 27 November 2019.¹⁷¹⁶ Both the CCYP and the CACYP made media statements when the report was released.¹⁷¹⁷

5.2 Anticipated inquiry reports

In May 2019, the Commission also established the Our youth, our way systemic inquiry into the over-representation of Aboriginal children and young people in Victoria's youth justice system.¹⁷¹⁸ This inquiry builds on the work of the Koori Youth Justice Taskforce – a joint initiative of the Commission and the Department of Justice and Community Safety.

Coupled with the Taskforce, the inquiry engages directly with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people, their families and communities about the impact of the youth justice system at many levels. The Taskforce also recently began auditing the client files of all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and young people who were involved in the youth justice system from October 2018 to March 2019 in order to identify areas of concern and good practice.¹⁷¹⁹

The Commission was due to release the resulting report, highlighting the stories of Aboriginal young people involved in youth justice and making recommendations for reform, in March 2020,¹⁷²⁰ however we have been unable to locate the final report.

5.3 Monitoring previous inquiries

During 2018–19, the Commission also monitored the implementation of the following previously tabled systemic inquiries:

- ‘...as a good parent would...’ (2015);¹⁷²¹
- Neither seen nor heard (2016);¹⁷²²
- Always was, always will be Koori Children (2016);¹⁷²³
- In the child's best interests (2016);¹⁷²⁴ and

The results of these reviews are set out extensively in the Commission's Annual Report for 2018-19.¹⁷²⁶

6 Submissions

6.1 Submissions from 2019 to 2020

From 2019 to the time of writing, the Commission also made the following submissions on policy and law reform relating to issues affecting children and young people:¹⁷²⁷

Date	Organisation	Topic (and link)
10 January 2019	Department of Home Affairs	National Public Register of Children Sex Offenders Consultation
17 January 2019	Department of Premier and Cabinet	Submission on the terms of reference for the Royal Commission into Mental Health

6.2 Monitoring previous submissions

The Commission monitors responses to its submissions in its Annual Reports.

For example, in its 2018-19 Annual Report, Commission reports that its submissions on the Corrections Regulations secured additional protections, including requirements that a child's age, vulnerability and best interests be considered in certain situations, such as before an instrument of restraint is applied or a separation order is made.¹⁷²⁸

Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	The QFCC is largely compliant with the Paris Principles, however there are some gaps: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The QFCC, and the roles of the QFCC commissioners, are formally entrenched in law, pursuant to the Act. • The Minister is required to recommend at least one person who is an Aboriginal person or Torres Strait Islander in making recommendations for QFCC commissioners. • The Act does not contain any express human rights references. • The QFCC does not have a complaints-handling power. • The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office for the QFCC commissioners. • There is a significant lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the QFCC commissioners. However, the Act provides the QFCC with broad discretion regarding the selection and appointment of advisory councils. • The QFCC commissioners do not have functional immunity for acts or omissions done in good faith under the Act. • The QFCC maintains consultation with stakeholders and other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights. • The Act contains no limit on political representatives (at least in respect of the QFCC and commissioners). • In practice, the QFCC publishes a wide range of information on its website, making it publicly accessible. • The QFCC is good at publicly tracking and reviewing the implementation of its recommendations. • The QFCC appears to receive adequate funding and the annual reporting requirements of the QFCC are closely aligned with the GANHRI General Observations.

B. Queensland Family and Child Commission: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles with respect to the establishment of NHRIs.

Entrenched in law¹⁷⁷⁸

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.¹⁷⁷⁹ The QFCC is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to the Act.

The Act sets out the QFCC's mandate and powers¹⁷⁸⁰ and lines of accountability.¹⁷⁸¹ However, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office for the commissioners, and states that the commissioners hold office on the terms and conditions decided by the Governor in Council.¹⁷⁸²

Furthermore, although the QFCC is an independent statutory body, QFCC commissioners are subject to, and are required to comply with, the directions of the Minister in performing their functions under the Act.¹⁷⁸³ This may raise concerns over the QFCC's independence from government and the commissioners' ability to exercise their mandate in an unfettered manner.¹⁷⁸⁴

Mandate and powers¹⁷⁸⁵

The Act broadly sets out the functions of the QFCC,¹⁷⁸⁶ including:

- to provide oversight of the child protection system;
- to promote and advocate—
 - the responsibility of families and communities to protect and care for children and young people; and
 - the safety and wellbeing of children and young people, particularly children in need of protection or in the youth justice system;
- to develop and review workforce planning and development strategies for the child protection system by collaborating with relevant agencies, the private sector and education providers;
- to inform and educate the community about—
 - services available to strengthen and support families; and
 - the way in which the child protection system operates; and
 - research relevant to the child protection system;

¹⁷⁸⁶ Family and Child Commission Act 2014 (Qld) s 9.

- to develop and coordinate a multidisciplinary research program to inform policies and practices, in consultation with stakeholders and relevant agencies;
- to assist relevant agencies to evaluate the efficacy of their programs and identify the most effective service models;
- to provide leadership and give expert advice to relevant agencies about laws, policies, practices and services;
- to increase collaboration and build capacity across different sectors to improve the delivery of services to children, young people and families;
- to analyse and evaluate, at a systemic level, policies and practices relevant to the child protection system and the performance of relevant agencies in delivering services;
- to report to the Minister about matters relating to one of the above functions; and
- to perform a function incidental to one of the above functions.

The Act also sets out the commissioners' functions,¹⁷⁸⁷ which are:

- to ensure the QFCC performs its functions under the Act effectively and efficiently;
- to make recommendations to the Minister about any matter that—
 - relates to the performance or exercise of the functions or powers of the QFCC or a commissioner; and
 - may help the Minister in the proper administration of the Act; and
- to perform any other function given to a commissioner under the Act or another Act;
- in respect of the principal commissioner – to control the QFCC and record, analyse, research and report on information about child deaths;¹⁷⁸⁸ and
- in respect of the commissioner – to ensure the QFCC is adequately and appropriately performing its promotion and advocacy functions under the Act.¹⁷⁸⁹

The commissioners may exercise the powers of the QFCC and any other powers given under the Act or another Act.¹⁷⁹⁰

Appointment mechanisms¹⁷⁹¹

While the appointment mechanisms for the commissioners are set out in the Act,¹⁷⁹² it is arguable that they are not sufficiently transparent. The only clear requirements are that:

- the persons are appropriately qualified to exercise the QFCC's functions effectively and efficiently;¹⁷⁹³ and

- at least one person recommended for appointment is an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.¹⁷⁹⁴

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)¹⁷⁹⁵

The Act does not set out an ability for the QFCC to receive or investigate complaints. In fact, the QFCC's scope is expressly limited insofar as the QFCC is not able "to investigate the circumstances of a particular child, young person or family or to advocate on their behalf".¹⁷⁹⁶ The QFCC's website refers complaints to the Queensland Ombudsman or the relevant agency.¹⁷⁹⁷

1.2 Human rights mandate¹⁷⁹⁸

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.¹⁷⁹⁹ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).¹⁸⁰⁰

Competence and responsibilities¹⁸⁰¹

As is described above, the Act sets out the broad mandate for the QFCC and its commissioners. The QFCC also has the overarching function of "promoting the safety, wellbeing and best interests of children and young people and improving the child protection system".¹⁸⁰² Relevantly:

- a number of the QFCC's functions extend to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors,¹⁸⁰³ and
- The QFCC has the authority to "inform and educate the community" and so is able to freely address public opinion, raise public awareness and carry out education and training programs.¹⁸⁰⁴

The principal commissioner also has powers with respect to monitoring and reporting on child deaths within Queensland.¹⁸⁰⁵ The purpose of this mandate is to "reduce the likelihood of child deaths by classifying and analysing information to identify patterns or trends".¹⁸⁰⁶ Although this is not a part of a national framework, the mandate is consistent with other jurisdictions in Australia.

Functional immunity¹⁸⁰⁷

The Act provides the QFCC and its commissioners with very limited protection from criminal or civil liability for the exercise of their official powers in good faith.

The Act provides that it is a lawful excuse for the publication of any defamatory statement made in a QFCC child death report that the publication is made in good faith and for the Act.¹⁸⁰⁸

Furthermore, an official (the Minister or a member of an advisory council) is not civilly liable for an act done, or omission made, honestly and without negligence under the Act – instead, such liability will attach to the State.¹⁸⁰⁹

The QFCC may employ staff under the Public Service Act 2008 (Qld).¹⁸¹⁰ Under the provisions of that Act, staff will not incur civil liability for engaging, or for the result of engaging, in conduct in an official capacity.¹⁸¹¹

Powers of investigation and inquiry¹⁸¹²

As outlined above, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include powers of inquiry and investigation that address and seek to prevent human rights violations.¹⁸¹³

The QFCC and its commissioners do not possess broad investigative powers outside of the principal commissioner’s powers with respect to child deaths.¹⁸¹⁴ In respect of this limited investigatory power, the principal commissioner does have the power to give written notice to a public entity which is considered to have information about child deaths, requesting that the entity provide that information to the commissioner within a reasonable time.¹⁸¹⁵ If the public entity refuses to comply with the request, it must give the principal commissioner written notice of the reasons for its refusal.¹⁸¹⁶

- The QFCC and its commissioners do not have powers of unannounced and free access to inspect and examine any public premises. Furthermore, the QFCC commissioners are subject to, and are required to comply with, the directions of the Minister in performing their functions under the Act.¹⁸¹⁷ Although the explicit powers of investigation and inquiry are limited, the functions of the QFCC include: providing leadership and giving expert advice to relevant agencies about laws, policies, practices and services;¹⁸¹⁸
- analysing and evaluating, at a systemic level, policies and practices relevant to the child protection system and the performance of relevant agencies in delivering services;¹⁸¹⁹ and
- making recommendations about laws, policies, practices and services relating to child deaths.¹⁸²⁰

The QFCC may also include opinions and recommendations about any matters relating to its functions in its annual reports.¹⁸²¹ Arguably, these functions could be used to review and make recommendations about laws, policies, practices and services and whether they are compatible with any obligations arising from international human rights standards.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.¹⁸²² Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.¹⁸²³

The Act does not explicitly reference international human rights standards and/or instruments.

However, the QFCC has a history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters. For instance:

- in May 2016, the QFCC made a submission to the Australian Human Rights Commission (AHRC) providing research, information and advice to inform the establishment of an independent National Preventative Mechanism under the United Nations Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture (OPCAT) in the context of Youth Justice Detention Centres;¹⁸²⁴
- in July 2017, the QFCC made a submission to the AHRC regarding the ratification of OPCAT;¹⁸²⁵
- in April 2018, the QFCC made a submission to the Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages regarding recognising sex and gender diversity and same-sex families.¹⁸²⁶ In this submission the QFCC relied upon the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child as well as the Yogyakarta Principles on the application of international human rights law in relation to sexual orientation and gender identity;
- in May 2018, the QFCC made a submission to the AHRC regarding Queensland's initiatives relevant to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child;¹⁸²⁷
- in 2019, the QFCC made a submission to the AHRC in response the AHRC's *Free + Equal: An Australian Conversation on Human Rights – Issues Paper April 2019*¹⁸²⁸. In this submission, the QFCC refers to the following:¹⁸²⁹
 - the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child;
 - the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples;

- the recommendation of the United Nations to raise the minimum age of criminal responsibility to 14 years in Australia.

The QFCC has recently updated its strategic plan to reflect a commitment to realising the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, to allow every child in Queensland to have full enjoyment of their rights.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.¹⁸³⁰ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.¹⁸³¹

While there are no human rights or convention references in the Act, the QFCC's most recent Annual Report indicates that the QFCC recognises the applicability of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child to its functions.¹⁸³² The QFCC's recent history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters is detailed above.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Act and the QFCC largely comply with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.¹⁸³³ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.¹⁸³⁴

The QFCC and its commissioners are mandated to engage in regular and constructive engagement with relevant stakeholders, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander service providers.¹⁸³⁵ In practice, the QFCC has developed a number of formal partnering mechanisms including:¹⁸³⁶

- the Advisory Council;
- the Community Partnership Group;
- the Youth Advisory Council;
- the Strategic Cross-Agency Oversight Group;

protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand.¹⁸³⁸

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.¹⁸³⁹ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.¹⁸⁴⁰ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.¹⁸⁴¹

In terms of reporting:

- one of the QFCC's main functions is to report on matters relating to its functions;¹⁸⁴²
- the QFCC must produce an annual report for each financial year, which may contain any opinions or recommendations about any matter relating to the QFCC's functions;¹⁸⁴³
- the principal commissioner must prepare and give the Minister an annual report regarding the commissioner's recommendations relating to child deaths,¹⁸⁴⁴ and may also prepare and give the Minister other reports regarding its functions relating to child deaths;¹⁸⁴⁵ and
- the Minister must table the above-mentioned child death reports in the Legislative Assembly within 14 sitting days.¹⁸⁴⁶

The QFCC commissioners are also empowered to make recommendations about any matters that relate to the performance or exercise of the commissioner's or the QFCC's functions or powers, or that may help the Minister in the proper administration of the Act.¹⁸⁴⁷

The QFCC's annual reports include detailed information on its recommendations throughout the reporting period and the measures taken, or not taken, in implementing these recommendations.¹⁸⁴⁸ The QFCC publishes its annual reports on its website,¹⁸⁴⁹ along with its government reviews and inquiries,¹⁸⁵⁰ submissions, and other reports.¹⁸⁵¹

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI¹⁸⁵²

¹⁸⁵² Consider also: General Observation 2.1 – Guarantee of tenure for members of the NHRI decision-making body; General Observation 2.2 – Full-time members of an NHRI; General Observation 2.4 – Recruitment and retention of NHRI staff.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.¹⁸⁵³ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism¹⁸⁵⁴

QFCC commissioners

It is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society. The Act provides that at least one person recommended by the Minister for appointment as commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.¹⁸⁵⁵ The QFCC has interpreted this to be a statutory mandate that at least one commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.¹⁸⁵⁶

QFCC staff

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.¹⁸⁵⁷

The QFCC may employ the staff it considers appropriate to perform its functions.¹⁸⁵⁸ These staff are to be employed under the Public Service Act 2008 (Qld),¹⁸⁵⁹ thereby making it equivalent to the recruitment of staff of other independent of State agencies. The QFCC also follows a Strategic Workforce Plan, which includes workforce strategies such as contemporary and innovative recruitment practices that target a diverse and wide pool of candidates with a focus on attracting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander candidates in order to strengthen the QFCC's cultural capability.¹⁸⁶⁰ As at 30 June 2019, the QFCC staff profile was 79% female and 21% male, with 8% of staff identifying as Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and 5% identifying as having a disability.¹⁸⁶¹

The QFCC also receives advice from the Youth Advisory Council. The Council is made up of young people aged between 14 and 25 and its members (known as Youth Champions) have diverse backgrounds and represent regional and metropolitan areas.¹⁸⁶²

Full-time members¹⁸⁶³

The Act does not expressly require the QFCC commissioners to be appointed on a full-time basis. The Act does not provide a minimum term of appointment for the commissioners, or other office holders. However, the Act does set out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period to be specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 3 years).¹⁸⁶⁴ The Act contains no reference to re-appointment.

The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that QFCC commissioners hold office on the terms and conditions determined by Governor in Council (including as to remuneration and allowances).¹⁸⁶⁵ As such, in practice, the remuneration, allowances and terms and conditions of the commissioners' employ are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.¹⁸⁶⁶

The method of recruitment of the QFCC commissioners is outlined below in section 1.9.

Advisory councils

The principal commissioner has the discretion to establish one or more advisory councils to advise on matters relating to the commissioner's functions.¹⁸⁶⁷ However, the Act stipulates that such councils are not to advise the principal commissioner on the day-to-day management of the commission.¹⁸⁶⁸

The principal commissioner has discretion to appoint anyone to the advisory council, provided the principal commissioner is satisfied the person is appropriately qualified to advise on the matters referred to council.¹⁸⁶⁹ The principal commissioner must ensure that at least one member of each advisory council is an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.¹⁸⁷⁰ The principal commissioner also has discretion regarding the length of term an advisory council member should serve, and how the advisory council itself will function.¹⁸⁷¹

One such advisory council is the Youth Advisory Council. The Council is made up of young people aged between 14 and 25, and its members (known as Youth Champions) have diverse backgrounds and represent regional and metropolitan areas.¹⁸⁷² The QFCC recently launched an online recruitment campaign to increase the number of Youth Champions.¹⁸⁷³

¹⁸⁷³ Queensland Youth eHub, Youth Advisory Council recruitment, available at <<https://e-hub.engagementhub.com.au/youth-advisory-council-recruitment>>.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.¹⁸⁷⁴ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

As discussed in detail below, there is a lack of transparency around the tenure and appointment and selection process for the QFCC commissioners.¹⁸⁷⁵ The Act does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the QFCC.¹⁸⁷⁶ Furthermore, the QFCC commissioners are expressly subject to the directions of the Minister in performing their functions under the Act.¹⁸⁷⁷ This indicates that there is not a large degree of independence from the Queensland government.

Notably, the QFCC's website has a Queensland Government domain (www.qfcc.qld.gov.au) and both the QFCC's website and annual reports contain the Queensland Government logo. This signalling may go further towards undermining the perceived independence of the QFCC from Government.

Guarantee of tenure¹⁸⁷⁸

The Act sets out a specific duration of the QFCC commissioners' mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 3 years).¹⁸⁷⁹ The Act does not contain any provisions regarding re-appointment.

The Governor in Council may remove a QFCC commissioner from office, but only upon the recommendation of the Minister.¹⁸⁸⁰ Such recommendation can only be made if the Minister is satisfied that the commissioner:¹⁸⁸¹

- has been guilty of misconduct;
- is incapable or performing his or her duties; or
- has neglected his or her duties or performed them incompetently.

Although the grounds for, and method of, dismissal of a QFCC commissioner are limited, the dismissal is based solely on the discretion of appointing authorities.¹⁸⁸² There is a lack of clarity around what these grounds might entail, and the Act does not expressly require the Governor in Council or Minister to provide specific reasons for the dismissal. In addition, the Act does not expressly provide the commissioners with an ability to contest any dismissal.

The Minister may also suspend a QFCC commissioner, for up to 60 days, if there has been an allegation of misconduct made against the commissioner, or the Minister is satisfied a matter has arisen in relation to one of the grounds for dismissal.¹⁸⁸³

Finally, the Act provides that the QFCC commissioners hold office on the terms and conditions decided by the Governor in Council.¹⁸⁸⁴ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act. As such, in practice, the terms and conditions of the commissioners' employ are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party. This does not provide the necessary independence and autonomy from government (an essential requirement under the Paris Principles).

Recruitment of QFCC commissioners

The selection and appointment of the QFCC commissioners is to be made by the Governor in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister.¹⁸⁸⁵ The only clear requirements for appointment are that:¹⁸⁸⁶

- the person is appropriately qualified to exercise the commission's functions effectively and efficiently; and
- at least one person recommended by the Minister for appointment as a commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.

The Act does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment, which raises concerns regarding whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent, and participatory.¹⁸⁸⁷

This can be directly contrasted with the Child Death Review Board,¹⁸⁸⁸ which is also established under the Act (but which is separate and independent from the QFCC).¹⁸⁸⁹ In respect of this board, the Act expressly provides that a member of the Legislative Assembly is ineligible to be appointed as a member.¹⁸⁹⁰

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.¹⁸⁹¹

The QFCC's funding is provided the Queensland government as a separate budget line item applicable only to QFCC.¹⁸⁹² The Queensland Budget Measures for 2019-20 allocate $3,070,000 as a separate line item for Family Support and Child Protection Reforms – Queensland Family and Child Commission.¹⁸⁹³

In the 2018-19 reporting period, the QFCC received a total revenue of $11,951,000 and had expenses totalling $11,684,000,¹⁸⁹⁴ suggesting that the QFCC receives an adequate allocation for its activities. $11,879,000 of the QFCC's revenue for this reporting period was contributed in the form of grants received from the Department of Justice and Attorney-General.¹⁸⁹⁵

While QFCC has complete autonomy over the allocation of its budget, it is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies of the state

NHRI staff and members¹⁸⁹⁹

The Act states that the QFCC commissioners are entitled to remuneration and allowances as decided by the Governor in Council.¹⁹⁰⁰ In practice, this means that remuneration and allowances are determined on a discretionary basis by the ruling party.

The QFCC publishes workforce and financial data, such as remuneration expenses, in its annual reports. In terms of remuneration expenses and benefits in the 2018-19 reporting period, the total expenses and benefits for the QFCC commissioners were as follows:¹⁹⁰¹

- principal commissioner - $306,000; and
- commissioner – $228,000.

These salaries appear to be comparable with other civil servants performing similar tasks.¹⁹⁰²

Accessibility and communications infrastructure¹⁹⁰³

While the QFCC does not appear to have an open-to-the-public office, it does maintain a communications system for general enquiries. This system consists of a postal address, telephone line, facsimile line, and email.¹⁹⁰⁴ However, as outlined above, the QFCC does not have complaints-handling powers and the QFCC's communications infrastructure is provided for general enquiries only.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The QFCC is required to produce and give to the Minister annual reports regarding the principal commissioner's child-death related activities and recommendations during the financial year.¹⁹⁰⁵ This report must be tabled in the Legislative Assembly within 14 days after being received by the Minister.¹⁹⁰⁶

The QFCC is also required to produce annual reports regarding matters pertaining to the QFCC's and Queensland's performance during the financial year (which may include information, opinions and recommendation about any matter relating to the QFCC's functions).¹⁹⁰⁷ As a statutory body, these annual reports must also meet the annual report requirements for

In practice, the QFCC's annual reports contain a full summary of the activities undertaken in the financial year, as well as its opinions, recommendations and proposals. The reports also track the implementation of the QFCC's recommendations. The QFCC's annual reports are made available on the QFCC's website.¹⁹¹²

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

2.1 Anticipated independent review

Under the Act, the Minister is required to arrange an independent review of the QFCC's performance of its functions, and of the effectiveness of the Act, within 5 years.¹⁹¹³ Reports of these reviews must be tabled in the Legislative Assembly as soon as practicable upon completion of the review(s).¹⁹¹⁴ While we note that this 5 year period has passed, we have been unable to locate any such report(s) to date.

2.2 QAO performance audit: Family support and child protection system

On 4 August 2020, the Queensland Audit Office (QAO) released a performance audit of the family support and child protection system.¹⁹¹⁵ The review determined that the QFCC is fulfilling its legislated responsibilities, including its mandate to provide oversight of the system.¹⁹¹⁶ However, the review noted that:¹⁹¹⁷

- the QFCC is continuing to mature how it performs its oversight function; and
- some stakeholders are not informed about the QFCC's role and how it is being fulfilled.

QAO recommended that the QFCC collaborate with the Department of Child Safety, Youth and Women to improve outcomes for children placed in out-of-home care.¹⁹¹⁸ On 24 July 2020, the principal commissioner of the QFCC accepted this recommendation.¹⁹¹⁹

2.3 Miscellaneous

The Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory noted that the Commission and the CCYP do not have an individual complaints resolution and investigatory function (unlike the equivalent bodies in the Australian Capital Territory and the Northern Territory).¹⁹²⁰

3 What are the best features of this role?

- At least one person recommended by the Minister for appointment as a QFCC commissioner must be an Aboriginal person or a Torres Strait Islander.¹⁹²¹
- The QFCC is empowered to develop and coordinate a multidisciplinary research program to inform policies and practices, in consultation with stakeholders and relevant agencies.¹⁹²²
- In practice, the Commission publishes a wide range of information (including submissions, reports and inquiries) on its website, making it publicly accessible.
- The Commission publicly tracks and reviews the implementation of its recommendations.¹⁹²³

C. Queensland Family and Child Commission: Impacts

4 Connecting with children and young people

The QFCC is responsible for engaging with, and taking account of, the views of children, young people and their families. We have summarised two of the QFCC's main mechanisms for engaging with children and young people during the 2018-19 reporting period below.

4.1 Growing Up in Queensland project¹⁹²⁴

In 2018, the QFCC visited 62 schools and heard from more than 7,000 children and young people (aged 4 to 18 years) from across Queensland, using a variety of engagement methods. These consultations focused on three main lines of inquiry:¹⁹²⁵

- how children and young people experience life in their community, including their relationships with friends and family; safety; support; and the places they spend time;
- the career aspirations of children and young people and the supports and barriers that might affect them; and
- the big issues that worry children and young people and their ideas for solutions.

The QFCC detailed its findings in a report,¹⁹²⁶ signposting ways for adults to assist children and young people to feel safe in their communities, achieve their hopes and dreams and address their concerns. On 21 May 2020, the QFCC announced that it had launched another Growing Up in Queensland project to amplify children and young people's voices during the COVID-19 pandemic.¹⁹²⁷

4.2 Youth participation plan¹⁹²⁸

The QFCC develops and annual youth participation plan in collaboration with its Youth Advisory Council. These plans detail how to include children and young people in the QFCC's work, connect children and young people with their communities and amplify the voices and stories of children and young people. The plan also provides measures for clearly reporting and evaluating how well the QFCC is performing on its commitments.

5 Systems reviews

The QFCC's oversight role includes conducting reviews into systemic issues affecting the performance of the child protection and family support system. In 2018–19, several systems reviews were progressed or completed.¹⁹²⁹ We have summarised a recent example of a QFCC system review below.

5.1 Example: A systems review of individual agency findings following the death of a child¹⁹³⁰

In June 2016, a 21-month-old toddler known to Child Safety died in Caboolture. In July 2016, the Premier asked the QFCC to oversee the reviews being undertaken by the Department of Communities, Child Safety and Disability Services and by the child death case review panel, and the investigation conducted by Queensland Health about the services provided to the toddler before his death.¹⁹³¹

In March 2017, the QFCC provided the Queensland Government with a report detailing the QFCC's analysis and findings following its consideration of the individual agency reviews.¹⁹³² The report recommended that the Queensland Government consider a revised external and independent model for reviewing the deaths of children known to the child protection system.

Following this report, the Government accepted the QFCC's recommendation,¹⁹³³ and QFCC and other relevant agencies worked with the Department of Justice and Attorney-General to develop a new child death review model. As a result of those consultations, in early 2020 the Parliament passed legislative amendments to establish a new and independent Child Death Review Panel¹⁹³⁴ under Part 3A of the Act.¹⁹³⁵

5.2 Review of the implementation of QFCC's recommendations (2018-19)

The table below summarises the number of recommendations made across the QFCC's recent systems review reports and the progress of the implementation of those recommendations. With the exception of one report, all recommendations made have either been fully implemented or are in the process of implementation.

B. Children's Commissioner (Northern Territory): Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs¹⁹⁹⁸

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs.

Entrenched in law¹⁹⁹⁹

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁰⁰⁰

The Commissioner's role is formally entrenched in law, pursuant to the Act. In fact, the Act was created in for the purposes of transferring the Commissioner's role to a standalone Act, in order to "better reflect the independence of the Office".²⁰⁰¹

The Act sets out the Commissioners mandate and powers,²⁰⁰² including the Commissioner's lines of accountability and independence.²⁰⁰³ However, the Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Commissioner holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Administrator.²⁰⁰⁴

Mandate and powers²⁰⁰⁵

The Act broadly sets out the functions of the Commissioner,²⁰⁰⁶ including:

- to deal with:
 - a complaint about required services; or
 - on the Commissioner's own initiative, a matter that may form a ground for making a complaint;
- to monitor the ways in which service providers respond to reports made by the Commissioner;
- to monitor the administration of the Care and Protection of Children Act (NT)²⁰⁰⁷ in so far as it relates to vulnerable children²⁰⁰⁸;
- to undertake inquiries related to the care and protection of vulnerable children;
- to monitor the implementation of any government decision arising from:
 - an inquiry undertaken by the Commissioner under Part 6 of the Act; or
 - any other inquiry related to the care and protection of vulnerable children, regardless of who undertook the inquiry;
- to monitor the ways in which the Chief Executive Officer of the Agency administering the Care and Protection of Children Act (NT) deals with suspected or potential harm to, or exploitation of, children in the CEO's care;
- to report to the Minister on a matter relating to the Commissioner's functions as required by the Minister; and ¹⁹⁹⁸ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

¹⁹⁹⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁰⁰⁸ For the definition of "vulnerable children", see "purpose" in the summary table listed in Part A of this document.

- to promote an understanding of, and inform public discussion about, the rights, interests and wellbeing of vulnerable children.

The Commissioner has the powers necessary to perform these functions.²⁰⁰⁹ In addition, the Commissioner has the power to:

- request a person to allow the Commissioner to have contact with a child who is, or whom the Commissioner reasonably believes to be, a vulnerable child or a witness to a matter which is the subject of an inquiry, complaint or investigation;²⁰¹⁰ and
- request that a person:²⁰¹¹
 - give specified information;
 - attend before the Commissioner to give information, answer questions or produce a specified thing; or
 - communicate with the Commissioner in any other way.

Appointment mechanisms²⁰¹²

While the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner are set out in the Act,²⁰¹³ it is arguable that they are not sufficiently transparent. The only clear requirement is that the person:²⁰¹⁴

- has qualifications or experience relating to the Commissioner's functions; and
- is committed to the objects and the underlying principles of the Act.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)²⁰¹⁵

The Commissioner's role encompasses almost all of the features of quasi-judicial competency identified in the GANHRI General Observations, including the power to:

- investigate both private and public bodies;²⁰¹⁶
- hear complaints filed on behalf of another (see more below);²⁰¹⁷
- conduct own-motion investigations;²⁰¹⁸
- compel production of information²⁰¹⁹ (including offences to deter obstructive conduct – see Item 2.2 below);²⁰²⁰
- follow up its recommendations;²⁰²¹ and
- protect complainants and witnesses.²⁰²²

²⁰¹⁵ See Paris Principles, Additional principles concerning the status of commissions with quasi-jurisdictional competence; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.9.

²⁰¹⁶ See definition of "responsible service provider" and Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 21(1)(a).

²⁰²¹ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 29(6).

²⁰²² Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 48.

As is noted, the Commissioner is vested with the ability to receive and investigate complaints.²⁰²³ One of the key features when the role was updated in 2013 was the power to resolve complaints informally, helping to resolve complaints expeditiously, and that the Commissioner could inquire into systemic issues.²⁰²⁴ We have set out the complaints process in more detail below.

A person who is or has been a vulnerable child or an adult acting on behalf of such person, may make a written or oral complaint to the Commissioner.²⁰²⁵ The grounds for a complaint are that a service provider failed to provide the reasonably expected required services to a vulnerable child, or that the required services that were provided failed to meet the reasonably expected standard.²⁰²⁶ The "required services" include any services relating to the care or wellbeing of the child.²⁰²⁷ The timeframe for making a complaint is one year after the matter arose, however the Commissioner may accept a complaint outside of this timeframe if it would be appropriate to do so in the public interest or because of personal circumstances.²⁰²⁸

Once a complaint is received, the Commissioner must decide whether to investigate the complaint, not deal with the complaint, refer the complaint to another person or resolve the complaint without investigation.²⁰²⁹ The Act sets out the grounds on which the Commissioner should base this decision.²⁰³⁰

Administrative regulations

The Commissioner is considered an independent entity under the Independent Commissioner Against Corruption Act 2017 (NT)²⁰³¹ and is therefore accountable to the definitions of corrupt conduct, misconduct, unsatisfactory conduct, anti-democratic conduct etc.²⁰³² Administrative regulations such as these are generally considered appropriate to make sure there is financial propriety and operational accountability.

The current Commissioner Colleen Gwynne has recently been charged with abuse of office following an investigation by the Special References Unit of the Northern Territory Police.²⁰³³ Ms Gwynne faced Darwin Local Court on 27 August 2020 and, while the specific allegations were not aired in court, police say the charge relates to alleged "arbitrary and prejudicial conduct".²⁰³⁴ The case is expected to return to court on 11 November 2020.

1.2 Human rights mandate²⁰³⁵

Summary: the Act is largely compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of the Commissioner's human rights mandate.

²⁰³⁵ Consider also: General Observation 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁰³⁶ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁰³⁷

Competence and responsibilities²⁰³⁸

As is set out above, the Act sets out a broad mandate for the Commissioner, including to promote an understanding of, and inform public discussion about, the rights, interests and wellbeing of vulnerable children.²⁰³⁹

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Commissioner is also vested with the competence to launch inquiries related to the care and protection of vulnerable children,²⁰⁴⁰ and may determine the procedures of such inquiries.²⁰⁴¹ The Commissioner may undertake an inquiry on its own initiative, however the Commissioner must undertake an inquiry if directed to do so by the Minister.²⁰⁴²

In the course of performing an inquiry, the Commissioner may request contact with a vulnerable child or a witness.²⁰⁴³

The Commissioner may also, by written notice, request that a person:²⁰⁴⁴

- give specified information;
- attend before the Commissioner to give information, answer questions or produce a specified thing; or
- communicate with the Commissioner in any other way.

To illustrate the above, on 19 September 2019, the Commissioner launched an own motion investigation into the treatment of 12 Aboriginal children by various service providers in accordance with section 28(2) of the Act. On 12 November 2019, the Commissioner issued a request for information to the service provider, Life Without Barriers in accordance with section 35 of the Act.²⁰⁴⁵ The requested information included carer screening and assessment processes, details of all children placed with the carers and all policies and procedures regarding placement of clients and any response to standard of care reviews. However, the service provider substantially failed to provide adequate information and ensure the information was stored properly. The report records that the Commissioner interviewed the Executive Director of the service provider in regard to the failure and this was apparently deemed an incident of section 37 of the Act, being an obligation to comply with a request for information attracting a maximum of 100 penalty units or imprisonment for 12 months.²⁰⁴⁶ There is no further information in the report on whether the Executive Director was charged with the offence;

²⁰⁴⁶ It is worth noting that the Court can become involved if prosecution is brought against an individual under s 37 of the Act and that individual wishes to raise a defence. Children’s Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 37(6).

The Commissioner does not have the power to inspect and examine without notice. In the Commissioner's latest Annual Report, the Commissioner called for legislative reform giving the Office free and unfettered access to sites.²⁰⁴⁷ In the Commissioner's Alice Springs Youth Detention Centre Monitoring Report dated 9 June 2020 and Don Dale Youth Detention Centre Monitoring Report dated 9 June 2020, this shortcoming was recognised.²⁰⁴⁸ However, the Commissioner was able to obtain voluntary consent to conduct the site visits.

Importantly, the Act creates a number of offences designed to facilitate the performance of the Commissioner's functions and powers, including:²⁰⁴⁹

- offences for any failures to comply with the above requests without a reasonable excuse, subject to some exceptions (maximum penalties of 100 penalty units or imprisonment for 12 months);²⁰⁵⁰
- an offence for failing to give information on oath, without a reasonable excuse, if requested to do so by the Commissioner (maximum penalty 20 penalty units);²⁰⁵¹
- an offence for giving the Commissioner false or misleading information (including within a document), with some exceptions (maximum penalty of 200 penalty units or imprisonment for 2 years);²⁰⁵²
- an offence for preventing or obstructing a complaint (maximum penalty of 100 penalty units or imprisonment for 12 months);²⁰⁵³
- an offence for making a knowingly false representation in a complaint (maximum penalty of 100 penalty units or imprisonment for 12 months);²⁰⁵⁴ and
- an offence for obstructing (including resisting and hindering) or improperly influencing an investigation (maximum penalty of 200 penalty units or imprisonment for 2 years).²⁰⁵⁵

Functional immunity²⁰⁵⁶

The Act grants the Commissioner and the Commissioner's staff with express protection from civil and criminal liability for acts done or omitted to be done in good faith in the exercise of a power or performance of a function under this Act.²⁰⁵⁷

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regard to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁰⁵⁸ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁰⁵⁹

The Act does not explicitly reference international human rights standards and/or instruments. However, the Commissioner is empowered to:

- promote an understanding of, and inform public discussion about, the rights, interests and wellbeing of vulnerable children;²⁰⁶⁰
- monitor the administration of the Care and Protection of Children Act (NT) in so far as it relates to vulnerable children;²⁰⁶¹ and
- report to the Minister on a matter relating to the Commissioner's functions as required by the Minister.²⁰⁶²

Furthermore, one of the objects of the Act is to promote continuous improvement and innovation in the policies, practices and services relating to the safety and wellbeing of vulnerable children.²⁰⁶³

Arguably, these functions could be used to promote discussion about any policies, practices and services that are inconsistent with the requirements of international human rights standards, particularly in relation to the Care and Protection of Children Act (NT).

In fact, the Commissioner has a history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters. For instance:

- in May 2012, the Commissioner issued a joint media release calling on the media to stop publicly naming children and young people involved in the youth justice system and noting that such public naming violated Australia's commitment to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child;²⁰⁶⁴
- in May 2018, the Commissioner attended a roundtable hosted by the National Children's Commissioner examining the extent to which Australia is progressing the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child;²⁰⁶⁵
- the Commissioner has invoked articles of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child in its last three monitoring reports;²⁰⁶⁶ and

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁰⁶⁸ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁰⁶⁹

While there are no human rights or convention references in the Act, the Second Reading of the Bill contained the following:

“Consistent with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, the best interests of children should be paramount concern for any person exercising power performing a function under the Children’s Commissioner Act.”²⁰⁷⁰

Furthermore, the Commission’s most recent Annual Report indicates the Commission’s desire to engage with newly ratified conventions like OPCAT, as well as well-founded Conventions like the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.²⁰⁷¹ The Commissioner’s recent history of consulting on the implementation of human rights instruments in Australia and of invoking international human rights instruments in its submissions and letters is detailed above.

The Commissioner’s role encompasses both promotional and protective functions. In terms of promotion, one of the objects of the Act is to promote continuous improvement and innovation in policies, practices and services relating to the safety and wellbeing of vulnerable children.²⁰⁷² The Commissioner is tasked to promote an understanding of, and inform public discussion about, the rights, interests and wellbeing of vulnerable children.²⁰⁷³ In terms of protection, the Commissioner has a number of monitoring and investigative powers (as set out in the preceding sections).²⁰⁷⁴

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: although in practice the Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies, the Act is partially compliant.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁰⁷⁵ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁰⁷⁶

While the Act does not expressly mandate cooperation with other entities, in practice, the Commissioner maintains consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.²⁰⁷⁷ For example:

- the Commissioner attends biannual members meetings of the Australian and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand;²⁰⁷⁸
- in the 2017-2018 reporting year, the Commissioner and staff attended an event hosted by the Australian Youth Representative to the United Nations in Darwin;²⁰⁷⁹
- in the 2017-2018 reporting year, the Commissioner met with the Alice Springs Youth Action Group (YAG) chairperson to discuss engagement opportunities. The Commissioner maintains open communication with YAG to ensure that the voices of young people in Alice Springs are heard;²⁰⁸⁰
- in the 2018-2019 reporting year, the Commissioner partnered with the CREATE Foundation to help shine a light on youth homelessness at Anglicare's annual Couch Surfing event in Darwin.²⁰⁸¹

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁰⁸² Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁰⁸³ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁰⁸⁴

In terms of reporting:

- one of the Commissioner's main functions is to report to the Minister on matters relating to the Commissioner's functions as required by the Minister.²⁰⁸⁵ If the Minister so requests, the Commissioner must prepare and give the Minister such report;²⁰⁸⁶
- the Commissioner must prepare and give the Minister an annual report on the operation of the Act;²⁰⁸⁷

- the Commissioner may also prepare and give the Minister a report about a matter relating to the performance of a function of the Commissioner.²⁰⁸⁸
- the Minister must table these reports in the Legislative Assembly within 6 sitting days.²⁰⁸⁹

The Act creates a regime by which the Commissioner is encouraged to follow-up compliance with the Commissioner's recommendations. In preparing a report following the investigation of a complaint, the Commissioner is empowered to include recommendations with respect to specified actions to be taken within a specified time.²⁰⁹⁰ If the relevant service provider of Agency fails to take a recommended action within the specified time, the Commissioner may give another report about the failure to a responsible Minister.²⁰⁹¹

The Commissioner's most recent Annual Report asserts that the Commissioner made a total of 23 recommendations in the 2018-19 reporting period. Each of these recommendations are set out in the report and are accorded a status by the Commissioner as to the progress of implementation (e.g. "implemented", "in progress", "not implemented" and "unable to be determined").²⁰⁹²

The Commissioner publishes its annual reports on its website, and regularly also publishes its investigative or inquiry-related reports.²⁰⁹³

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁰⁹⁴

Summary: the Act and the Commissioner largely fall short of the Paris Principles with respect to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁰⁹⁵ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism²⁰⁹⁶

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the Commissioner, it is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society.²⁰⁹⁷ However, there are no clear requirements for the Commissioner's role under the Act, other than that the Commissioner:²⁰⁹⁸

- has qualifications or experience relating to the Commissioner's functions; and
- is committed to the objects of this Act and the underlying principles.

There is no process which enables diverse societal groups (such as by gender, ethnicity and minority status) to be involved in the appointment of the Commissioner. At least, it is not expressly stated in the Act.

²⁰⁹⁷ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.7.

²⁰⁹⁸ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 9(4).

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition.²⁰⁹⁹

The Commissioner is entitled to employ public sector employees, or any agency staff made available under an arrangement of the Chief Executive Officer of that agency.²¹⁰⁰ The Commissioner's staff are subject only to the direction of the Commissioner or another member of the Commissioner's staff.²¹⁰¹ However, the Act does not set out any provisions regarding the selection and appointment of staff.

Recently, there have been reports of a number of allegations surrounding improper hiring processes in the Commissioner's office.²¹⁰² The Commissioner is alleged to have hired a personal friend as a senior officer, without any qualifications for the position, and the government was allegedly forced to undertake a new hiring process as a result.²¹⁰³

To the extent that the Commissioner hires public sector employees, the Public Sector Employment and Management Act 1993 (NT)²¹⁰⁴ requires human resource management to be directed towards:²¹⁰⁵

- ensuring that all persons have equal opportunity to compete for employment;
- eliminating unlawful discrimination; and
- promoting diversity among employees reflective of the diversity of persons in the community.

Full-time members²¹⁰⁶

The Commissioner is to be appointed by the Administrator by written instrument.²¹⁰⁷ The Act does not expressly require the Commissioner to be appointed on a full-time basis. The Act sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period to be specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years), and the Commissioner is eligible for re-appointment.²¹⁰⁸ The Act does not appear to limit re-appointment in any way, which may not constitute appropriate mechanisms of pluralism, particularly given the NCC is a single-body NHRI.

The Act does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Commissioner holds office on the terms and conditions to be determined by the Administrator (including remuneration, expenses and allowances).²¹⁰⁹

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is sparsely drafted and largely does not comply with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

²¹⁰⁸ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 12.

²¹⁰⁹ Children's Commissioner Act 2013 (NT) s 13.

The GANHRI Observations emphasise the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²¹¹⁰

There is a paucity of information on the hiring criteria and processes for the Commissioner's office. The Commissioner is appointed by the Administrator on the recommendation of the Minister.²¹¹¹ While the appointment mechanisms are set out in the Act,²¹¹² the only clear requirements are that the person:²¹¹³

- has qualifications or experience relating to the Commissioner's functions; and
- is committed to the objects of this Act and the underlying principles.

The Act does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment and there is limited statutory or administrative material available as to how the Minister assesses this criteria, which raises concerns about whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent, and participatory.²¹¹⁴

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²¹¹⁵

As outlined above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the Commissioner. While the Act does not expressly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission, it does provide that the Commissioner is not subject to the direction of anyone in relation to the way in which its functions are performed or the order of priority it gives to investigations.²¹¹⁶ As such, the Act prevents political representatives from inappropriately influencing the Commissioner's decision-making.²¹¹⁷

Funding

The Commissioner is considered an "Independent Office" in the Northern Territory Budget document for 2019-20. Despite the categorisation, the budget is decided by the NT Government.

Tenure²¹¹⁸

The Act sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years).²¹¹⁹ The Commissioner is eligible for reappointment.²¹²⁰

The Act further provides that the Commissioner holds office “on the conditions (including as to remuneration, expenses and allowances) determined by the Administrator”.²¹²¹ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act. As such, in practice, the terms and conditions of the Commissioners' employ are determined on a discretionary basis.

The Act also sets out specific grounds for removal from office. The Administrator must terminate the Commissioner's appointment on grounds of bankruptcy.²¹²² However, for grounds of misbehaviour or of physical or mental incapacity, there is a due process that the Administrator must follow in order to terminate the Commissioner. That is, the Administrator may suspend the Commissioner and, within three sitting days of the suspension, the Minister must present the reasons for suspension to the Legislative Assembly.²¹²³ If, within 7 sitting days, the Legislative Assembly passes a resolution by a two-thirds majority requesting the termination, then the Administrator must terminate the Commissioner.²¹²⁴

While not exactly an “independent body”, requiring a two-thirds majority of the Legislative Assembly to vote on the Commissioner's removal from office goes further towards upholding public confidence and ensuring security of tenure for the Commissioner.²¹²⁵

Recruitment²¹²⁶

The Commissioner is entitled to employ public sector employees, or any agency staff made available under an arrangement of the Chief Executive Officer of that agency.²¹²⁷ The Commissioner's staff are subject only to the direction of the Commissioner or another member of the Commissioner's staff.²¹²⁸

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is a lack of transparency around the funding of the Commissioner (particularly under the Act). However, in practice, the Commissioner partially complies with the Paris Principles requiring adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²¹²⁹

The statutory provisions do not provide an indication as to the source or amount of funding for the Commissioner and the Commissioner's annual reports do not appear to set out the Commissioner's annual financial statements.

However, the Northern Territory Budget for 2019-20 allocates $1,865,000 as a separate line item for the Commissioner.²¹³⁰ It is noteworthy that for the purpose of funding by the NT government, the office of the Commissioner is considered part of the “Independent Offices” output group under the Department of Attorney-General and Justice. Other offices under this output group include Consumer Affairs, Anti-Discrimination Commission, Registrar-General, Public trustee, Office of the Public Guardian, Health and Community Services Complaints Commission. To place the Commissioner budget in context, the “Independent Offices” output group was budgeted for $14,927,000 for 2019-20; The entire Department of Attorney-General was budgeted for $406,733,000 for 2019-20.

The NT government has recently added an extra $580,000 per annum to the budget of the Office of the Children’s Commissioner.²¹³¹

The Commissioner’s budget should be considered in light of the $538 million total funding on children and family services in the NT split between Commonwealth and NT Government in the 2018-19 financial year.²¹³² A diagram used by the Productivity Commission of the Australian Governing in its Draft Expenditure on Children in the Northern Territory Report dated November 2019, shows a useful breakdown of this expenditure:

Source: Productivity Commission estimates based on departmental data.

While this may appear to be an adequate allocation for the Commissioner’s activities, this may not always have been the case. The report of the Royal Commission into the Detention and Protection of Children in the Northern Territory, tabled in Parliament on 17 November 2017, found that the Commissioner’s Office was under-resourced to perform its full range of statutory functions in relation to the care and protection of vulnerable children in the Northern Territory.²¹³³

It is not known that there are any other sources of funding.

NHRI staff and members²¹³⁴

The Commissioner is entitled to be paid remuneration, expenses and allowances as determined by the Administrator.²¹³⁵ The Commissioner does not appear to make workforce data on the remuneration of its executives publicly available on its website or in its annual reports.

Accessibility and communications infrastructure²¹³⁶

The Commissioner maintains a free call line for complaints, which is open between 8:00am and 4:00pm on weekdays (excluding public holidays).²¹³⁷ The Commissioner also maintains a communications system for general enquiries. This system includes a telephone line, email address, mailing address and active social media accounts.²¹³⁸ The Commissioner also has an open-to-the-public office in Darwin.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Commissioner is required to produce annual reports for the Minister,²¹³⁹ which the Minister must table to the Legislative Assembly within 6 sitting days.²¹⁴⁰ The Commissioner's annual reports are made available on its website.²¹⁴¹

In practice, the Commission's annual reports include a summary of the activities undertaken in the financial year, as well as its opinions, recommendations and proposals. In addition, the reports track the implementation of the Commissioner's recommendations (e.g. "implemented", "in progress", "not implemented" and "unable to be determined").²¹⁴² However, unlike other Australian children's commissioners, the Commissioner's annual reports do not appear to set out any financial records or workforce data for the Commissioner.

2.1 Suspension of Colleen Gwynne

As above, the current Commissioner Colleen Gwynne has recently been charged with abuse of office following an investigation by the Special References Unit of the Northern Territory Police.²¹⁴³ Ms Gwynne faced Darwin Local Court on 27 August 2020 and, while the specific allegations were not aired in court, police say the charge relates to alleged "arbitrary and prejudicial conduct".²¹⁴⁴ The case is expected to return to court on 11 November 2020.

on 25 July 2016,²¹⁴⁵ a Royal Commission was established by the Australian Government to inquire into, and report upon, failings in the child protection and youth detention systems of the Government of the Northern Territory. The Royal Commission's findings in relation to the Commissioner include the following:

- it is constrained by a lack of general power to investigate matters of a systemic nature rather than individual complaints;²¹⁴⁶ and
- it is under-resourced to perform its full range of stature functions.²¹⁴⁷

One of the most significant recommendations was that the Act be repealed, and legislation passed establishing a Commission for Children and Young People, with jurisdiction for all children and young people in the Northern Territory. This Commission for Children and Young People would have two commissioners, one of whom would be an Aboriginal person, and the commissioners would have wider powers of inspection.²¹⁴⁸

The findings of the Royal Commission are set out in more detail in Part C below.

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commissioner is vested with strong quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling power).²¹⁴⁹
- The Commissioner has own-motion inquiry powers, including powers to compel access to information during these inquiries.²¹⁵⁰ The Act creates a number of offences designed to facilitate the performance of the Commissioner's functions and powers.²¹⁵¹
- The Commissioner publicly tracks and reviews the implementation of its recommendations.²¹⁵²
- The Commissioner appears to maintain consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships.²¹⁵³
- In practice, the Commissioner publishes a wide range of information (including reports and inquiries) on its website, making it publicly accessible.²¹⁵⁴

C. Northern Territory Children's Commissioner: Impacts

In its 2018-2019 Annual Report, the Commissioner sets out the following statistics for the reporting year:²¹⁵⁵

- the Commissioner received 45 complaints (90% of which were received from an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander young person). The Commissioner dealt with 36 of these complaints by resolution, and left no complaints undetermined;
- the Commissioner dealt with two monitoring activities;
- the Commissioner conducted five preliminary enquiries;
- the Commissioner used its own-motion powers to initiate two investigations in response to complaints;
- the Commissioner referred 21 matters to the relevant service provider for investigation;
- the Commissioner's content reached a total of 74,603 people; and
- the Commissioner and staff engaged with over 2,000 children and young people.

4 Royal Commission into the Detention and Protection of Children in the Northern Territory

4.1 Background and relevant recommendations

By way of Letters Patent, the Honourable Margaret Jean White AO and Michael Lloyd Gooda were appointed Royal Commissioners on 1 August 2016.²¹⁵⁶ The final report of the Royal Commission was tabled in Parliament on 17 November 2017 and its findings in relation to the Commissioner were that:

- the office of the Commissioner is under-resourced to perform its full range of statutory functions in relation to the care and protection of vulnerable children in the Northern Territory; and²¹⁵⁷
- there is an ineffectiveness of external oversight mechanisms of detention centres.²¹⁵⁸

In respect of the Commissioner, the Royal Commission made the following recommendations:

- Recommendation 2.1: the Northern Territory Government provide legislation for a Representative Council of Children who are or have been in and out of home care and who have been in the youth justice system including in youth detention to express their views on the development and implementation of laws and policies which affect children and young people in those systems and that those views be given due weight. The Representative Council of Children should be located in and supported by the Commissioner.
- Recommendation 10.2: The Northern Territory Government close the current Don Dale Youth Detention Centre (to be replaced with a new, purpose-built facility) and by 17

February 2018 3 months after the date of this report, the Northern Territory Government report to the Commissioner (or Commission for Children and Young People if that Commission has been established by that time) on the program for that closure.

- Recommendation 14.1: If the superintendent separates a detainee from other detainees under sub-paragraph (1)(d) above, it must be reported to the Chief Executive Officer of Territory Families and to the Commissioner as soon as reasonably practical.
- Recommendation 37.7: The Commissioner publish in its Annual Report the number of compulsory notices it issued under section 35 of the Children's Commissioner Act (NT) in that year and whether they were complied with, including any delays in compliance.
- Recommendation 37.10: In light of recommendations made in relation to the Office of the Commissioner, the Children's Commissioner Act (NT) be amended to provide that the Commissioner is the Convenor of the Child Death Review and Prevention Committee with statutory responsibility for its operations, with the Child Death Review and Prevention Committee adopting a more comprehensive and regular process for reporting on its monitoring of the implementation of recommendations.
- Recommendation 40: Legislative changes including repeal of Children's Commissioner Act (NT) and establishment of a Commission for Children and Young People, with dual Commissioners, broader functions and stronger investigative powers.

4.2 Response by the Commissioner

According to the Commissioner's 2017-18 Annual Report, the Commissioner implemented measures in line with the findings and recommendations of the Royal Commission:

- "Stage 1" implementations to increase the Office's capacity to monitor and audit the youth justice and child protection systems and inspect detention and out-of-home Care facilities. This involves the development and implementation of a new monitoring and auditing framework that is consistent with the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or degrading Treatment or Punishment, ratified by the Australian Government on 21 December 2017;²¹⁵⁹ and
- commitments to monitor compliance with the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Child and Young Person Placement Principles following NT Government's investment of $4.2 million over four years to recruit and support Aboriginal foster and kinship carers on the Royal Commission's recommendation.²¹⁶⁰

According to the Commissioner's 2018-19 Annual Report, the Commissioner progressed the following implementations in the reporting period:

- the Commissioner developed the monitoring framework to inspect youth justice detention centres, out-of-home care facilities and Bail Support Centres and applied this framework to the monitoring of the Don Dale Youth Detention Centre and the Alice Springs Youth Detention Centre;
- the Commissioner observed that there has been a significant reduction in incidents in the centres and enhanced compliance with legislation since monitoring commenced;²¹⁶¹ and

- by May 2018, the NT Parliament had implemented Recommendation 14.1 so that the Commissioner is notified when detainees are separated.²¹⁶²

5 Resolution of complaints

One way to measure the impact of the Commissioner is to analyse the number of complaints the Commissioner has received over the years:

- in the 2015-2016 reporting period, the Commissioner received 90 complaints involving 108 different children;²¹⁶³
- in the 2016-2017 reporting period, the Commissioner received 86 complaints involving 127 different children;²¹⁶⁴
- in the 2017-2018 reporting period, the Commissioner received 92 complaints involving 132 different children;²¹⁶⁵ and
- in the 2018-2019 reporting period, the Commissioner received 45 complaints involving 40 different children.²¹⁶⁶

6 Recent Reports

6.1 Monitoring Reports: Don Dale and Alice Springs Youth Detentions Centre²¹⁶⁷

As outlined above, the Royal Commission into the Protection and Detention of Children in the Northern Territory emphasised the importance of independent scrutiny in the context of ensuring that the rights of children being held in detention are both respected and upheld.

On 20 June 2019, the Commissioner's monitoring reports of the Don Dale and Alice Springs Youth Detention Centres were tabled in Northern Territory Parliament.²¹⁶⁸ The reports made a total of 26 recommendations, with the Commissioner finding that:

- positive and important changes have been made in relation to the Don Dale Youth Detention Centre; and
- there are ongoing concerns in regard to the management of separation within the Alice Springs Youth Detention Centre.

The reports were designed to address immediate risks to the wellbeing of young people and staff in these centres, and to complement the reform framework identified by the Royal Commission and the reform agenda to which the Northern Territory Government committed after the Royal Commission.²¹⁶⁹

6.2 Own Initiative Investigation Report: Abuse in Care²¹⁷⁰

On 19 September 2019, the Commissioner commenced an own-motion investigation to examine the services provided to 12 children who were in the care of the Chief Executive Officer of NT Families and Children, the Department of Children and Families and Territory Families.²¹⁷¹ The investigation examined all interactions and interventions by Territory Families, the Department of Health, the Northern Territory Police, Fire and Emergency Services and Life Without Barriers.

The report made a total of 14 recommendations, with the Commissioner making findings of:

- shortcomings and policy breaches in relation to appropriate assessment and provision of expected standards of care; and
- many opportunities which were missed by service providers in responding to standard of care reports, resulting in continued physical and emotional harm of the children in care.

On 24 June 2020, the Commissioner's report was tabled in the Northern Territory Legislative Assembly.²¹⁷²

19 Children and Young People Commissioner (Australian Capital Territory)

A. Children and Young People Commissioner (ACT): Summary table

Question	Summary response
Country/State/Territory	Australian Central Territory, Australia
Commissioner entity name	The Children and Young People Commissioner (the “ Commissioner ”)
Date established	Established under the Human Rights Commission (Children and Young People Commissioner) Amendment Act 2005 (ACT) ²¹⁷³ that amended the Human Rights Commission Act 2005 (ACT) (the “ Act ”). First notified on 2 September 2005 and came into effect on 1-2 November 2006. ²¹⁷⁴
Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	The role of the Commissioner is generally compliant with the Paris Principles, with the exception of the appointment process and separation from political representatives requirement. Improvements to the Commissioner’s role need to be implemented in order for it to meet the Paris Principles more closely. As the Commissioner shares its role with the Public Advocate and sits under the ACT Human Rights Commission (the “ Commission ”), it falls short of meeting the Paris Principles since it relies on the Commission or other commissioners to carry out certain functions.
Structure Where does the role sit, is it: (a) a stand-alone office; or (b) part of an existing institution (specify which institution) What relationships are there between this role and other Commissioners or institutions?	The Commissioner sits under the Commission along with other commissioners and the Public Advocate. ²¹⁷⁵ The Commission is an independent statutory body. ²¹⁷⁶ Commission members are encouraged to act in a way that promotes the collegiate nature of the commission. ²¹⁷⁷ Commissioners are able to share statutory office-holder information with another commissioner and use that shared information if it is for the effective exercise of a function under the Act. ²¹⁷⁸ The current Commissioner is also Public Advocate, who advocates not only for young people and children but all persons whose situation gives rise to a need for protection from abuse, exploitation or neglect. ²¹⁷⁹ One of the Public Advocate’s specific functions is to advocate for the rights of children and young people. ²¹⁸⁰

	The Commissioner is also a member of the Australian and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians and Australian Guardianship and Administration Council. ²¹⁸¹
Accountability arrangements What is the reporting line for the role? Who sets the budget?	The President of the Commission ensures the commission's (and therefore the Commissioner's) functions are exercised in an orderly and prompt way.²¹⁸² The President of the Commission sets the budget for the Commission after consulting with the Director-General for Justice and Community Safety Directorate ("JACS") and other commissioners, which is then published in the Governance and Corporate Support Protocol.²¹⁸³
Qualification and Experience What qualifications and experiences are required for the role? Does the person need to be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person? What is the selection and appointment process?	The ACT Executive appoints a Commissioner.²¹⁸⁴ The Commissioner cannot be appointed for a term longer than 5 years but can be reappointed at the end of that term.²¹⁸⁵ Requirements and process of the appointment are governed by Part 19.3 of the Legislation Act 2001 (ACT), which includes administrative requirements such as appointments are to be in writing and the appointer may make an appointment by naming the person appointed.²¹⁸⁶ The ACT has to be satisfied that the person has the experience or expertise necessary to exercise the member's functions (see more on the Commissioner's functions below).²¹⁸⁷ There are no requirements in the Act that require the Commissioner to be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person.
Scope What is the scope of the role in relation to advocating on a national or state level for the rights, views and needs of the relevant individuals?	The Commissioner can exercise:²¹⁸⁸ <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1) functions for the commission in relation to services for children and young people, which is defined as a service provided in the ACT specifically for children, young people, both children and young people, or their carers.²¹⁸⁹ This is subject to any decision of the Commission in relation to the exercise of its functions in regard to services for children and young people.²¹⁹⁰ 2) exercise any other function given to the Commissioner under the Act or any other ACT law, including the following functions of the Commission in general under the Act:²¹⁹¹

B. ACT Children and Young People Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs²²¹⁸

Summary: the Act partially complies with this requirement, lacking transparency in the appointment process

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²²¹⁹

Entrenched in law²²²⁰

The Commission and Commissioner are both legislatively enshrined in the Act.²²²¹ The Commissioner sits under the Commission along with other human rights related commissioners.²²²² The Commission itself is an independent statutory body.²²²³

Mandate and powers²²²⁴

The Commissioner's functions are specifically to exercise functions for the commission in relation to services for children and young people, but also to exercise functions of the Commission in general which are broader.²²²⁵ The Act also requires the Commissioner to endeavour to ensure the Commission is accessible to and actively consults young people/children.²²²⁶ The Commissioner can establish advisory committees to assist them with exercising his or her functions.²²²⁷

Appointment and mechanisms²²²⁸

The Act sets out that the ACT Executive appoints the Commissioner but the appointment process is not transparent.²²²⁹ The ACT Executive only has to be satisfied that the person has the experience or expertise necessary to exercise the member's functions.²²³⁰

Line of accountability²²³¹

The President of the Commission ensures the commission's functions (including that of the Commissioner's) are exercised in an orderly and prompt way.²²³² The accountability of the Commissioner seems to be assessed on a whole together with the Commission via performance indicators for the Commission set out in the budget papers and reported through the JACS Annual Report.²²³³

²²¹⁸ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)²²³⁴

The Disability and Community Services Commissioner deals with complaints about services for children and young people as the Commissioner does not have legislated responsibility for complaints handling.²²³⁵ However, in practice, referrals are often made across the Commission.²²³⁶ The Commissioner can also support people to submit a complaint to the Discrimination, Health Services, Disability and Community Services Commissioner.²²³⁷

1.2 Human rights mandate²²³⁸

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant in providing a broad mandate, with investigative and complaints-handling powers

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²²³⁹ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²²⁴⁰

Competence and responsibilities²²⁴¹

The Commissioner is given broad powers in relation to services for children and people in the ACT.²²⁴² In addition, the Commissioner can also exercise any other function given to the Commission, including encouraging resolution of complaints in relation to and improving the services provided by the Commission.²²⁴³

Although the functions do not specifically require the Commission to promote human rights, the Commissioner is required to act in accordance with the HR Act.²²⁴⁴ The core of the Commissioners’ activities include training and educating the community on human rights.²²⁴⁵

The Commissioner does have a legislative mandate under the Act, the Children and Young People Act 2008 (ACT) and Mental Health Act 2015 (ACT) to undertake a compliance monitoring role in respect to services for the protection of children and young people to ensure the government meets its statutory responsibilities.²²⁴⁶ A function of the Commission (and therefore the Commissioner) is to identify, inquire into and review issues relating to the matters that may be complained about under the Act.²²⁴⁷ The Commissioner’s powers cover services, inquiries and complaints are not limited to either public or private sectors under the Act. However, the Commission's powers are limited to ACT only and enshrined under state legislation.²²⁴⁸

Access and visits²²⁴⁹

The Commissioner visits facilities or organisations to meet with service users and also conducts inspections that involve a systemic and more rigorous examination of facility administration and standards.²²⁵⁰ Visits can be announced or unannounced.²²⁵¹

Functional immunity²²⁵²

The Act states that the Commissioner or its staff/person who exercises a function under the Act is not personally liable for anything done or omitted to be honestly without recklessness in exercise of a function under the Act.²²⁵³ The civil liability that would attach to the Commissioner or staff would instead attach to the territory.²²⁵⁴ The Act does not expressly provide protection from criminal liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith by the Commissioner.

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Commissioner's inquiry powers are able to be exercised without a Ministerial recommendation. The Commission can self-initiate a report on a commission-initiated consideration and give it to who it considers appropriate.²²⁵⁵ The Commission can also give a third party a report if it is in the public interest to do so, and if the report is about matters of public policy, the third party has an appropriate interest in it or the third party has acted inconsistently with an applicable standard that applies to it/failed to do something that is required of it.²²⁵⁶

An example of the Commissioner exercising its inquiry powers include when the Commissioner discovered young people have been able to access medication intended for other young people at the Bimberi Youth Justice Centre.²²⁵⁷ The Commissioner launched an inquiry into the lack of both supervision of young people during medication rounds and confidentiality in the medication administration.²²⁵⁸ This prompted a review of medication administration practices and changes have since been implemented.²²⁵⁹

The Commission must be given access to information that it believes on reasonable grounds will be relevant to a consideration only in relation to a complaint and it is an offence if the person fails to produce the information.²²⁶⁰ Any information that is given honestly and without recklessness to the Commissioner or its staff is not a breach of confidence, professional conduct/etiquette/ethics.²²⁶¹

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant with this requirement, as requiring the Commissioner to consider and implement an evolving understanding of human rights

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²²⁶² Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²²⁶³

The Act indirectly references the international human rights standards and/or instruments by requiring the Commission (and therefore Commissioner) to act in accordance with the HR Act.²²⁶⁴ The HR Act states that public authorities such as the Commission (and therefore the Commissioner) is obliged to act consistently with human rights and give proper consideration to human rights when making decisions.²²⁶⁵ The HR Act cites international conventions and covenants as sources for provisions and expressly states that international law is essential when interpreting human rights.²²⁶⁶ Under the HR Act, international law is defined to include:²²⁶⁷

- the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and other human rights treaties to which Australia is a party;
- general comments and views of the United Nations human rights treaty monitoring bodies; and
- declarations and standards adopted by the United Nations General Assembly that are relevant to human rights.

The four main objects of the Act also focus on the promotion of human rights, including promoting community education, information and advice in relation to human rights, identifying and examining issues affecting the human rights and welfare of vulnerable groups, making recommendations on legislation, policies, practices and services affecting vulnerable groups promoting understanding and acceptance of compliance with the HR Act.²²⁶⁸

A function of the Commission (and therefore the Commissioner) is to identify, inquire into and review issues relating to the matters that may be complained about under the Act.²²⁶⁹ Although the Commission is actively involved in highlighting human rights issues in proposed ACT Government policies and legislation through ACT Government consultation processes, ACT Legislative Assembly inquires and responding to draft cabinet submissions and bills,²²⁷⁰ the Commissioner itself does not seem to participate in any of these.²²⁷¹ Although the Commissioner can provide feedback on cabinet submissions and provide advice through consultation for the purpose of influencing legislative change or policy reforms,²²⁷² the annual report suggests the

Commissioner takes on more of an advocacy role in promoting human rights rather than being involved in submissions and legislative processes.²²⁷³

The Commissioner does have a legislative mandate under the Act, the Children and Young People Act 2008 (ACT) and Mental Health Act 2015 (ACT) to undertake a compliance monitoring role in respect to services for the protection of children and young people to ensure the government meets its statutory responsibilities.²²⁷⁴ It is an offence under an Act if an entity receives a report from the Commission and fails to inform the Commission how it has addressed the recommendation within a certain timeframe.²²⁷⁵

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant as, whilst required to act consistently with international human rights, there is little legislated requirement to interact with the international human rights system more directly.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²²⁷⁶ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²²⁷⁷

As mentioned above in section 1.3, the Commissioner takes a rights-based approach as it must act in accordance with human rights and convention referenced in the HR Act.²²⁷⁸ In addition, as a public authority, the Commission (and therefore the Commissioner) is obliged to act consistently with human rights and give proper consideration to human rights when making decisions.²²⁷⁹ Under the Commissioner's Decision-Making Framework Fact Sheet, the Commissioner also tries to act in accordance with relevant international conventions to which Australia is a state party.²²⁸⁰

Although the Commissioner can provide feedback on cabinet submissions and provide advice through consultation for the purpose of influencing legislative change or policy reforms,²²⁸¹ the annual report suggests the Commissioner takes on more of an advocacy role in promoting human rights rather than being involved in submissions and legislative processes.²²⁸²

In theory, the Commissioner can self-initiate a report on a commission-initiated consideration and give it to who it considers appropriate, including the United Nations body.²²⁸³ The Commissioner can also give a third party such as the United Nations a report in relation to a complaint received if it is in the public interest to do so, and the report is about matters of public policy or the third party has an appropriate interest in it.²²⁸⁴ These powers in relation to issuing reports can be exercised independently.²²⁸⁵

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant with this requirement, as it engages in broad consultation and cooperation with human rights bodies

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²²⁸⁶ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²²⁸⁷

The Commission maintains consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights and has formalised a number of clear and workable relationships,²²⁸⁸ including the below:

- The Commissioner is a member of numerous boards and committees with responsibility for effecting policy development and/or systematic reform, including Early Childhood Strategy Inter-Directorate Committee Meeting, National Coalition on Child Safety and Wellbeing and the Children and Young People Death Review Committee.²²⁸⁹
- The Commissioner attends biannual members meetings of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians, which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand.²²⁹⁰ The Commissioner also hosted the May 2019 biannual meeting in Canberra.²²⁹¹
- The Commissioner is a member of the Australian Guardianship and Administration Council but it is unclear to how actively involved the Commissioner is.²²⁹²
- The Commissioner is a member of the Children and Young People Oversight Agencies Group, which targets systematic themes and trends emerging from discussions of its members, including the opportunities and challenges associated with facilitating effective interventions and outcomes for children and young people in the ACT.²²⁹³ The Commissioner undertakes site visits to relevant service offerings in New South Wales and Victoria to assist the group develop an effective intervention model for children and young people with complex high-level needs.²²⁹⁴
- The Commissioner co-chairs the Blueprint for Youth Justice taskforce with former Executive Director, Children, Youth and Families in the Community Services Directorate to report and recommend pathways and supports available to children and young people who come into contact with the youth justice system.²²⁹⁵
- The Commissioner collaborates and partners with Directions ACT to establish a Local Drug Action Team, which seeks to connect children and young people at risk of developing their own patterns of substance use with recreational, sports and capacity building programs to assist in preventing and reducing harm from alcohol and other drugs.²²⁹⁶

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, with recommendation powers being exercised secondary to an advocacy focus.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²²⁹⁷ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²²⁹⁸ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²²⁹⁹

As mentioned above, although the Commissioner can provide feedback on cabinet submissions and provide advice through consultation for the purpose of influencing legislative change or policy reforms,²³⁰⁰ the annual report suggests the Commissioner takes on more of an advocacy role in promoting human rights rather than being involved in submissions and legislative processes.²³⁰¹

However, the Commissioner can investigate or review issues as a component of broader inquiries into particular aspects of service delivery for an individual or systemically.²³⁰² This may include investigating individual or systemic concerns referred to, or identified by, the Commissioner, thematic reviews of a particular area of service provision across a sector or facility or targeted reviews examining an individual's or group's particular experience of service provision.²³⁰³

The Commissioner does have a legislative mandate under the Act, the Children and Young People Act 2008 (ACT) and Mental Health Act 2015 (ACT) to undertake a compliance monitoring role in respect to services for the protection of children and young people to ensure the government meets its statutory responsibilities.²³⁰⁴ The Commissioner publishes its reports and also actively monitors the implementation of the recommendations.²³⁰⁵ For example, the Commissioner oversees residential care arrangements for children and young people and can visit any of the residential properties for quality inspections.²³⁰⁶ The Commissioner has developed a framework for this assessment and also conducts consultations with young people and children in these residential care properties.²³⁰⁷ The Commissioner has also commented on the ACT Government's response to the Royal Commission's child safe standards recommendations by developing an implementation strategy.²³⁰⁸

The Disability and Community Services Commissioner deals with complaints about services for children and young people as the Commissioner does not have legislated responsibility for complaints handling.²³⁰⁹ However, in practice, referrals are often made across the Commission.²³¹⁰ The Commissioner can also support people to submit a complaint to the Discrimination, Health Services, Disability and Community Services Commissioner.²³¹¹

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²³¹²

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant, in promoting pluralism in the context of staffing

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²³¹³ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism²³¹⁴

The Commission has launched a Social Inclusion Plan for 2019 to 2022, which seeks to encourage social inclusion amongst its staff in regard to language, birthplace, ancestry, ethnicity, cultural traditions, societal structures and religion.²³¹⁵ The Commission is aiming to be a best practice employer and encourage job applications from key groups to ensure workforce reflects the diversity of the community.²³¹⁶ Under its annual report, the Commission publishes statistics on diversity in the workplace.²³¹⁷

Full-time members²³¹⁸

The Commissioner does not have tenure as he/she can only be appointed for a term of 5 years at a time (with an option to be reappointed).²³¹⁹ The Act is silent on whether the Commissioner has to be appointed on a full or part-time basis. The terms of appointment of the Commissioner are as agreed between the Commissioner and the Executive, subject to the Remuneration Tribunal Act 1995 (ACT).²³²⁰ Aside from remuneration, it seems that the Executive has discretion over what terms and conditions to appoint the Commissioner on.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is not compliant in this respect, with no process for appointing a broader decision-making body, and a lack of transparency in appointing the Commissioner.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²³²¹

As mentioned in section 1.1 above, the Act sets out that the ACT Executive appoints the Commissioner but the appointment process is not transparent.²³²² The ACT Executive only has to be satisfied that the person has the experience or expertise necessary to exercise the member's functions.²³²³ As mentioned above in section 1.8, the process for how the Commissioner hires its staff is not transparent.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act is not compliant in this respect, with insufficient autonomy from government.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²³²⁴ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The Commissioner does not appear to be independent from the government as the Executive is able to exercise considerable control over the Commissioners, including in relation to the tenure and recruitment process of the Commissioner's role.

Tenure²³²⁵

The Act does not set out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate. The appointment period specified in the Act is 5 years and the person is eligible for reappointment.²³²⁶ While this technically accords with the Paris Principles,²³²⁷ it is arguable that this period is too short to achieve functional immunity for the Commissioners.

The Executive can end the appointment of the Commissioner if he/she contravenes an ACT law, becomes bankrupt/insolvent, is convicted of a crime or for misbehaviour.²³²⁸ The Executive must end the Commissioner's appointment if he/she is absent for an extended amount of time or for physical/mental incapacity that substantially affects the exercise of the person's functions.²³²⁹ This removal power is quite broad and can be relatively subjectively exercised. The Executive also does not have to provide reasons for dismissal.

Aside from remuneration, it seems that the Executive has discretion over what terms and conditions to appoint the Commissioner on.²³³⁰ This does not provide the necessary independence and autonomy from government (an essential requirement under the Paris Principles).

Recruitment²³³¹

The Commissioner is given wide discretion in deciding who to employ, but the process is relatively opaque. The Commissioner can establish advisory committees to assist them with exercising his or her functions,²³³² but neither the Act or other Commission policies/protocols cover the hiring process. The Commission Operations Protocol only states that the Commissioner is responsible for recruiting its staff in consultation with the Finance and Administration Manager.²³³³ The Act does not explicitly restrict participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commissioner or Commission.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner is partially compliant, with a reasonable salary but lack of transparency over staff budgets.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²³³⁴

Funding²³³⁵

The Commissioner is allocated a budget by the President of the Commission that it shares with the Public Advocate.²³³⁶ The President of the Commission sets the budget for the Commissioner after consulting with the Director-General for JACS and other commissioners, which is then published in the governance and corporate support protocol²³³⁷. The methodology for allocation is based on full-time equivalent staffing for the Commissioner,²³³⁸ which is some indication that the Commissioner is provided funding in order for it to act independently.

Employee expenses and related supplies and services (including travel and training) are included in the Commissioner's budget and the Commission also has to contribute its share of costs for items shared by the Commission as a whole (including rent, electricity, phones, stationary).²³³⁹

The Commissioner has an office that is accessible to the public, however, it shares its office with the other Commissioners.²³⁴⁰ The office appears to have adequate internet and phone access.²³⁴¹

The Commissioner's remuneration is determined by the ACT Remuneration Tribunal,²³⁴² which is currently determined to be $202,111 annually.²³⁴³ The published determination shows that the Commissioner's remuneration is similar to officeholders of a similar position.²³⁴⁴ There is no transparency around staff remuneration.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant in this respect.

Publication of reports²³⁴⁵

The Commission publishes its own annual report in line with statutory requirements and the Commission's finances are published in JACS' annual report.²³⁴⁶ The annual reports are available on the Commission and JACS' website.²³⁴⁷ In addition, the Commission publishes reports at the direction of the Minister and can also self-initiate reports or provide reports to third parties in relation to its functions and powers.²³⁴⁸

Content of annual report²³⁴⁹

The annual report covers actions that the Commission and government has taken to address the Commission's 3 year strategy plan, including submissions to inquiries, commission-initiated considerations and handling of complaints.²³⁵⁰

Submission²³⁵¹

The Commission's annual report is not required to be submitted to the Legislative Assembly. However, the Minister is required to present to the Legislative Assembly any Commission self-initiated reports or reports given by the Commission to third parties that are provided to the Minister.²³⁵²

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

One of the Commission's functions is to receive and resolve complaints in relation to issues that come under their scope of power. The Disability and Community Services Commissioner deals with complaints about services for children and young people as the Commissioner does not have legislated responsibility for complaints handling.²³⁵³ However, in practice, referrals are often made across the Commission.²³⁵⁴ The Commissioner can also support people to submit a complaint to the Discrimination, Health Services, Disability and Community Services Commissioner.²³⁵⁵

The Commission has received 43 complaints in FY 2018-2019 in relation to services for children and young people or their carer, mostly around children protection and custody arrangements.²³⁵⁶

Other than formal complaints received by the Commission, no other public criticism regarding this role could be found online.

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commissioner is also the Public Advocate, which allows the Commissioner to also focus on advocating to promote human rights and the Commissioner's works and values
- The Commissioner sits under the Commission, which allows it to receive shared information from other Commissioners and rely on other Commissioners or the Commission for certain functions (such as receiving complaints). Although this is also what causes it to fall short of meeting the Paris Principles, this is an attractive option for a newly established commissioner role to be able to rely on the resources of existing commissioners/commission.

C. ACT Children and Young People Commissioner: Impacts

4 Impacts of the ACT Children and Young People Commissioner

Given the current Commissioner is also Public Advocate (who advocates not only for young people and children but all persons whose situation gives rise to a need for protection from abuse, exploitation or neglect),²³⁵⁷ the Commissioner's recommendations that are subsequently adopted/implemented or inquiries/investigations that have led to reforms are not achieved solely within its own functions.

With that in mind, the Commissioner has made the following impact on the Community:

- The Commissioner supported the ACT Government's exploration of sector readiness in respect of child safe standards by contributing to the development of a national practice guide centred on applying a children's rights framework to complaints handling.²³⁵⁸ The guide is led by the NSW Ombudsman and due for release in 2019-20.²³⁵⁹
- In order to promote the National Principles for Creating Child-Safe Organisations, the Commissioner consulted children and young people in residential care in 2017-18 and produced a report based on those consultations.²³⁶⁰ Drawing on the consultation and report, the Commissioner developed a residential environment assessment framework centred on the themes of children's rights, participation and empowerment.²³⁶¹
- In efforts to divert children and young people from the youth justice system, the Commissioner co-chairs the Blueprint for Youth Justice Taskforce.²³⁶² The Commissioner produced and monitors the implementation of the Blueprint for Youth Justice in the ACT 2012-2022, which adopts an evidence-based, trauma-informed and human rights compliant policy approach to youth justice in the ACT.²³⁶³
- The Commissioner discovered young people have been able to access medication intended for other young people at the Bimberi Youth Justice Centre.²³⁶⁴ The Commissioner launched an inquiry into the lack of both supervision of young people during medication rounds and confidentiality in the medication administration.²³⁶⁵ This prompted a review of medication administration practices and changes have since been implemented.²³⁶⁶

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

Note: As the proposed enacting legislation has not yet been released, the below analysis is necessarily limited. We have based our analysis on the Bill and the announcements regarding the role to date, however the analysis is subject to the passing of the enacting legislation.

4.1 The establishment of NHRIs²⁴³⁴

Summary: the Bill partially with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs.

Entrenched in law²⁴³⁵

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁴³⁶ The role of the Commissioner is set to be formally entrenched in law,²⁴³⁷ pursuant to the Bill. The Bill broadly sets out the Commissioner's mechanisms of appointment and selection,²⁴³⁸ and quasi-judicial competency.²⁴³⁹

However, the Bill does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Commissioner holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor-General.²⁴⁴⁰

Mandate and powers²⁴⁴¹

The Bill broadly sets out the Commissioner's powers, including:²⁴⁴²

- to inquire into the circumstances of defence and veteran deaths by suicide;
- to make findings and recommendations following such inquiries, including:
 - recommendations in relation to the wellbeing of defence members and veterans and defence and veteran suicide prevention strategies; and
 - recommendations in relation to any policy, legislative, administrative or structural reforms;
- to review action taken in response to any findings or recommendations made by the Commissioner;
- to work collaboratively with State or Territory Coroners to understand issues contributing to defence and veteran deaths by suicide;
- to maintain a record of defence and veteran deaths by suicide notified to the Commissioner;

²⁴³⁴ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

²⁴³⁵ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁴³⁶ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁴⁴² National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention Bill 2020 (Cth) s 11.

- to promote understanding of suicide risks for defence members and veterans and factors that can improve the wellbeing of defence members and veterans;
- to consider any matter related to the above functions referred to the Commissioner by the Prime Minister or the Minister;
- to do anything incidental or conducive to the performance of any of the above functions.

In performing their functions, the Commissioner must have regard to the need to avoid prejudicing current or future criminal or civil proceedings or other contemporaneous inquiries,²⁴⁴³ such as inquiries under the Defence Act 1903 (Cth).²⁴⁴⁴

The Commissioner has the power do all things necessary or convenient to be done in connection with their functions,²⁴⁴⁵ and in the exercise of their powers or functions, the Commissioner should:²⁴⁴⁶

- take a trauma-informed and restorative approach;
- recognise that families and others affected by defence and veteran deaths by suicide have a unique contribution to make to the Commissioner's functions; and
- recognise that those families and other affected persons may wish to be consulted.

Appointment mechanisms²⁴⁴⁷

While the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner are set out in the Bill,²⁴⁴⁸ it is arguable that they are not sufficiently transparent. The only clear requirement is that the person is “suitable for appointment” because of their “qualifications, training or experience”.²⁴⁴⁹

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)²⁴⁵⁰

The Commissioner does not appear to have an express a complaints-handling power under the Bill. However, the Commissioner does have some functions that could foreseeably provide an avenue for complaints about existing policies and procedures, for example:

- as part of the Commissioner's inquiry powers, the Commissioner may inquire into the quality and effectiveness of responses to any complaints made by the person (or their family, friends or associates) in relation to that person's health and wellbeing, or access to support services;²⁴⁵¹ and
- in exercising their functions, the Commissioner should recognise that persons affected by defence a veteran deaths by suicide may wish to be consulted.²⁴⁵²

Furthermore, at the time the Commissioner role was first announced, the Government also simultaneously announced the establishment of a Veteran Family Advocate (VFA) within the portfolio of the Department of Veteran Affairs.²⁴⁵³ The Government has already introduced an amendment Bill to establish the VFA position as part of the existing Repatriation Commission and Military Rehabilitation and Compensation Commission.²⁴⁵⁴

The VFA will undertake engagement, liaison and advocacy across the veterans' sector, drawing on the advice of veterans' families.²⁴⁵⁵ The Explanatory memorandum for the Bill describes the VFA position as "an important aspect of the Prime Minister's announcement on 5 February 2020 regarding the establishment of a National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention".²⁴⁵⁶ While it remains to be seen how the Commissioner and VFA roles are expected to interact, it may be that the VFA will embody a more public-facing role than the Commissioner.

4.2 Human rights mandate²⁴⁵⁷

Summary: the Bill is largely compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁴⁵⁸ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁴⁵⁹

Competence and responsibilities²⁴⁶⁰

As is set out above, the proposed mandate for the Commissioner appears to be quite broad.²⁴⁶¹ The broad mandate would allow the Commissioner to involve themselves in a wide range of human rights issues, provided that those issues related to circumstances of defence and veteran deaths by suicide.

Powers of inquiry and investigation

One of the Commissioner's main functions is to inquire into the circumstances of defence and veteran deaths by suicide,²⁴⁶² and to make recommendations following such inquiries.²⁴⁶³ These powers of inquiry are able to be exercised without a Ministerial recommendation (i.e. on the Commissioner's own initiative).²⁴⁶⁴

²⁴⁶⁴ National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention Bill 2020 (Cth) s 26(2).

The Bill sets out broad circumstances that the Commissioner may inquire into (such as a person's ADF service, and any available support services), however the Bill also states that the Commissioner's inquiries are not limited to these circumstances.²⁴⁶⁵ In fact, when asked about the remit of these inquiry powers, the Prime Minister confirmed that the Commissioner will be able to look into "all the factors that may have been contributing", which could include other factors such as veterans' homelessness.²⁴⁶⁶

The Commissioner's powers with respect to inquiries are broad. For example, the Commissioner may:

- hold a public hearing as the Commissioner sees fit, and in doing so, the Commissioner is not bound by the rules of evidence;²⁴⁶⁷
- hold a private hearing, provided that the Commissioner is satisfied that the information to be disclosed is personal and private or operationally sensitive;²⁴⁶⁸
- summon a person, by written notice, to attend a hearing in order to give notice or produce documents (including documents subject to legal professional privilege);²⁴⁶⁹
- require a witness to take an oath or make an affirmation;²⁴⁷⁰
- give written notice requiring a person to provide information or produce documents (including information or documents subject to legal professional privilege);²⁴⁷¹ and/or
- apply for search warrants (where the Commissioner believes on reasonable grounds that if a summons were issued, the document may be concealed, lost, mutilated or destroyed).²⁴⁷²

Witnesses appearing at hearings before the Commissioner may be paid a reasonable amount for the expenses of the witness' attendance.²⁴⁷³ A person who complies with a summons or a notice requiring information or documents does not commit an offence under a secrecy provision by complying.²⁴⁷⁴

Furthermore, Commonwealth bodies and officers may disclose information for the purposes of assisting the Commissioner,²⁴⁷⁵ and are authorised to do so despite anything in a law of a State or Territory or general law that prohibits disclosure.²⁴⁷⁶ The same applies to a State body or officer, or Territory body or officer and a Coroner or a Coroner's court.²⁴⁷⁷

In the "Legislation Pack" released by the Australian Government, the Commissioner's powers are compared to the powers of a Royal Commission as follows:²⁴⁷⁸

The Bill also sets out a number of offences intended to promote the Commissioner's powers and functions,²⁴⁷⁹ including for the following:

- Failure to attend a hearing after being summoned, or to give information or a statement, or produce documents or things after being so requested (punishable by two years' imprisonment).²⁴⁸⁰ This offence does not apply if the person has a reasonable excuse,²⁴⁸¹ or if the information, statement or document is not relevant.²⁴⁸²
 - Legal professional privilege is not considered to be a "reasonable excuse",²⁴⁸³ unless a court has found the information, statement or document to be privileged, or one of the other exceptions under section 48 applies.
 - An individual is not excused from giving information, evidence or a statement, or from producing a thing, on the ground that it might tend to incriminate the individual in relation to an offence (unless the individual has already been charged with that offence).²⁴⁸⁴ However, any such thing that is produced is not admissible in evidence in most criminal proceedings (with few exceptions).²⁴⁸⁵
- Refusal to swear an oath, make an affirmation or answer a question after being so requested (punishable by two years' imprisonment).²⁴⁸⁶
- Dismissal, discipline or prejudice of a witness for (or on account of) that witness having appeared as a witness, given evidence or given information or a document to the Commissioner (punishable by 10 penalty units or one years' imprisonment).²⁴⁸⁷

- Engaging in conduct that obstructs or hinders the Commissioner in the performance of their functions or powers (punishable by two penalty units or three months' imprisonment).²⁴⁸⁸
- Engaging in conduct that would constitute contempt of court if the Commissioner were a court of record (punishable by two penalty units or three months' imprisonment).²⁴⁸⁹
- Publishing information that the Commissioner has directed not be published, produced or disclosed (punishable by 3 years' imprisonment).²⁴⁹⁰

Functional immunity²⁴⁹¹

The Bill provides that the Commissioner has, in the performance or exercise of their legislated functions and powers, the same protection and immunity as a Justice of the High Court.²⁴⁹²

Guarantee of tenure²⁴⁹³

The Bill sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years).²⁴⁹⁴ While the Bill contains no express references to re-appointment, the Governor-General's power of appointment is taken to also include a power of re-appointment.²⁴⁹⁵

Furthermore, the Commissioner may only be dismissed by the Governor-General on the following specified grounds:²⁴⁹⁶

- for misbehaviour;
- if the Commissioner is unable to perform the duties of his or her office because of physical or mental incapacity;
- if the Commissioner becomes bankrupt, or applies to take the benefit of any law for the relief of bankrupt or insolvent debtors, or compounds with his or her creditors, or makes an assignment of remuneration for the benefit of his or her creditors;
- if the Commissioner is absent, except on leave of absence, for 14 consecutive days or for 28 days in any 12 months;
- if the Commissioner engages in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister; or
- if the Commissioner fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with s 23 of the Bill (which requires the Commissioner to provide a disclosure under s 29 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth))²⁴⁹⁷.

While this complies with the Paris Principles, the Bill itself does not expressly require the Governor-General to provide specific reasons for the dismissal, nor does the Bill expressly provide the Commissioner with an ability to contest any dismissal.

4.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Bill is partially compliant with the Paris Principles in regards to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments, however actual compliance may be difficult to assess without assessing the Commissioner's activities in practice.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁴⁹⁸ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁴⁹⁹

The Bill does not explicitly reference international human rights standards and/or instruments. However, the Commissioner is empowered to:

- inquire into the circumstances of defence and veteran deaths by suicide;²⁵⁰⁰
- make recommendations in relation to the wellbeing of defence members and veterans and defence and veteran suicide prevention strategies;²⁵⁰¹
- make recommendations in relation to any policy, legislative, administrative or structural reforms;²⁵⁰²
- promote understanding of suicide risks for defence members and veterans and factors that can improve the wellbeing of defence members and veterans;²⁵⁰³ and
- do anything incidental or conducive to the performance of any of the above functions.²⁵⁰⁴

Arguably, these functions could be used to promote discussion about any policies, legislation, administrative provisions or structural provisions that are inconsistent with the requirements of international human rights standards, particularly with respect to defence and veteran deaths by suicide. However, it remains to be seen how these powers are used in practice.

4.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Bill is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system, however actual compliance may be difficult to assess without assessing the Commissioner's activities in practice.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁵⁰⁵ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁵⁰⁶

While there are no human rights or convention references in the Act, the Commissioner will be empowered to:

- make recommendations in relation to any policy, legislative, administrative or structural reforms;²⁵⁰⁸
- promote understanding of suicide risks for defence members and veterans and factors that can improve the wellbeing of defence members and veterans;²⁵⁰⁹ and
- do anything incidental or conducive to the performance of any of the above functions.²⁵¹⁰

The Commissioner's powers to make recommendations and promote understanding could arguably be used to promote recommendations made by international human rights bodies,²⁵¹¹ provided of course that such recommendations related in some way to the prevention of defence and veteran deaths by suicide.

4.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Bill is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to cooperation with other human rights bodies, however actual compliance may be difficult to assess without assessing the Commissioner's activities in practice.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁵¹² This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁵¹³

It remains to be seen whether the Commissioner will develop and maintain consultation with other bodies responsible for the promotion and protection of human rights.²⁵¹⁴

However, based on the announcements to date, it appears that the Commissioner will at least be regularly and constructively engaging with relevant stakeholders.²⁵¹⁵ For example:

- in performing its functions, the Commissioner will work cooperatively with State and Territory Coroners to understand issues contributing to defence and veteran deaths by suicide;²⁵¹⁶
- affected families will be engaged in the upcoming interim review of historical cases of Defence and Veteran deaths by suicide and will be given an opportunity to participate and tell their stories;²⁵¹⁷

- a National Coronial Centre for Defence and Veteran Suicides will be established in order to support the Commissioner in identifying broader system issues for further inquiry;²⁵¹⁸ and
- the Commissioner may have some interaction with the VFA. Although the exact relationship between the two roles remains unclear, it has been suggested that the VFA will work closely with the Commissioner so that the Commissioner's findings can be "rapidly translated into action".²⁵¹⁹

The Commissioner's capacity for stakeholder engagement is corroborated by a historical job listing for various opportunities across the Commissioner's Office.²⁵²⁰ The listing states that:

"Engagement with the Australian Defence Force member and veteran community, and their families, will be a strong focus for the Office of the National Commissioner. The contribution of families, veterans, advocacy groups, and other interested stakeholders will be of key importance to the work of the National Commissioner. Strong engagement will also be needed across a range of Australian Government agencies, State and Territory Governments, and Coroners, to ensure the effective operations of the National Commissioner."

Furthermore, the listing includes the following as functions of the Office:

"Community engagement – including engaging with the public, answering phone calls from the public, responding to queries from the public, secretariat, and organising meetings, round tables, hearings and the like."

[...]

Counselling – including counselling and support for members of the public engaging with the National Commissioner, and wellbeing and vicarious trauma prevention and support activities for staff."

4.6 Recommendations by NHRIs²⁵²¹

Summary: the Bill largely complies with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁵²² Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁵²³ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁵²⁴

The Commissioner's main functions include:

- making recommendations in relation to any policy, legislative, administrative or structural reforms;²⁵²⁷ and
- reviewing action taken in response to any findings or recommendations made by the Commissioner.²⁵²⁸

When asked about the remit of the Commissioner's inquiry powers, the Prime Minister confirmed that the Commissioner will be able to look into "all the factors that may have been contributing", which could include other factors such as veterans' homelessness.²⁵²⁹ This may suggest that human rights matters can be the subject of recommendations by the Commissioner, provided that such matters are a contributing factor to defence and veteran deaths by suicide.

The Commissioner is also empowered to give the Prime Minister and the Minister a report in relation to any matter relating to, or arising in connection with, the exercise of its powers or functions.²⁵³⁰ Such reports would therefore include these recommendations (if any). The Minister must then cause the Commissioner's reports to be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 sitting days.²⁵³¹

As an additional accountability measure, the Commonwealth must respond to the Commissioner's reports in writing and must cause the response to be laid before each House of Parliament as soon as is reasonably practicable.²⁵³²

Furthermore, if the Commissioner considers that adequate and appropriate action has not been taken in response to any of the Commissioner's reports, it may give another report to the Prime Minister and Minister, which must also be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 sitting days.²⁵³³

4.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁵³⁴

Summary: the Bill and the Commissioner partially comply with the Paris Principles with respect to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁵³⁵ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism²⁵³⁶

Where the NHRI is a single-member, such as the Commissioner, it is important that the NHRI is representative of diverse segments of society.²⁵³⁷ However, there are no clear requirements for the Commissioner's role under the Bill, other than that the person is "suitable for appointment" because of their "qualifications, training or experience".²⁵³⁸

There is no process which enables diverse societal groups (such as by gender, ethnicity and minority status) to be involved in the appointment of the Commissioner. At least, it is not expressly stated in the Bill.

Staff of the Commissioner

The staff assisting the Commissioner are to be Australian Public Service (APS) employees in the Attorney-General's Department or persons engaged by, or on behalf of, the Commonwealth as contractors. The staff's services are to be made available to the Commissioner by the Secretary of the Attorney-General's Department.²⁵³⁹

We note that one of the Australian Public Service (APS) Employment Principles which agency heads must uphold and promote²⁵⁴⁰ is to recognise the diversity of the Australian community and foster diversity in the workplace.²⁵⁴¹

We have located a historical job listing for various opportunities across the Office of the Commissioner.²⁵⁴² The job listing was open from 2 July 2020 to 19 July 2020. It noted:

- that staff of the Office will be employees of the Attorney-General's Department;
- that the range and nature of work within the Office requires a workforce that reflects Australia's diverse society; and
- that the Department is committed to providing a flexible, diverse and inclusive workplace.

The fact that staff will be employees of the Attorney-General's Department may undermine the principle of institutional independence set out in the Paris Principles.²⁵⁴³ However, the Department's policies on diversity may go towards ensuring the requirement of pluralism in the Commissioner's office.²⁵⁴⁴

Full-time members²⁵⁴⁵

The Commissioner is to be appointed by the Governor-General by written instrument,²⁵⁴⁶ on a full-time basis.²⁵⁴⁷ The Bill sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's mandate, which is the period specified in the instrument of appointment (not exceeding 5 years).²⁵⁴⁸ Although not express in the Bill, the Governor-General's power of appointment in respect of the Commissioner is taken to also include a power of re-appointment.²⁵⁴⁹ The Bill does not appear to limit reappointment in any way, which may not constitute appropriate mechanisms of pluralism, particularly given the Commissioner is a single-body NHRI.

The Bill states that the Commissioner is entitled to be paid remuneration, as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or, in the absence of a determination, by the rules.²⁵⁵⁰ The Remuneration Tribunal is the independent statutory body that handles the remuneration of key Commonwealth offices.

The Bill does not comprehensively set out the terms and conditions of office, and states that the Commissioner holds office on the terms and conditions determined by the Governor-General.²⁵⁵¹

4.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Bill is sparsely drafted and largely does not comply with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

The GANHRI Observations emphasise the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁵⁵²

The appointment of the Commissioner is to be made by the Governor-General.²⁵⁵³ While the appointment mechanisms for the Commissioner are set out in the Bill,²⁵⁵⁴ the only clear requirement is that the person is “suitable for appointment” because of their “qualifications, training or experience”.²⁵⁵⁵ The Bill does not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment and we have been unable to locate any statutory or administrative material available as to how the Governor-General assesses this criteria, which raises concerns about whether the appointment process is sufficiently clear, transparent, and participatory.²⁵⁵⁶

However, we note that job vacancies within the Office of the Commissioner were publicly advertised on the Attorney-General's website.²⁵⁵⁷ The job listing set out clear and publicly available criteria for the various roles, as well as referring applicants to a defined set of performance expectations.²⁵⁵⁸ Nevertheless, as outlined above, the fact that the Attorney-General's Department was the hiring body for the Commissioner's staff may undermine the principle of institutional independence set out in the Paris Principles.²⁵⁵⁹

4.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Bill partially complies with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

²⁵⁵⁹ See Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism, principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.4.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁵⁶⁰

As outlined above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process for the Commissioner. However, the Bill does provide that the Commissioner must not engage in paid work outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister,²⁵⁶¹ and the Governor-General must terminate the Commissioner's appointment if the Commissioner fails to comply with this provision.²⁵⁶² These provisions might operate to prevent a member of parliament from holding the role of Commissioner at the same time.

Tenure²⁵⁶³

As is set out above, the Commissioner's grounds for dismissal are limited – the Governor-General may only terminate the Commissioner's employment on the following specified grounds:²⁵⁶⁴

- for misbehaviour;
- if the Commissioner is unable to perform the duties of his or her office because of physical or mental incapacity;
- if the Commissioner becomes bankrupt, or applies to take the benefit of any law for the relief of bankrupt or insolvent debtors, or compounds with his or her creditors, or makes an assignment of remuneration for the benefit of his or her creditors;
- if the Commissioner is absent, except on leave of absence, for 14 consecutive days or for 28 days in any 12 months;
- if the Commissioner engages in paid employment outside the duties of his or her office without the approval of the Minister; or
- if the Commissioner fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with s 23 of the Bill (which requires the Commissioner to provide a disclosure under s 29 of the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth)²⁵⁶⁵).

While this complies with the Paris Principles, the Bill itself does not expressly require the Governor-General to provide specific reasons for the dismissal, nor does the Bill expressly provide the Commissioner with an ability to contest any dismissal.

Recruitment²⁵⁶⁶

The Commissioner is not in charge of hiring his or her own staff. In fact, as is set out above, the staff assisting the Commissioner are to be Australian Public Service (APS) employees in the Attorney-General's Department or persons engaged by, or on behalf of, the Commonwealth as contractors. The staff's services are to be made available to the Commissioner by the Secretary of the Attorney-General's Department.²⁵⁶⁷

The fact that staff will be employees of the Attorney-General's Department and must be provided to the Commissioner by that Department, may undermine the principle of institutional independence set out in the Paris Principles.²⁵⁶⁸

4.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is currently a lack of transparency around the funding available to the Commissioner. However, in practice, the Commissioner partially complies with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²⁵⁶⁹

Allocation for activities and accountability²⁵⁷⁰

The role of the Commissioner will be funded by the Australian Government.

When the role of the Commissioner was first announced, the Government stated that it would invest an initial $40 million to support the Commissioner's work and that this amount will be expanded to ensure the Commissioner has whatever resources it needs.²⁵⁷¹ However, the July 2020 Economic and Fiscal Update states that the Government will provide $31 million over five years from 2019-20 (including capital of $1.9 million over two years from 2019-20) to:

- establish the Commissioner role;
- allow the Commissioner to undertake an independent review of historical Defence and Veteran deaths by suicide; and
- establish the VFA.²⁵⁷²

Since then, the Explanatory Memorandum for the Bill and the Explanatory Memorandum for the accompanying National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention (Consequential Amendments) Bill 2020 (Cth)²⁵⁷³ both state that $42.7 million has been provided over five years to support the establishment and operation of the Commissioner's function.²⁵⁷⁴ These costs also include:

- funding for a one-off review of historical ADF member and veteran deaths by suicide, to be led by the Commissioner; and
- funding for a dedicated legal financial assistance scheme.

While it remains to be seen whether this funding will be adequate, an allocation of $30-45 million for the first five years appears substantial when compared to other national Commissioners. For example, the Government allocated only $3.5 million over 4 years to establish and fund the National Children's Commissioner.²⁵⁷⁵

The Bill provides that the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth)²⁵⁷⁶ applies to the Commissioner as if they were an official of the Attorney-General's Department.²⁵⁷⁷

NHRI staff and members²⁵⁷⁸

The Bill states that the Commissioner is entitled to be paid remuneration, as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal or, in the absence of a determination, by the rules.²⁵⁷⁹ However, the exact remuneration for the Commissioner role remains to be established.

Accessibility and communications infrastructure²⁵⁸⁰

It is not yet clear whether the Commissioner's funding will provide for the establishment of a well-functioning communications system.

4.11 Annual reports of NHRIs²⁵⁸¹

Summary: the Bill largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Commissioner is required to produce annual reports for the Prime Minister and the Minister,²⁵⁸² which the Minister must table to both Houses of Parliament within 15 sitting days.²⁵⁸³ The Commissioner may also give the Prime Minister and the Minister a report in relation to any matter relating to, or arising in connection with, the exercise of its powers or functions.²⁵⁸⁴ These additional reports must also be tabled to both Houses of Parliament within 15 sitting days.²⁵⁸⁵

As an additional accountability measure, the Commonwealth must respond to the Commissioner's reports in writing and must cause the response to be laid before each House of Parliament as soon as is reasonably practicable.²⁵⁸⁶

Furthermore, if the Commissioner considers that adequate and appropriate action has not been taken in response to any of the Commissioner's reports, it may give another report to the Prime Minister and Minister, which must also be laid before each House of Parliament within 15 sitting days.²⁵⁸⁷

It is not yet clear whether the Commissioner will be entitled to make its reports publicly available by publishing them on the Commissioner's website (if the office has one). However, it is worth noting that, given the subject matter of the Commissioner's mandate, the reports are likely to contain personal information and may include intelligence information, so public reporting may be limited. For example, the Bill expressly sets out the entities to which the Commissioner is

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

Since the announcement of the Commissioner's role, reception has been largely positive.²⁵⁸⁹

However, we note that both the Attorney-General and the Senate Foreign Affairs, Defence and Trade Legislation Committee have only recently opened the Bill up to public consultation.²⁵⁹⁰

Submissions to the Attorney-General close on 24 September 2020, while submissions to the Senate Committee close on 9 October 2020.²⁵⁹¹

The Senate Committee's inquiry report is expected by 30 November 2020.²⁵⁹² It is anticipated that this report will summarise some of the concerns around the Commissioner's role (if any), which are to be received by the Senate Committee during the submissions process.

4.12 Criticisms prior to the introduction of the Bill

Until the Bill was introduced, the main criticisms of the role related to the delay in releasing any enacting legislation.

During the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill (No. 3) 2019-2020 and Appropriation Bill (No. 4) 2019-2020 on 2 March 2020, the Member for Blair²⁵⁹³ noted increasing concern that the Commissioner role is "not better than a royal commission".²⁵⁹⁴ The Member urged the Government to release the enabling legislation and the terms for reference as soon as possible and to consult widely on the role.

The Member for Burt²⁵⁹⁵ raised similar concerns on 18 June 2020. During the debate following the second reading of the Veterans' Affairs Legislation Amendment (Supporting the Wellbeing of Veterans and their Families) Bill 2020, the Member moved to include an amendment to note that:

“...the House criticises the Government for failing to:

(1) appropriately address the serious issue of veteran suicide, including its stubborn refusal to enact a full Royal Commission into veteran suicide and its insistence on instead establishing a National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention; and

(2) introduce enabling legislation to establish a National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide Prevention”.²⁵⁹⁶

On 19 June 2020, Katter's Australian Party released a statement about the Commission, saying that it “must be made up of former soldiers, not high ranking officers.”²⁵⁹⁷

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commissioner will have broad own-motion inquiry powers, including powers to compel access to information during these inquiries.²⁵⁹⁸
- The Act also creates a number of offences designed to facilitate the performance of the Commissioner's functions and powers.²⁵⁹⁹
- The Commissioner's reporting powers are set to include additional accountability measures, such as:
 - the Government will be required to report to the Parliament on the implementation of the Commissioner's recommendations;²⁶⁰⁰ and
 - the Commissioner may provide reports to the Prime Minister and the Minister where it considers that adequate and appropriate action has not been taken in response to its reports.²⁶⁰¹ These follow-up reports must also be laid before each House of Parliament.²⁶⁰²
- It appears as though the Commissioner will maintain a high level of stakeholder engagement.²⁶⁰³
- While it remains to be seen whether the funding allocated to the Commissioner is adequate, an allocation of $30-45 million for the first five years appears substantial when compared to

C. Impacts of the National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide

The impacts of the National Commissioner for Defence and Veteran Suicide are yet to be assessed. However, the first objective of the Commissioner is to conduct an immediate, independent review of historical veteran suicide cases, focusing on the impact of military service and veterans' post service experience.²⁶⁰⁵ The Commissioner will be required to deliver an interim report within 12 months.

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

4.13 The establishment of NHRIs²⁶⁰⁶

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, as legislatively enshrined but lacking transparency around the appointment process.

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁶⁰⁷

Entrench in law

While the Commissioner's role is legislatively enshrined in the Act, along with their roles, functions, powers, accountability and the process for appointment.²⁶⁰⁸ However, contrary to General Observation 1.1, the Commissioner's funding is not enshrined, as this it appears that this is largely determined by ACMA.

Mandated and powers

The Act sets out detailed powers held by the Commissioner, along more general powers designed to facilitate the performance of these specific powers (such as: doing 'anything incidental to or conducive to the performance of any of the above functions').²⁶⁰⁹

Appointment mechanisms

The appointment process for the Commissioner is not transparent. The Act empowers the Minister to appoint the Commissioner and it is unclear what considerations, other than those qualifications and requirements listed in the Act, the Minister may take into account or whether they may act on the recommendation of others (i.e. ACMA).²⁶¹⁰

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)

The Commissioner may receive and investigate complaints.²⁶¹¹ Further, decisions made by the Commissioner may be reviewed by the Administrative Appeals Tribunal.²⁶¹²

4.14 Human rights mandate²⁶¹³

Summary: the Act is substantially compliant, as holding a broad mandate with investigation powers

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁶¹⁴ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁶¹⁵

²⁶⁰⁶ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

²⁶⁰⁷ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁶¹¹ See Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 s 19, s 19C.

²⁶¹² See Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 s 88.

²⁶¹³ Consider also: General Observation 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

²⁶¹⁴ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

²⁶¹⁵ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

Further, the Act provides that the Commissioner 'holds office on the terms and conditions (if any) in relation to matters not covered by this Act that are determined by the Minister.'²⁶¹⁶ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act. As such, in practice, the terms and conditions of the Commissioner's employment will be determined on a discretionary basis by the Minister. This does not provide independence or autonomy from Government as required under the Paris Principles.

Competence and responsibilities:

The Commissioner can exercise their investigative powers without Ministerial recommendation. Further, the Commissioner has broad power to exercise these powers as they see fit and to 'obtain information from such persons and make such inquiries' they see fit.²⁶¹⁷

Powers of investigation and inquiry

The Office of the eSafety Commissioner outlined the following case studies in submissions to the Parliamentary inquiry into the adequacy of existing offences in the Commonwealth Criminal Code and of state and territory criminal laws to capture cyberbullying:

- "A video of a female teenager being filmed having sexual intercourse (pictured from her shoulders up only) was posted on a social media platform. The video had not been removed, despite reports to that platform. The Commissioner assessed the video as serious cyberbullying. Following a complaint to the Commissioner, informal action was taken by the Commissioner to alert the platform of the existence of the video. The material was removed within 30 minutes of the Commissioner's notification to the platform. The Commissioner also provided the female teenage with resources and online counselling support."
- "A 13 year-old male posted anti-Semitic images and highly abusive taunts on a social media platform targeting a fellow student. The parents of the targeted student lodged a complaint with the Commissioner after speaking to the parents of the perpetrator abuser, as they were not satisfied with the outcome of that conversation."

The Commissioner contacted Instagram and the offending material was removed within 24 hours. The Commissioner also contacted the perpetrator 13 year-old student's school about the complaint. The matter was considered by the school and it was decided to place the student on conditional enrolment with any further infractions incurring immediate expulsion. The school also mandated six counselling sessions for that student to reflect on the impact of his poor choices, and to reinforce the school's zero-tolerance policy to cyberbullying."

Functional immunity

The Act expressly provides that the Commissioner has the privileges and immunities of the Crown and is protected from civil proceedings, liability from damages and criminal proceedings for actions undertaken in good faith.²⁶¹⁸ This provides functional immunity, protecting the Commissioner from criminal and civil liability for actions undertaken.²⁶¹⁹

4.15 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, as requiring observance of international rights instruments, but not their further ratification.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁶²⁰ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁶²¹

The Act expressly requires that ‘the Commissioner must, as appropriate have regard to Convention on the Rights of the Child in the performance of functions’ conferred by/under the Act and in relation to Australian Children.²⁶²² This express requirement to consider the Convention on the Rights of the Child promotes Australia implementation of international human rights instruments. Further to this point, the Commissioner is required to give the Minister reports about and advise on online safety for Australia and provide guidelines, statements and recommendations on best practice. The express requirement that the Commissioner account for the Convention on the Rights of the Child in undertaking these functions would have a flow on effect in further promoting the implementation of this particular human rights instrument.

Other than the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Act does not reference international human rights standards and/or instruments. However, given the broad nature of the Commissioner’s power to give the Minister reports about and advise on online safety for Australia and provide guidelines, statements and recommendations on best practice.

4.16 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, as only requiring observance of international norms, rather than direct engagement.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁶²³ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁶²⁴

As noted in section 1.3, the Act expressly requires that ‘the Commissioner must, as appropriate have regard to Convention on the Rights of the Child in the performance of functions’ conferred by/under the Act and in relation to Australian Children.²⁶²⁵

Summary: the Act is partially compliant, as requiring some engagement with human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁶²⁶ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁶²⁷

There is limited public information available on the cooperation between the eSafety Commissioner and other human rights bodies. However, there appears to be some interaction with the various Commissioner roles under the Australian Human Rights Commission. In particular, the Sex Discrimination Commissioner’s role overlaps with the eSafety Women and Women in Tech Space initiatives run by the eSafety Commissioner, while the cyberbullying initiative will likely overlap with the various Children’s Commissioner roles around the country. This is reflected in the interest that the Sex Discrimination Commissioner has taken in advising on the reform priorities for the eSafety Commissioners role as well as the various comments made in inquiries by the Australian Human Rights Commission.²⁶²⁸

4.18 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act is compliant, as holding relevant recommendation powers.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁶²⁹ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁶³⁰ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁶³¹

While the eSafety Commissioner is not explicitly tasked with “submit[ing] to the Government, Parliament and any other competent body, [...] recommendations [...] on any matters concerning the promotion and protection of human rights”, the Commissioner is tasked with:

1. giving the Minister reports and advice about online safety for Australia,
2. coordinating activities of Commonwealth Departments, authorities and agencies relating to online safety for children,
3. formulating, in writing, guidelines or statements recommending best practices for persons/bodies involved in online safety for Australians and to promote these materials, and
4. consulting and cooperating with persons, organisations and governments on online safety for Australians.²⁶³²

Given that the Commissioner is expressly required to ‘have regard to the Convention on the Rights of the Child in the performance of [these] functions’²⁶³³, the above functions must all consistent with the promotion of the rights of children.

The Commissioner does not have a broader role in promoting human rights, excepts to the extent that these overlap with areas of eSafety (for example, areas of sexual discrimination online, etc).

4.19 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁶³⁴

Summary: the Commissioner is partially compliant, as demonstrating pluralist hiring policies.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁶³⁵ This enhances a NHRI’s ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism

Given that staff of the eSafety Commissioner are employees of ACMA, Government recruitment policies and commitments to pluralism are applicable as are the various ACMA specific diversity policies (i.e. the ACMA Workplace Diversity Plan 2014–18 and ACMA Gender Equality Action Plan 2017-2020).²⁶³⁶

There is some risk to pluralism posed by the fact that the Commissioner can be reappointed for multiple terms of up to 5 years and that there is no limitation on the number of reappointments that can be made.

Full-time members

The Act sets out a specific duration for the Commissioner's appointment (the period specified in the instrument of appointment, not exceeding 5 years) and the Commissioner is eligible for reappointment.²⁶³⁷ The Commissioner must serve on a full-time basis and their remuneration is set by the Remuneration Tribunal.²⁶³⁸

The Act provides that the Commissioner holds office “on the terms and conditions (if any) in relation to matters not covered by this Act that are determined by the Minister.”²⁶³⁹ These terms and conditions are not outlined in the Act and therefore the Minister has strong discretion in setting these terms and conditions.

4.20 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is not compliant with this requirement, as it lacks any decision-making body.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁶⁴⁰

There is no decision-making body established under the eSafety Commissioner structure.

4.21 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act is not compliant in this respect.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁶⁴¹ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The Act does not explicitly restrict participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commission. Further, the Minister is entitled to give directions, by legislative instrument, to the Commissioner about the performance of the Commissioner's functions and exercise of their powers.²⁶⁴² While the Act states that such directions ‘must be of a general nature only’, it also provides that the Commissioner must comply with any such direction.²⁶⁴³ As the Minister's role in giving such directions is not restricted to an advisory capacity only, this appears to be contrary to the Paris Principles and General Observations.²⁶⁴⁴ Further, the Minister may give directions to ACMA

As noted in section 1.10 below, the Office of the eSafety Commissioner is staffed by employees of ACMA. Therefore, while the Commissioner position may be independent of government, functionally the broader institution has little independence.

Tenure

²⁶³⁶ See, eg, ACMA, Workplace diversity and inclusion (Webpage) <<https://www.acma.gov.au/workplace-diversity-and-inclusion>>.

²⁶³⁷ See Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 s 51.

²⁶⁴³ See Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 ss 70(2), 70(4).

²⁶⁴⁴ See General Observation 1.9.

The Act provides that the Commissioner shall be appointed for a period of 5 years and are eligible for reappointment.²⁶⁴⁵ While technically consistent with the Paris Principles, this period may be too short. Further, the Act allows for termination of the Commissioner's appointment by the Minister on a range of grounds.²⁶⁴⁶ While a number of grounds maintain a degree of objectivity, the Commissioner's appointment can be terminated "for misbehaviour".²⁶⁴⁷

'Misbehaviour' is not defined under the Act and therefore appears to give the Minister a broad removal power (i.e. could be exercised subjectively; could account for misbehaviour outside not in the course of their role as Commissioner). Further, the Commissioner's appointment may be terminated if they take 14 consecutive days (or 28 days in another 12 month period) absence (other than leave of absence), however the Minister has the power to determine the terms and conditions (including remuneration) on which any leave of absence are to be granted.²⁶⁴⁸

Recruitment

The recruitment of staff for the Commission is undertaken by ACMA, with the exceptions of the Commissioner and directly recruited contract staff (i.e. Consultants).²⁶⁴⁹ The 54 employees who staff the Office of the eSafety Commissioner are employed by ACMA and 'are covered by ACMA entitles, protections and obligations'.²⁶⁵⁰

4.22 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Act appears compliant in this respect, being substantially resourced.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²⁶⁵¹

The Office of the eSafety Commissioner is staffed by ACMA employees (54 employees at 30 June 2019).²⁶⁵² Further, infringement notices can be issued for specific civil penalty provisions under the Act, however the Commissioner is limited in their discretion to authorise people to act as Infringement Officers in that they are restricted to selecting ACMA staff.²⁶⁵³

The budget of the Commissioner and Office of the eSafety Commissioner in 2019-20 was as follows:

- Commissioner: $376,728²⁶⁵⁴
- Office of the eSafety Commissioner: $25,090,000 (closer to $22m/year in budget over forward estimates)²⁶⁵⁵

The Commissioner must, as soon as practicable after the end of each financial year, prepare and give to the Minister, for presentation to the Parliament, a report on the operations of the Commissioner during that year.²⁶⁵⁶

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

- 4.24 There has been no direct public criticism of the eSafety Commissioner, instead, the role has been generally welcomed and praised publicly. Criticism has been levelled at certain legislative amendments under which the Commissioner has been given power, in particular the Criminal Code Amendment (Sharing of Abhorrent Violent Material) Act 2019. However, this criticism appeared to relate more to the content of the legislation rather than the role of the Commissioner (i.e. see here).

3 What are the best features of this role?

- 4.25 The following features of the eSafety Commissioner role are most relevant given the criteria provided by SNAICC:
- The broad powers and functions of the eSafety Commissioner under various pieces of legislation, including educative and regulatory powers and functions, allow the Commissioner to identify areas of concern, direct resources to addressing these areas (through education, public reporting, reporting to the Minister and the issuing of best practice guidelines) and support these campaigns with coercive force over key stakeholders (including the issuing of civil penalties, industry codes/standards and enforceable directives). As outlined below, this mix of powers has been considered successful in addressing a wide variety of eSafety issues.

²⁶⁵⁶ See Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015 s 66.

D. eSafety Commissioner: Impacts

4 Impact of the eSafety Commissioner?

(Any material evidencing the impacts that the particular commissioner has had. This could include things like the adoption and implementation of recommendations, reforms made subsequent to inquiries or investigations, or the successful resolution of complaints or investigations.)

In 2018 the Government conducted an independent review of the legislation under which the eSafety Commissioner is established, the Enhancing Online Safety Act 2015, and Broadcasting Services Act 1992.²⁶⁵⁷ A focal point for the review was whether the Commissioner had sufficient functions and powers to perform their role effectively, whether the governance structure provided by ACMA was fit for purpose and whether legislative change was needed.²⁶⁵⁸ The review accepted submission and relevantly found the following:

- “The current eSafety Commissioner.... has been instrumental in driving change and raising the profile of online safety with industry and the wider Australian and international community. She has been very successful in the role and has built on the success of the inaugural Children’s eSafety Commissioner, Alastair MacGibbon.

However, there are a number of constraints which limit her effectiveness, principal among these being the governance arrangements surrounding her work. As part of possible transition arrangements towards a standalone online safety entity, I have proposed that the eSafety Commissioner and her Office be moved out of the Australian Communications and Media Authority and into the Department of Communications and the Arts, where the Department and the eSafety Commissioner could jointly work on policy, strategy and relationships. This will free the eSafety Commissioner up to work with industry to develop and implement the proposed new arrangements and should enable her to give sharper focus to priority areas of online safety, such as more effective planning, education, research, prevention and behavioural change arrangements.”²⁶⁵⁹

- “Community stakeholders believe the eSafety Commissioner should do more to compel industry to deliver on their responsibilities (e.g. through industry standards and codes of practice).”²⁶⁶⁰
- “Industry and the eSafety Commissioner should take a more proactive approach and invest more in AI and machine learning to prevent illegal or anti-social content rather than relying on the community to report it.”²⁶⁶¹
- “Nevertheless, the eSafety Commissioner and the ACMA and ABA before it, have had considerable success as a safety net in getting illegal content taken down by Australian industry hosts within 24 hours. I am pleased to report that there has been total compliance with all Australian take-down notices issued since the online content scheme was introduced.”²⁶⁶²

Senate Inquiry

In March 2018 the Senate Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs handed down its final report for its inquiry into the ‘Adequacy of existing offences in the Commonwealth Criminal Code and of state and territory criminal laws to capture cyberbullying’. In their submission to the inquiry One of the recommendations made by this inquiry was that the government ‘ensure that the Office of the eSafety Commissioner is adequately resourced to fulfil all its functions, taking into account the volume of complaints it considers.’²⁶⁶³

Media reports:

- “While there has been an increase in reports, the eSafety Commissioner has a 90 per cent success rate for getting images and videos off websites.”²⁶⁶⁴
- The Government plans to introduce a new Online Safety Act to Parliament later this year which will include an Adult Cyber Abuse scheme.²⁶⁶⁵
- “Over 99 per cent of investigations into CSAM items were completed within two business days and notified to the AFP and/or the INHOPE network. Over 90 per cent of all online content complaints received were actioned within two business days. Over 99 per cent of all investigations about online content were completed within 20 business days.”²⁶⁶⁶
- “A national online safety campaign targeting predators who gain access to children through popular apps, media sites and games, has been launched [by Crime Stoppers and the eSafety Commissioner] to combat sexual assault and unwanted internet contact. ... It follows a successful pilot in New South Wales last year [run by Crime Stoppers, NSW Police and the eSafety Commissioner] which contributed towards a 62 per cent increase in complaints about child sexual abuse material to eSafety.”²⁶⁶⁷
- The eSafety Commissioners online safety hub website has received awards for being world-leading in innovation and creativity.²⁶⁶⁸

Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	The Commissioner role is partially compliant, however there are quite a few significant gaps including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • there are no express investigative powers and functions associated with the role. The functions and powers are quite limited to what the Minister responsible for rural health (Minister) requires; • no function to review existing or proposed legislation, law or policy. The role is more tailored to implementing existing government strategy; • the maximum period of the role is unduly short, being a maximum of two years; • there are no express human rights or convention references in the Act; and • the funding of the role and office is not transparent or easy to locate.
Structure Where does the role sit, is it: (a) a stand-alone office; or (b) part of an existing institution (specify which institution) What relationships are there between this role and other Commissioners or institutions?	The Commissioner is part of a stand-alone office. The Commissioner works closely with the Minister and provides regular advice.
Accountability arrangements What is the reporting line for the role? Who sets the budget?	The Commissioner reports directly to the Minister.
Qualification and Experience	The only eligibility requirement under the Act is that the Commissioner has experience in rural health. ²⁶⁶⁹

B. National Rural Health Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs²⁶⁸⁰

Summary: the Act partially complies with the Paris Principles with respect to the establishment of NHRIs.

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁶⁸¹

Entrenched in law

The role of the National Rural Health Commissioner (Commissioner) has been established under Part VA of the Health Insurance Act 1973 (Cth) (Act). With the recent appointment of a new Commissioner, the legislation has very recently been amended by the Health Insurance Amendment (Continuing the Office of the National Rural Health Commissioner) Act 2020 (Cth). These recent amendments to the Act have broadened the scope of the Commissioner's functions.

Mandate and powers

The Commissioner's functions are clearly set out in s 79AD of the Act. It appears that the functions of the Commissioner are linked to the requests by the Minister.

Appointment mechanisms

The Act specifies the general terms of appointment in ss 79AF – 79AN. All other terms and conditions of appointment (not specified in the Act) and the role are determined by the Minister. The only clear criteria of appointment is that the Commissioner has experience in rural health.²⁶⁸² There is no clear appointment process other than that the Minister is to appoint the Commissioner by written instrument.²⁶⁸³

Funding

The funding of the Commissioner is also not clear in the legislation and any information was only gathered from the 2018 Annual Report and explanatory memorandum for the Act.²⁶⁸⁴

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints handling)

In relation to General Observation 2.9, the Commissioner does not have express power to deal with, investigate or settle complaints.

²⁶⁸⁰ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

1.2 Human rights mandate²⁶⁸⁵

Summary: the Act is largely non-compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to human rights mandate.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁶⁸⁶ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁶⁸⁷

The Commissioner does not have any legislative human rights mandate in the Main Act or the Act. The objective of the Commissioner's role does have human rights implications and the indirect consequences of the Commissioner's functions would enhance the right of access to rural health.

In the Statement of Compatibility with Human Rights in the Explanatory Memorandum it is stated that:

The Office, through its key functions will improve the right of access for rural communities to a variety of health services, programs and conditions necessary for the highest attainable standard of health. A key function will involve identifying opportunities to strengthen health workforce training in rural, regional and remote areas, contributing to strengthening Australia's rural training pipeline.²⁶⁸⁸

In relation to General Observation 2.3, there is no protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions made by the Commissioner in the Act. However, given the Commissioner is a statutory officer, it is likely that the personal duty or liability of the Commissioner is governed by specific affecting commonwealth employees, such as the Public Governance, Performance and Accountability Act 2013 (Cth).

In relation to General Observation 2.8, the Commissioner does not have specific monitoring powers or oversight of domestic agencies.

Powers of investigation and inquiry

The Office of the Commissioner does not get involved in individual cases or advocate for individual people or groups.²⁶⁸⁹ The Commissioner does have the ability to inquire into and report on matters, however it can only do so on matters specified by the Rural Health Commissioner.²⁶⁹⁰

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Act is not compliant with the Paris Principles in regards to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁶⁹¹ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁶⁹²

The role of the Commissioner is very much focused on guiding the Minister on strategy and implementation of priorities to improve health outcomes in rural areas. It does not have functions or powers to comply with General Observation 1.3, specifically to review or investigate existing or proposed legislation to ensure compliance with domestic and international human rights obligations.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Act is not compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁶⁹³ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁶⁹⁴

The Act does not specify a mechanism for the Commissioner to engage with or interact with the international human rights system.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: in practice, the Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁶⁹⁵ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁶⁹⁶

The Commissioner is required to regularly engage with relevant stakeholders essential to effectively fulfil its mandate (i.e. stakeholders in the regional, rural and remote health sector) including:²⁶⁹⁷

- Health professionals;
- State and Territory government bodies;
- Industry, non-profit and other community groups; and
- Other health stakeholders.

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Act does not comply with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁶⁹⁸ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁶⁹⁹ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁷⁰⁰

The ability for the Commissioner to comply with General Observation 1.6 is limited as a result of the Commissioner being unable to initiate its own-motion inquiries and reports, and much of its functions are at the behest of the Minister (i.e. providing specific advice or commencing specific inquiries or projects at the request of the Minister).

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁷⁰¹

Summary: the Act and the Commissioner partially comply with the Paris Principles with respect to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁷⁰² This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

The Frequently Asked Questions section of the National Rural Health Commissioner webpage notes that the appointment process of the Commissioner role is "as per the appointment process set out in the Cabinet Handbook issued by the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet."²⁷⁰³

The current Cabinet Handbook requires the Minister to prepare appointment proposals for the Prime Minister's consideration, and should confirm (among others) that:

- the person being proposed is appropriately qualified and has relevant experience; and
- has due regard to gender balance and geographical balance in appointments.²⁷⁰⁴

There are no other diversity requirements specified for the Minister to consider when proposing appointments.

Full time members

In relation to General Observation 2.2, the Commissioner is to be appointed either on a full time or part time basis. The term of appointment is not framed in terms of 'minimum term' but rather there is a maximum term of 2 years (therefore not compliant with the appropriate minimum term of 3 years). However, the Commissioner may be reappointed after this period.²⁷⁰⁵

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Act is sparsely drafted and only partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁷⁰⁶

The appointment process of the Commissioner is unclear in the Act, other than to specify that the Minister is to appoint the Commissioner by written instrument. As noted above, the Frequently

Asked Questions section of the National Rural Health Commissioner webpage, notes that the appointment process of the Commissioner role is “as per the appointment process set out in the Cabinet Handbook issued by the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet.”²⁷⁰⁷ This Cabinet Handbook sets out the requirement for proposing appointments to the Prime Minister which is to be followed by the Minister.²⁷⁰⁸

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Act does not strictly comply with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs.

In order to maintain a NHRI’s structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁷⁰⁹ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The Act specifies that the Commissioner must perform its functions in an independent and impartial manner.²⁷¹⁰ The Commissioner is a statutory officer holder and not a member of parliament or government representative. The functions of the Commissioner is limited to mainly a research and advisory role for the Minister.

Tenure

The termination of appointment provisions in the Act are clearly defined and appropriately confined to actions which adversely impact on the capacity of the Commissioner to fulfil its mandate.²⁷¹¹ Dismissal is not allowed solely based on the discretion of the Minister.

Recruitment

The Act provides that the Commissioner may obtain assistance from APS employees in the Department, by entering into an arrangement with the Secretary of the Department.²⁷¹² The Act does not provide specific recruitment powers to the Commissioner and is therefore otherwise limited by the arrangements it makes with the Secretary of the Department. It is also worth noting that with recent extension of the Office of the Commissioner, the media release and explanatory memorandum notes that the Commissioner will be supported by two Deputy Commissioners to specifically look after allied health, nursing and Indigenous health.²⁷¹³ The appointment mechanisms and criteria of these Deputy Commissioners is yet to be confirmed.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: there is a lack of transparency around the funding of the Commissioner (under the Act and general resources available on the National Rural Health Commissioner’s website). The inability to locate the funding source within the Federal budget and general searches suggests the Commissioner does not comply with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²⁷¹⁴

The funding stream of the Office of the Commissioner is unclear. The most currently available Annual Report notes that the Office of the Commissioner receives funding of $4.4 million over

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Commissioner is required to prepare an annual report for the Minister, for presentation to the Parliament.²⁷¹⁷ The report must specify the activities of the Commissioner during the previous financial year including and any other matters the Minister has directed the Commissioner to include.²⁷¹⁸ The annual reports are publicly available on the Department of Health website which increases the transparency and public accountability of the Commissioner.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

No public criticisms about this role have been found.

3 What are the best features of this role?

There are no best features of this role which should be recommended. As noted above, this role sparingly complies with the Paris Principles and there are significant gaps in the role, function, powers and administration.

C. National Rural Health Commissioner: Impacts

4 Impacts of the National Rural Health Commissioner

- In 2018, the Commissioner brought together senior representatives from two General Practice Colleges to develop an agreed definition of what it means to be a Rural Generalist and to establish a collaborative approach to the development of a framework for the National Pathway. The definition formulated by the group in the Collingrove Agreement provides the sector with common knowledge to describe the scope of practice of a Rural Generalist and the training they require. The Collingrove Agreement has been endorsed by members of the Rural Health Stakeholder Roundtable and has been adopted as part of ongoing discussions in many parts of the rural and remote health sector.²⁷¹⁹
- Also in 2018, the Commissioner together with The National Rural Generalist Taskforce produced an advice for government which included a comprehensive analysis of the current gaps in rural workforce training opportunities and service provision in each jurisdiction and created principles for a recommended Pathway framework.²⁷²⁰ The Minister has accepted this work and has directed the Commissioner to carry out consequential work as well as requested the Department of Health to take carriage of the recommendations for a National Pathway.²⁷²¹

Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	No – the ONDC does not advocate for human rights and is likely not best conceptualised as a national human rights institution. Whilst the ONDC does promote privacy, this is a part of its broader mandate to promote and regulate the sharing, release and use of public sector data.

B. National Data Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs²⁷³⁴

Summary: without an independent statutory framework, this Commissioner does not comply with the requirements.

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁷³⁵

Entrenched in law²⁷³⁶

The ONDC will be formed as an independent statutory authority, however, there is no draft legislation presently available.

The ONDC will be advised by the National Data Advisory Council (NDAC) on ethical data use, community expectations, technical best practice, industry and international developments and issues relating to the broader data environment.²⁷³⁷ The NDAC comprises nine members from the Australian government, business and industry, civil society groups and academia.

Government representatives include the Australian Statistician, the Australian Information and Privacy Commissioner and the Australian Chief Scientist.

Mandate and powers²⁷³⁸

The ONDC will primarily be empowered to promote compliance with the Data Sharing and Release legislation, which aims to create systems to safely share public sector data between trusted users for specified purposes.²⁷³⁹ These powers are broad, and include:

²⁷³⁴ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

²⁷³⁵ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

- Promoting the use and reuse of public sector data;
- Maintaining the integrity of the Data Sharing and Release system;
- Engaging with the community on the use of public sector data;²⁷⁴⁰
- Advising government agencies on how to safely release public sector data, to mitigate the risks of both sharing and releasing data;²⁷⁴¹
- Advising the Minister and relevant entities on the operation of the Data Sharing and Release system, including on legislative proposals;²⁷⁴²
- Maintain a public register of all Data Sharing Agreements, being agreements setting out who is sharing or releasing data, the data in question, and who is receiving the data;²⁷⁴³
- Issuing annual reports on the effectiveness of the Data Sharing and Release system, including the public register of Data Sharing Agreement;²⁷⁴⁴ and
- Providing regulatory oversight of the data sharing system, predominately via accreditation and enforcement. Accreditation is of entities that may either disseminate or receive public data, whilst enforcement is of those entities operating in the data sharing system.²⁷⁴⁵

Appointment mechanisms²⁷⁴⁶

We were unable to find publicly available guidance on the appointment mechanisms for this role. Ms Deborah Anton was appointed as the Interim National Data Commissioner on 9 August 2018.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)²⁷⁴⁷

The ONDC will be empowered to monitor compliance with the Data Sharing and Release legislation, determine breaches and impose penalties.²⁷⁴⁸ The relevant penalties are still being determined via the consultation process, however initial assurances have been provided that penalties will be proportionate and comparable to the penalties available under the Privacy Act 1988 and the My Health Records Act 2012.

The ONDC will also be empowered to hear individual complaints and notifications of breaches of the data sharing laws.²⁷⁴⁹

1.2 Human rights mandate²⁷⁵⁰

Summary: the Commissioner is not compliant in this respect, noting that human rights promotion is not its primary function.

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁷⁵¹ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁷⁵²

The ONDC does not have an explicit human rights mandate, as it focuses upon promoting the dissemination and effective use of public sector data in a way that does not comprise the privacy of individuals.²⁷⁵³ Insofar as the role protects individuals’ privacy it may be said to hold a human rights mandate. However, it appears that the protection of individuals’ privacy is a necessary component of the ONDC’s mandate, rather than its focus.

Of note, the ONDC is required to ensure that accredited entities have the skills and capabilities to uphold privacy standards in sharing, releasing and accessing public sector data.²⁷⁵⁴ The ONDC also commissioned a Privacy Impact Statement, released 28 June 2019, that listed eight recommendations designed to build privacy protections into any draft legislation.²⁷⁵⁵ These primarily dealt with limiting data use to generally low risk activities, limiting certain commercial access and preventing law enforcement or national security related data use. It appears that these principles have been incorporated into the subsequent discussion paper, although until draft legislation is released any specific privacy protection measures are unclear.

Functional immunity²⁷⁵⁶

There is no relevant guidance on whether the NDC or ONDC staff will hold any functional immunity in their roles. There are a number of offences dealing with data and privacy breaches, that the NDC and ONDC may theoretically accidentally be involved in given their substantial involvement in facilitating data exchange.

Competence and responsibilities²⁷⁵⁷

The purpose of the Data Sharing and Release legislation is to promote the using of public sector data to better inform policy development and research.²⁷⁵⁸ This also includes the release of data, ²⁷⁵⁰ Consider also: General Observation 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

which may be used by the private sector.²⁷⁵⁹ Whilst this captures most public sector data, it does not include data sharing for:²⁷⁶⁰

- compliance activities (determining whether a person is compliant with their legal obligations);
- assurance activities (determining eligibility, entitlement or liability for government programs or services); or
- national security or law enforcement purposes, including investigations, monitoring and taking action targeted at individuals and organisations.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Commissioner is not compliant with this requirement.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁷⁶¹ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁷⁶²

The ONDC does not appear to hold any specific mandate to promote the ratification of, or accession to, international human rights instruments.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Commissioner is not compliant with this requirement.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁷⁶³ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁷⁶⁴

The ONDC does not appear to engage with the broader international human rights system.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Commissioner is partially compliant with this requirement, with prospective cooperation with entities operating in the same area.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁷⁶⁵ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁷⁶⁶

The ONDC will work alongside the national privacy regulator, the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner, to ensure that Australia's data sharing and release framework is underpinned by a strong foundation of privacy and security. The ONDC will also work with the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner on a range of key topics including data management, de-identification, data security, data breaches, the general handling of personal information and information management.²⁷⁶⁷

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner is partially compliant with this requirement, with recommendation powers that are limited in scope and lacking effective follow up powers.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁷⁶⁸ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁷⁶⁹ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁷⁷⁰

The ONDC is empowered to advise the Minister and relevant entities on the operation of the Data Sharing and Release system. The ONDC may also provide advice on legislation where that legislation does or may impact upon the Data Sharing and Release system.²⁷⁷¹ These recommendations do not appear to be binding and there are no clear follow up mechanisms.

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁷⁷²

Summary: the Commissioner is not compliant with this requirement.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁷⁷³ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

There is no relevant guidance on the staffing makeup of the ONDC.

Generally, appointments to the Australian Public Service must be on a merits basis, whilst agency heads are permitted to take affirmative measures to restrict job eligibility to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people or people with a disability or certain type of disability.²⁷⁷⁴

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner appears substantially compliant with this requirement, with a decision-making body comprised on individuals from representative backgrounds.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁷⁷⁵

The ONDC will be advised by the NDAC, formed by nine members drawn from the Australian government, business and industry, civil society groups and academia which includes the Australian Statistician, the Australian Information and Privacy Commissioner and the Australian

Chief Scientist.²⁷⁷⁶ The members of the NDAC were appointed by government for an initial two-year term.²⁷⁷⁷

Government members of the NDAC attend in the capacity of the position they hold. Non-government members attend in their individual capacities, being paid sitting fees and costs of meeting attendances.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner does not comply with this requirement, with little transparency or structural independence.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁷⁷⁸ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The members of the NDAC, both government and private sector, were appointed by government for an initial two-year term. It is unclear from the available material whether this practice will continue after these initial appointments, or whether the NDC or the NDAC itself will have greater say over future members of the NDAC. Currently, there is considerable prospect for political considerations to play a part in determining the makeup of the NDAC, given appointments are made by government and absent of any clear, publicly available criteria.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner is partially compliant with this requirement, as, whilst apparently in receipt of significant funding, the allocation and use of this funding is unclear.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²⁷⁷⁹

The 2018–19 Budget provided a total of $65.1 million over 2018–2022 for new data sharing and release arrangements. This funding was distributed between the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet (receiving $20.5 million) and the Treasury (receiving $44.6 million). This funding includes the budget for the ONDC, however the specific amount is allocated to the ONDC is unclear.²⁷⁸⁰

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Commissioner is compliant with this requirement.

The ONDC will be required to release an annual report on the performance of the Data Sharing and Release system and detailing the public registers of entities both sharing and receiving data.²⁷⁸¹

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

An article by Katharine Kemp and David Vaile published in The Conversation on 1 May 2018 criticised the proposed Data Sharing and Release system as not providing adequate privacy protections. Criticisms were levelled at Australia's data security and privacy legislation more broadly, with the authors suggesting that developments in big data processing, combined with lax data protection and privacy laws, render individuals increasingly vulnerable to manipulation. This article characterised the sharing and release practices championed by the ONDC as being tantamount to an irrevocable transfer of personal data to unknown third-parties, who may store, use and pass on this data as they see fit.

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The ONDC holds an effective mandate to regulate significant aspects of the proposed data sharing and release system. This includes providing input and recommendations on legislation, accrediting data sharing entities, educating entities on best practice, monitoring compliance with the system and enforcing breaches. These powers provide an “end-to-end” supervisory mandate for the ONDC.

B. New Zealand Children's Commissioner: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs²⁸⁰⁷

Summary: The office of the New Zealand Children's Commissioner ("Commissioner") is generally compliant with the following requirements under the Paris Principles.

Entrenched in law²⁸⁰⁸

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁸⁰⁹

The Commissioner is established by the Children's Commissioner Act 2003, which is a legislative text. The Crown Entities Act 2004 establishes the Commissioner as an independent Crown entity, which is independent of government.²⁸¹⁰

Mandate and powers²⁸¹¹

The Children's Commissioner Act 2003 is a detailed document, providing a clear mandate to the Commissioner and setting out its role, functions and powers.²⁸¹² The Act does not set out any mechanism for funding, which is determined yearly by the Minister for Social Development. The Children's Commissioner is accountable to the responsible Ministers, which appear to be the Minister for Finance and the Minister for Social Development.

Appointment mechanisms²⁸¹³

Appointments are made by the Governor-General by recommendation from the Minister for Social Development, which may detract from the Commissioner's independence.²⁸¹⁴ The term of office is 5-years or any shorter period stated in a notice of appointment.²⁸¹⁵

1.2 Human rights mandate²⁸¹⁶

Summary: The Commissioner holds a broad mandate, augmented by an effective investigations power coupled with fines for non-compliance. This substantially complies with the relevant requirements.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁸¹⁷ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁸¹⁸

Competence and responsibilities²⁸¹⁹

²⁸⁰⁷ See especially: General Observation 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

²⁸⁰⁸ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁸⁰⁹ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁸¹⁰ Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (NZ) s 6(2).

²⁸¹¹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁸¹² Children's Commissioner Act 2003, ss 3, 11.

²⁸¹³ See GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁸¹⁴ Children's Commissioner Act 2003 (NZ) s 28(1)(b).

²⁸¹⁵ Crown Entities Act 2004 (NZ) s 32(1)(b).

²⁸¹⁶ Consider also: GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

²⁸¹⁷ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

²⁸¹⁸ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.2.

²⁸¹⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.6.

The Commissioner is legislatively mandated with specific functions to both promote and protect human rights. The Commissioner's key functions include raising awareness and understanding of children's interests, rights, and welfare, raising awareness and understanding of the Convention, and to undertake and promote research into any matter that relates to the welfare of children, and to act as an advocate for children's interests, rights, and welfare generally (except before any court or tribunal), and, in that regard, to advance and monitor the application of the Convention by State departments and Crown bodies.²⁸²⁰

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Commissioner can inquire generally into, and report on, any matter, including any enactment or law, or any practice or procedure, that relates to the welfare of children, and one of its key functions is to promote the establishment of accessible and effective complaints mechanisms for children and to monitor the nature and level of complaints.²⁸²¹ In conducting an investigation, the Commissioner must have regard to the question of whether the rights or the welfare and interests of 1 or more children have been prejudiced.²⁸²²

The Commissioner has the power to obtain statements or documents in order to assess situations raising human rights issues, as it has powers to require that a person provides information or documents to the Commissioner if it is reasonably necessary for an investigation, a person does not provide it after being requested to, and it is not reasonably practicable to obtain the information or document from another source, or it is necessary to verify or refute information from another source.²⁸²³ If the person does not comply or knowingly or recklessly provides false or misleading information, they could be liable to a $2,000 fine.²⁸²⁴ The Commissioner can also apply to the court to access court records if it believes on reasonable grounds this is required for an investigation.²⁸²⁵

Oranga Tamariki is the Ministry for Children government department that provides services to approximately 30,000 children and young people each day. Around 6000 of those children and young people are in the care or custody of Oranga Tamariki, and at any one time, approximately 200 young people are placed in Oranga Tamariki residences.²⁸²⁶ Specifically with regard to Oranga Tamariki, the Commissioner has the mandate to review decisions or recommendations made, and policies and practices of government departments in relation to Oranga Tamariki and its governing Act.²⁸²⁷ The Commissioner will investigate any concerns on a case by case basis and can also monitor Oranga Tamariki's investigation and resolution of any complaint.

An example of the Commissioner using its powers in this regard is in relation to the 2018 case of a teenager, Sonny Marks, who died in state care from what appeared to be a suicide attempt in circumstances where the caregiver was unaware of his mental health issues and his risk of suicide.²⁸²⁸ In addition, his mother was not informed by Oranga Tamariki that her son was admitted to hospital and the Ministry waited hours after he died the following day before notifying her of his death.²⁸²⁹ The current Commissioner, Judge Becroft, has publicly expressed that this case would warrant his attention and is awaiting the outcome of the coronial inquest the recommendations under it before making a decision on next steps.²⁸³⁰ The Commissioner's powers extend to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors, and the Commissioner has the competence to freely address public opinion by receiving and inviting representations from members of the public on any matter that relates to the welfare of children and raising public awareness on matters that relate to the welfare of children, the Convention and children's interests, rights, and welfare.²⁸³¹

Functional immunity:²⁸³²

The Children's Commissioner Act 2003 provides protection from criminal and civil liability for acts or omissions undertaken in good faith by the Commissioner or its employees, which is consistent with the Paris Principles. No civil or criminal proceedings may be brought against any Commissioner or against a person who is or has been an employee of a Commissioner for anything done or that was not done when exercising the functions under the Children's Commissioner Act 2003 unless it is shown that the person concerned acted in bad faith.

A Commissioner or any person who is or has been an employee of a Commissioner cannot be called to give evidence in any court, or in any proceedings of a judicial nature, in respect of anything that comes to the knowledge of the person concerned in the exercise of functions or powers under the Children's Commissioner Act 2003.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: The Commissioner is specifically required to promote compliance with international human rights instruments, engages in public reporting and facilitates national working groups and is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁸³³ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁸³⁴

The Commissioner has a clear role to play in the effective implementation of the Convention and the UN Convention against Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment in relation to Oranga Tamariki residences, both of which New Zealand is a party to, which is consistent with the Paris Principles.

A key part of the Commissioner's functions includes raising awareness and understanding of the Convention.²⁸³⁵ If there are issues in proceedings before any court or tribunal that relate to the UN Convention or to the interests, rights, or welfare of children generally, one of the Commissioner's functions is to present reports on such issues to the court or tribunal, at the request of the court or tribunal or counsel in the proceedings.²⁸³⁶ In performing or exercising the Commissioner's functions or powers, the Commissioner must have regard to the Convention.²⁸³⁷

The Commissioner co-ordinates the Children's Convention Monitoring Group ("Group"), which monitors the New Zealand Government's implementation of the UN Convention, its Optional Protocols and the Government's response to recommendations from the United Nations

Committee on the Rights of the Child.²⁸³⁸ Its members include representatives from the Human Rights Commission, UNICEF New Zealand, Action for Children and Youth Aotearoa and Save the Children New Zealand.²⁸³⁹ The Group meets regularly to monitor and review the progress made on implementing the UN Convention in New Zealand.²⁸⁴⁰ The Group also meets twice a year with the UN Convention Deputy Chief Executives Group who are the permanent coordinating mechanism for the Convention to discuss how the Government is advancing the rights of children in line with the Convention.²⁸⁴¹

The Group has a public reporting function through its publication of the “Getting it Right” series of reports, which focus on legal and policy developments for children and young people in New Zealand and how those developments align with the UN Convention, and thereby promotes and encourages the harmonisation of national legislation, regulations and practices with the Convention in accordance with the Paris Principles.²⁸⁴² The reports highlight progress related to children’s rights and identify where New Zealand can improve its compliance with the Convention’s requirements.²⁸⁴³ The Commissioner is also a designated “National Preventive Mechanism” responsible for monitoring New Zealand’s compliance with the United Nations Convention against Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment in relation to Oranga Tamariki residences.²⁸⁴⁴

To this end, the Commissioner issues annual “State of Care” reports, which is an annual summary from our independent monitoring of the policies, practices and services of Oranga Tamariki. It includes feedback from children and young people about their experiences in the system.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: The Commissioner has some reporting obligations to relevant international entities and is partially compliant with the relevant requirements.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁸⁴⁵ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁸⁴⁶

The Commissioner is involved in monitoring compliance with the UN Convention and engaging with the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (“UN Committee”), which is responsible for ensuring compliance with the UN Convention, which is consistent with the Paris Principles.

The Commissioner has the opportunity to report to the UN Committee from time to time and attend UN Committee sessions. For example, during the Fifth Periodic Report in 2016, the Commissioner attended the 73rd session of the UN Committee and reported on outcomes for

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: The Commissioner engages in broad-based consultation with sub-national groups and is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁸⁵⁰ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁸⁵¹

The Commissioner regularly engages with relevant stakeholders and maintains working relationships with other institutions in New Zealand and the region that have been established for the promotion and protection of human rights, which is consistent with the Paris Principles.²⁸⁵² For example:

- the Commissioner works closely with a diverse range of community organisations, groups and individuals involved in aspects of improving the well-being of children;²⁸⁵³
- the Commissioner has a statutory responsibility to monitor and assess the policies and practices provided under the Oranga Tamariki Act 1989 by Oranga Tamariki and other organisations contracted by Oranga Tamariki to provide care services for children, young people and their families;²⁸⁵⁴
- The Commissioner can make referrals of matters to other statutory officers, including:
 - the Chief Commissioner under the Human Rights Act 1993;
 - the chief executive of the department responsible for the administration of the Oranga Tamariki Act 1989;
 - the Commissioner of Police;
 - the Health and Disability Commissioner;
 - the Chief Ombudsman under the Ombudsmen Act 1975;
 - the Independent Police Conduct Authority; and
 - the Privacy Commissioner;²⁸⁵⁵ and
- the Commissioner attends biannual members meetings of the Australia and New Zealand Children's Commissioners and Guardians (ANZCCG), which aims to promote and protect the safety, wellbeing and rights of children and young people in Australia and New Zealand.²⁸⁵⁶

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: The Commissioner is substantially compliant with the relevant requirements, with broad recommendation powers and follow up provisions.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁸⁵⁷ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁸⁵⁸ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁸⁵⁹

The Commissioner issues a number of annual, special and thematic reports to highlight key concerns about the rights and welfare of children in New Zealand and that include recommendations to, and monitoring of respect for, human rights by public authorities, which is consistent with the Paris Principles.

In addition to the “Getting it Right” and “State of Care” report series discussed above, some other reporting that includes actionable recommendations includes:

- The Waitangi Tribunal Submission issued on 30 July 2020, which was an urgent inquiry into the significant and consistent disparity between the number of Māori and non-Māori children being taken into state care by Oranga Tamariki and its predecessors, the extent to which the legislative, policy and practice changes introduced since 2017, and currently being implemented, change this disparity for the better, and what (if any) additional changes to Crown legislation, policy or practice might be required in order to secure outcomes consistent with the Waitangi Treaty and its principles;²⁸⁶⁰ and
- The “Education Matters to Me” series of reports published in 2018, which draws out key insights from children’s experiences to form a starting point for the Statement of National Education Learning Priorities.²⁸⁶¹

The Commissioner also undertakes reporting on the follow up action taken on recommendations contained in these reports, including detailed information on the measures taken or not taken by public authorities in implementing specific recommendations or decisions that has been published by the Commissioner.

For example, the “Getting It Right: Are We Listening?” report issued on 24 June 2019, which reports on how well the government is implementing the UN Convention in respect of children’s participation rights.²⁸⁶² It includes a comment on the New Zealand government’s response to the recommendation that consultation with children and young people be embedded as part of the Government’s standard process for developing the Statement of National Education and Learning Priorities (NELP).²⁸⁶³

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁸⁶⁴

Summary: The Commissioner is compliant with the relevant requirements, whilst being a single-body NHRI, as in appointing the Commissioner diverse voices must be considered.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁸⁶⁵ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism²⁸⁶⁶

The Commissioner's office demonstrates pluralism through its broader representation of national society, which is consistent with the Paris Principles. The Commissioner seeks to achieve pluralism through its appointment procedures, as in appointing a candidate, the Minister for Social Development must consider consulting any organisations or persons that, in the opinion of the Minister, have a special interest in the functions of the Commissioner, including organisations representing children and children themselves.²⁸⁶⁷

The Commissioner also achieves pluralism through procedures enabling effective cooperation with diverse societal groups. It works with a diverse range of organisations, groups and individuals who have responsibilities and powers relating to children, as well as children and youth themselves, to ensure children have access to services and support. The Commissioner works across the education, advocacy, youth, health and social services sectors, with government, non-government and community organisations.²⁸⁶⁸

Full-time members²⁸⁶⁹

The Commissioner role is a full time, remunerated position that is appointed for a minimum term of 5 years,²⁸⁷⁰ which promotes the independence of the Commissioner and ensures the continuity of its programs and services. It is not clear whether the terms and conditions of the Commissioner's service can be modified to their detriment during their period of appointment, which would be a departure from the Paris Principles.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The appointment process is not sufficiently transparent and therefore partially compliant with the relevant requirements.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁸⁷¹

The process for selection and appointment of the Commissioner is set out in the Children's Commissioner Act 2003. The appointment process is participatory and merits-based, but not transparent, which is a departure from the Paris Principles.

The Minister for Social Development will recommend the appointment of a Commissioner under section 28(1)(b) of the Crown Entities Act 2004. The Minister for Social Development must notify the vacancy or prospective vacancy in a way that is sufficient to enable suitably qualified individuals to apply for appointment and consider consulting any organisations or persons that, in the opinion of the Minister, have a special interest in the functions of the Commissioner, including organisations representing children and children themselves.²⁸⁷²

However, there do not appear to be pre-determined, objective and publicly available criteria for assessment of applications, and a clear intention that members serve in their own individual capacity rather than on behalf of the organization they represent, which is a departure from the Paris Principles.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: While the Commissioner's appointment process appears to be largely independent of government, the removal of a Commissioner is still heavily reliant on government discretion, which compromises the security of tenure of the Commissioner, as well as the independence of, and public confidence in, the Commissioner. The Commissioner is therefore partially compliant.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁸⁷³ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The Act does not explicitly restrict the participation of government representatives or members of parliament in the decision-making of the Commissioner, which is a departure from the Paris Principles.²⁸⁷⁴ However, Members of Parliament are disqualified from taking up the role of Commissioner.²⁸⁷⁵ In addition, the responsible Minister for the Commissioner, may not direct the Commissioner to have regard to, or to give effect to, a government policy.²⁸⁷⁶

Tenure²⁸⁷⁷

The Commissioner does not appear to have an independent and objective dismissal process, which is a departure from the requirements of the Paris Principles.

The Governor-General may, at any time for just cause, follow the advice of the Minister for Social Development which is given after consultation with the Attorney-General to remove the Commissioner from office. The removal must be made by written notice to the Commissioner. The notice must state the date on which the removal takes effect which must not be earlier than the date on which the notice is received and state the reasons for the removal. The Minister for Social Development must notify the removal in the Gazette as soon as practicable after the notice is given.²⁸⁷⁸

While there is a notice requirement, the grounds for dismissal are not clearly defined and are not confined to only those actions which impact adversely on the capacity of the Commissioner to fulfil their functions and mandate. The decision is not made by an independent body with appropriate jurisdiction, but rather, is allowed based solely on the discretion of the appointing authorities.

The Commissioner has stated its commitment to providing equal opportunities and is a member of the Equal Employment Opportunities Trust.²⁸⁸⁰ While there does not appear to be a clear open and transparent selection process for the Commissioner's staff, the selection process is merit-based and when a vacancy exists, the Commissioner focuses on finding the best skilled candidate for the position. As at 30 June 2019, the Commissioner had 30 employees, not including the Commissioner himself. 31% were Maori, 7% were Pacific Islander and 62% were European in ethnicity,²⁸⁸¹ which reflects some degree of pluralism enhancing the independence and effectiveness of, and public confidence in, the Commissioner.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: The Commissioner is partially compliant with this requirement, as being in receipt of limited but increasing funding.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.²⁸⁸²

The Commissioner has the power to allocate funding according to its priorities, which is in accordance with the Paris Principles. The funding it receives has increased over time to reflect the gradual and progressive realisation of the improvement of the Commissioner's operations and the fulfilment of its mandate. The 2019/20 annual budget was $3,157,000. The 2020/21 annual budget is $4,157,000, representing an increase of $1 million that reflects cost pressures and the Commissioner's need for additional capacity.²⁸⁸³ The Commissioner has also been allocated a total of $250,000 on a capital injection. The Commissioner considers that there are no conditions attached to the government funding it receives.²⁸⁸⁴ However, funding is at the discretion of the Minister for Social Development, which may be seen to be a departure from the Paris Principles.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Act largely complies with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

The Commissioner is obliged to publish a Statement of Intent, Statement of Performance Expectations and Annual Report each year, and provide these to the Minister for Social Development to present in the House of Representatives.²⁸⁸⁵ This is a departure from the Paris Principles, which ideally require NHRI's to have an explicit power to table reports directly in the legislature rather than through the executive and, in so doing, to promote action on them.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

A 2017 article by the then deputy opposition leader Jacinda Ardern stated that more funding and more independence is required for the Commissioner to function more effectively in the best interests of children in New Zealand in state care.²⁸⁸⁶ She was particularly critical of the fact that while state run residences need better oversight due to issues with bullying and violence, the Commissioner was only able to visit every 18 months, which was not seen to be sufficient. She stated that it was the policy of the Labour party in New Zealand to boost funding to the Commissioner because the Commissioner had not been sufficiently resourced to perform its role and ensure the safety of children in state care, which “puts them in a very tough situation”.

There have also been growing calls to establish a Māori Children's Commissioner, most recently in the New Zealand media in 2019, as Māori children remain over-represented in state care, state abuse and youth detention.²⁸⁸⁷ The current Commissioner, Judge Andrew Becroft, supports the idea and said there were gaps in the current structure of the commission, as it does not embed a Māori voice, a Māori worldview or a Māori approach in legislation. However, other commentators have noted that investment should be directed at the families themselves, and that the issues lie with the Oranga Tamariki department and their approach to overseeing state care.

The Commissioner appointed a Chief Māori Advisor in 2019, responsible for supporting the Commissioner to advocate for improved outcomes for Māori children, as well as undertaking a project development role and scoping exercise for an Assistant Māori Children's Commissioner.²⁸⁸⁸ The Commissioner has also stated his commitment to appointing an Assistant Māori Commissioner for Children, as:

- it is crucial that the leadership structure of the Office contains and presents a clear Māori voice;
- Māori children are disproportionately overrepresented in care and protection, and so are in greater need of advocacy and support for their welfare, rights and interests; and
- it ensures the Commissioner's staff includes a leader who can support the Commissioner and his Māori staff in encouraging Oranga Tamariki to discharge their duty to Māori children, and to ensure a specific additional culturally appropriate focus on Māori children.²⁸⁸⁹

3 What are the best features of this role?

- Its structure as an independent Crown entity;
- The Commissioner's security of tenure (being a 5 year tenure);
- The wide mandate of the Commissioner and its extensive reporting and investigative powers;
- The amount of funding available to the Commissioner; and
- The potential introduction of the Assistant Māori Children's Commissioner and the Commissioner's responsiveness to criticism and community concern.

4 Impacts of the New Zealand Children's Commissioner

In addition to the Commissioner's role in supporting the appointment of an Assistant Māori Children's Commissioner as discussed above, the following other examples are of note.

4.1 State of Care 2017 Report and expanded mandate

One example of a direct impact of the Commissioner's recommendations leading to tangible change is as a result of the State of Care report issued by the Commissioner in May 2017, which focuses exclusively on the state of New Zealand's youth justice and care and protection residences, because the centres house the country's "most vulnerable children and young people".²⁸⁹⁰ In this report, the Commissioner made a number of recommendations, including the following:

- The NZ Ministry for Children (Oranga Tamariki) should articulate a clear vision for the purpose of both youth justice and care and protection residences, supported by a national strategy for their operation that is consistently implemented across all residences;
- Oranga Tamariki should develop and implement a clear national strategy for meeting the needs of Māori children, and ensures that all residences have easy access to cultural advice and support;
- The Government should commit to increased independent monitoring of Oranga Tamariki residences, particularly during this period of change; and
- Oranga Tamariki creates an external, independent Advisory/Reference Group to provide advice on best practice in residences.²⁸⁹¹

In respect of the third recommendation, the Commissioner noted that conditions within a residence can change quickly, and that residences should be independently monitored more frequently, being at least once every six months, with the flexibility to monitor more frequently if necessary, but that increased funding will be required to do this and that current funding of the Commissioner does not allow monitoring that is sufficiently regular or detailed.²⁸⁹²

In response, on 2 July 2020, the Commissioner was given additional responsibility by the Minister of Justice which extended its role as the independent monitor of the conditions and treatment of children and young people in secure detention centres.²⁸⁹³ The Commissioner now has sole designation over care and protection and youth justice facilities and has designation over community-based remand care homes and youth forensic units, and child and adolescent mental health units.

The current Commissioner Andrew Beecroft commented that "the extended responsibility will mean the Commission's specialist youth focused monitoring group can visit virtually all places of child detention and keep an overview of conditions", demonstrating the tangible impact and improved outcomes for youth in detention as a result of the Commissioner's reporting and recommendations on the issues in the State of Care report.²⁸⁹⁴ This corresponds with the increased funding provided to the Commissioner for the 2020-21 financial year, as discussed above.

4.2 2019 Annual Report – Impacts

Two other examples raised in the Annual Report for 2019 include the following:

- In 2012, the Commissioner published its first Solutions to Child Poverty in New Zealand report. As a result of the Commissioner's ongoing fight to reduce child poverty, New Zealand's first Child Poverty Reduction Act was introduced in 2018, based on the suggested draft Bill in the Commissioner's report.
- The Commissioner also successfully advocated for a ban on smoking in cars carrying children, which led to the government changing the relevant legislation.²⁸⁹⁵

B. Children's Commissioner for England: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs²⁹²¹

Summary: the Children's Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles on the establishment of NHRIs, except in relation to the appointment mechanism.

Entrenched in law²⁹²²

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.²⁹²³ The Children's Commissioner is entrenched in law as it was established under and is governed by the Children Act 2004 (UK) (Act).²⁹²⁴

Mandate and powers²⁹²⁵

The Act provides the Children's Commissioner with a clear mandate (see below).²⁹²⁶ This mandate is broad, allowing the Children Commissioner considerable autonomy. For example, the Act states that the Children's Commissioner "may do anything which appears to him to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of, or in connection with, the exercise of his functions".²⁹²⁷

Appointment mechanism²⁹²⁸

The appointment process is only partly transparent. The Act merely provides that:

- (i) The Children's Commission is appointed by the Secretary of State;²⁹²⁹ and
- (ii) The Secretary of State must take reasonable steps to involve children in the appointment.²⁹³⁰

For a further discussion of the appointment mechanism, see part 1.8 below.

Term of office²⁹³¹

The Act provides that the maximum term is six years.²⁹³²

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)²⁹³³

The Children's Commissioner does not have the power to receive, consider or resolve individual complaints alleging violations of human rights.²⁹³⁴ In the explanatory notes to the Act, the stated rationale for this is that it will "allow him to concentrate on the broader issues that affect children".²⁹³⁵

However:

²⁹²¹ See GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1, 2.9, 2.7.

²⁹²² See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

²⁹³⁵ Explanatory Notes to the Children Act 2004 (UK) s 2, [30].

- (iii) the Children's Commissioner may provide advice and assistance to any child who lives away from home or receives social care;²⁹³⁶ and
- (iv) when the Children's Commissioner considers that the case of individual child in England raises issues of public policy relevant to other children, he or she may hold an inquiry into that case for the purpose of investigating and making recommendations about those issues.²⁹³⁷

1.2 Human rights mandate²⁹³⁸

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in respect of the Commissioner's human rights mandate.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.²⁹³⁹ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).²⁹⁴⁰

Nature and breadth of mandate²⁹⁴¹

The Children's Commissioner's has a clear and broad mandate to promote and protect human rights.

- (v) The mandate extends to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors. Specifically, the Children's Commissioner has the power to:
 - (a) advise persons exercising functions or engaged in activities affecting children on how to act compatibly with the rights of children;
 - (b) encourage such persons to take account of the views and interests of children;
 - (c) advise the Secretary of State on the rights, views and interests of children;
 - (d) consider the potential effect on the rights of children of government policy proposals and government proposals for legislation;
 - (e) bring any matter to the attention of either House of Parliament; and
 - (f) monitor the implementation in England of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.²⁹⁴²
- (vi) The mandate allows the Children's Commission to address public opinion through the publishing of reports.²⁹⁴³
- (vii) The Act states that the Children's Commissioner "may do anything which appears to him to be necessary or expedient for the purpose of, or in connection with, the exercise of his functions".²⁹⁴⁴

Powers of investigation and inquiry²⁹⁴⁵

The Children's Commissioner has the power to:

- (viii) at any reasonable time enter any premises other than a private dwelling for the purpose of interviewing a child or for the purpose of observing the standard of care provided to children accommodated or otherwise cared for there or for the purpose of interviewing any person present on the premises who works there.²⁹⁴⁶
- (ix) Reasonably request information relating to the Commissioner's function from any person exercising functions of a public nature.²⁹⁴⁷

There has not been any specific consideration of when a request for information, or entry onto premises, is "reasonable". The Explanatory Note makes clear that it excludes, at minimum, a requirement to comply with a request if that request is inconsistent with other legislation. For example, if a public entity holds confidential information that is not able to be legally disclosed, it would not be reasonable for the Children's Commissioner to request access to such information.²⁹⁴⁸

Many of the reports published by the Children's Commissioner rely largely on publicly available data. However, the Children's Commissioner regularly supplements this data through the exercise of its powers of investigation and inquiry. For example, in putting together a report on children in custody in May 2019:

- (x) The Children's Commissioner used data published by the Ministry of Justice, Department of Education, NHS and Local Authorities to conclude that at least 1,465 children in England were officially securely detained in March 2018.
- (xi) However, the Children's Commissioner also undertook its own investigations to supplement this number. The Children's Commissioner requested information from English courts to find out how many other children were informally or insecurely detained in 2018 and discovered that at least a further 211 children met this description.²⁹⁴⁹

Duty to consult

Above and beyond the Paris Principles, the Children's Commissioner must take reasonable steps to involve children in the discharge of their primary function.²⁹⁵⁰ In particular, the Children's Commissioner must:

- (xii) Take reasonable steps to ensure that children are aware of the Commissioner's primary function and how to communicate with the Commissioner; and
- (xiii) Consult children and organisations working with children on the matters the Commissioner proposes to consider or investigate in the discharge of the primary function.²⁹⁵¹

The Explanatory Notes to the Act explain that, "It is for the Commissioner to decide how best to make children aware...and to put in place arrangements that allow children to contact the Commissioner and comment on his or her proposed work programme".²⁹⁵²

In practice, to ensure this duty is met, the Children's Commissioner:

- (xiv) Has formed a children and young people's advisory group called "Amplify" who assists in preparing the annual Business Plan (see part 1.6 Below);

- (xvi) Funds research;
- (xvii) Raises the positive profile of children and young people by, for example, obtaining the participation of over 40,000 children and young people in the annual Children's Commissioner's Takeover Day; and
- (xviii) Directly speaks to key vulnerable groups identified by the UN Committee.²⁹⁵³

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles in regards to encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.²⁹⁵⁴ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.²⁹⁵⁵

The Children's Commissioner must have regard to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (UN Convention) in considering what constitutes the rights and interests of children in fulfilling its mandate.²⁹⁵⁶ This means the work done by the Children's Commissioner is necessarily linked to the implementation and promotion of the UN Convention.

Furthermore, and as discussed above, the Children's Commissioner has the following powers as recommended under the Paris Principles:

- (xix) To monitor the implementation in England of the UN Convention.²⁹⁵⁷
- (xx) To encourage the effective implementation of the UN Convention by:
 - (a) advising persons exercising functions or engaged in activities affecting children on how to act compatibly with the rights of children; and
 - (b) advising the Secretary of State on the rights, views and interests of children.²⁹⁵⁸
- (xxi) To conduct an assessment of the potential effect on the rights of children of government policy proposals and government proposals for legislation, to publish reports, and to bring any matter to the attention of either House of Parliament.²⁹⁵⁹

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: the Children's Commissioner largely complies with the Paris Principles with respect to interaction with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.²⁹⁶⁰ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.²⁹⁶¹

²⁹⁶⁰ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.4.

²⁹⁶¹ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.4.

As stated above, the Children's Commissioner must have regard to the UN Convention in exercising its functions.²⁹⁶²

The Children's Commissioner also actively engages with the Committee on the Rights of the Child.

- (xxii) The Children's Commissioner engages in advocacy work, including issuing a joint report to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, calling for information of the UN Convention into domestic legislation.
- (xxiii) Every five years, the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child reviews the UK's progress in terms of compliance every five years. The Children's Commissioner, again in partnership with the Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, keeps track of the UK's progress and publishes mid-term reviews in the middle of each review cycle.²⁹⁶³

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is compliant with the Paris Principles on the cooperation with other human rights bodies.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.²⁹⁶⁴ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.²⁹⁶⁵

The Children's Commissioner works closely with the Children's Commissioners for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland (together, the Commissioners).

- (xxiv) As indicated above, the Commissioners work together in monitoring and reporting to the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child on compliance with the UN Convention.²⁹⁶⁶
- (xxv) The Commissioners engage in collective advocacy work. For example, in 2014, they united to make a call for a national debate on fatherhood.²⁹⁶⁷

However, the relationship between the Commissioners is not defined by statute or otherwise formalised. It is a working relationship open to negotiation year-on-year.

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles on recommendations by NHRIs.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.²⁹⁶⁸ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.²⁹⁶⁹ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.²⁹⁷⁰

In addition to making ad hoc recommendations and reports, the Act obliges the Children's Commissioner to publish annual Business Plans at the start of each financial year that highlight key national human rights concerns and provide recommendations.²⁹⁷¹ For example:

- (xxvi) The 2020/21 Business Plan identifies that children in lower-socio economic areas of England feel themselves to be vulnerable to public disorder, ranging from knife attacks to speeding cars, and that children in these areas do not trust the police to keep them safe. The Children's Commissioner recommends that action needs to be taken to build trust between police and this generation of children in lower-socio economic areas.²⁹⁷²

The Children's Commissioner does more than merely publicise these concerns and recommendations. The Business Plans set forward fully elucidated steps as to how the Children's Commissioner will engage and follow up with public authorities to promote and advocate for the implementation of its recommendations. For example:

- (xxvii) In relation to the issue of children feeling vulnerable to public disorder, the Business Plan states that the Children's Commissioner will:
- (a) continue campaigning for additional police officers to be linked into schools in an effort to rebuild trust between the police and this generation of children; and
 - (b) work with the National Police Chiefs Council to ensure that its new child-centred policing strategy addresses the concerns of children as raised by research conducted by the Office of the Children's Commissioner.²⁹⁷³

Separate to the requirement of the Paris Principles, the Children's Commissioner is required to take reasonable steps to consult children before publishing a Business Plan.²⁹⁷⁴

The Act further obliges the Children's Commissioner to publish Annual Reports at the end of each financial year.²⁹⁷⁵ In these Annual Reports, the Children's Commissioner must report on the way and extent to which they discharged their functions and what they found in the course of exercising their functions during the year.²⁹⁷⁶ The Annual Reports must be laid before Parliament and then must be published.²⁹⁷⁷

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI²⁹⁷⁸

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to ensuring pluralism of the NHRI.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.²⁹⁷⁹ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

²⁹⁷⁹ GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.7.

Pluralism²⁹⁸⁰

Given that the Children's Commissioner is a single-person decision-making body, pluralism within this body is difficult. However, the Act obliges the Children's Commissioner to appoint an advisory board to provide advice and assistance relating to the discharge of the Children's Commissioner's functions.²⁹⁸¹ Pluralism is achieved through the appointment of this body. The Act states that the advisory board must consist of persons who (taken together) represent a broad range of interests which are relevant to the Children's Commissioner's functions.²⁹⁸²

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is partially compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to the selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.²⁹⁸³

Children's Commissioner

The Children's Commissioner is the relevant decision-making body. The appointment process for the Commissioner is clear and transparent in practice, but not in law.

The Act states, with no further detail given, that:

- (xxviii) The Children's Commission is appointed by the Secretary of State;²⁹⁸⁴ and
- (xxix) The Secretary of State must take reasonable steps to involve children in the appointment.²⁹⁸⁵

In practice, the last Commissioner was appointed as follows:

- (xxx) The Secretary wrote to the Education Committee within the House of Commons that Anne Longfield was the Government's preferred candidate;
- (xxxi) The Secretary's letter to the Education Committee stated that the recruitment process involved two rounds of interviews and meetings between short-listed candidates and a panel of children and young people whose views were taken into account;
- (xxxii) The Secretary's letter attached the job description, selection criteria, details of how the post was advertised, the selection panel, the process for sifting applications, and the candidate's CV;
- (xxxiii) The Secretary invited the Committee to hold a pre-appointment hearing with the candidate; and
- (xxxiv) The Committee held a hearing and, prior to the hearing, invited members of the public to suggest priorities for the incoming Children's Commissioner.²⁹⁸⁶

Advisory Council

As stated above, the Act obliges the Children's Commissioner to appoint an advisory board to provide advice and assistance relating to the discharge of the Children's Commissioner's functions.²⁹⁸⁷ The appointment process for the advisory council is largely transparent in that the Act states that:

(xxxv) The advisory board must consist of persons who (taken together) represent a broad range of interests which are relevant to the Children's Commissioner's functions;²⁹⁸⁸ and

(xxxvi) The Children's Commissioner must from time to time publish a report on the procedure followed and the criteria used when making appointments to the advisory board.²⁹⁸⁹

The process could be made more transparent by enshrining the appointment procedure and criteria in the Act. This would overcome any potential concerns about the adequacy of the Children's Commissioner's reports as to the appointment process.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles with respect to political representatives on NHRIs and independence from the executive.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.²⁹⁹⁰ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

Independence

The independence of the Commissioner from the executive and legislature is enshrined in law:

(xxxvii) The Act states that the Children's Commissioner is "not to be regarded as the servant or agent of the Crown or as enjoying any status, immunity or privilege of the Crown".²⁹⁹¹

(xxxviii) Furthermore, the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 expressly prohibits a person who is the Children's Commissioner or a member of staff of the Children's Commissioner from being a member of parliament.²⁹⁹²

A framework agreement also exists between the Children's Commissioner and the UK Department of Education that is purposed to protect the Children's Commissioner's independence.²⁹⁹³ This agreement provides that:

(xxxix) It is for the Children's Commissioner to determine what activities to undertake in carrying out his or her primary function.²⁹⁹⁴

The Children's Commissioner has "freedom to determine their own priorities, and activities, and should be subject to as few constraints as possible in deciding how to carry out their business within their statutory remit".²⁹⁹⁵

Tenure²⁹⁹⁶

The grounds for dismissal of the Children's Commissioner are limited in that the Secretary may only remove the Children's Commissioner from office if satisfied that the Commissioner has become unfit or unable to properly discharge his or her functions or has behaved in a way that is not compatible with his or her continuing in office.²⁹⁹⁷

However, there may be some room for improvement in relation to tenure. The General Observations to the Paris Principles state that the dismissal process must be clearly defined, independent and objective. It may be argued that the above grounds for dismissal are too broad and open to subjective opinion. The statutory framework could be perhaps be improved by enumerating a number of objective tests or criteria that go towards a conclusion that the Commissioner is unfit or unable to discharge their functions.

Recruitment²⁹⁹⁸

The Children's Commissioner is entitled to appoint any staff considered necessary to assist in carrying out their functions.²⁹⁹⁹ The Children's Commissioner has the power to determine the terms and conditions of such employment, promoting the independence of the Office of the Children's Commissioner.³⁰⁰⁰

In practice, the recruitment process appears to be open, transparent and merit-based. All staff roles are advertised on the Children's Commissioner website. The advertisements clearly set out the required skills and experience for the role.³⁰⁰¹

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles on adequate funding of NHRIs.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.³⁰⁰²

Adequacy of funding

In accordance with the Paris Principles, the Children's Commissioner is primarily funded by the State and funding is allocated as a separate budget line item applicable only to the Children's Commissioner. To date, the funding received has always been adequate.

The Act states that the Children's Commissioner is to be funded by payments made by the Secretary of State of "such amounts, at such times and on such conditions (if any) as the Secretary considers appropriate".³⁰⁰³ The Framework Agreement with the Department of Education provides a framework for the funding process:

- (xi) The budget is voted in the Department's supply estimate as a separate line item and is subject to Parliamentary control; and
- (xli) By 31 March each year, the Department then sends the Commissioner a formal statement of the annual budgetary provision allocated.³⁰⁰⁴

The Framework Agreement further allows the Children's Commissioner to receive some funding from external sources without needing to seek prior approval, provided that such funding complies with various (anti-corruption) regulations and is disclosed to the Department.³⁰⁰⁵

In practice, this process provides adequate funding. There has been no suggestion either by the Children's Commissioner or commentators that the role is underfunded.

In the 2019-20 financial year, the budget was £2.764m.³⁰⁰⁶

Allocation of funding

The Children's Commissioner has near complete autonomy to allocate its budget. The Framework Agreement requires the Children's Commissioner to manage its budget responsibly and in compliance with good financial practice and to notify the Department of Education promptly if over-spending is anticipated.³⁰⁰⁷ Beyond that, the Act gives the Children's Commissioner full autonomy to allocate its budget in the exercise of its statutory function as it sees fit.³⁰⁰⁸

Financial accountability

The Children's Commissioner is obliged to comply with the financial accountability requirements applicable to other independent agencies.

The Act states that the Children's Commissioner must:

- (xlii) Keep proper accounting records;
- (xliii) Prepare a statement of accounts for each financial year; and
- (xliv) Send a copy of each such statement to the Secretary and the Comptroller and Auditor General as soon as possible after the end of each financial year.³⁰⁰⁹

The Framework Agreement between the Children's Commissioner and the Department of Education further requires that the Children's Commissioner to:

- (xlv) Sign off the Annual Report and Accounts;
- (xlvi) Ensure proper records are kept;
- (xlvii) Ensure the Annual Report and Accounts are properly prepared and presented;
- (xlviii) Provide timely forecasts and monitoring information on performance and finance to the Department of Education; and
- (xlix) Promptly notify the Department of Education if over or under spends are likely.³⁰¹⁰

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: the Children's Commissioner is fully compliant with the Paris Principles on annual reports of NHRIs.

As discussed in part 1.6 above, the Act obliges the Children's Commissioner to publish:

- (i) At the start of each financial year, a Business Plan that:
 - (a) highlights key human rights developments, provides a means of public scrutiny, and offers recommendations for change; and
 - (b) provides an account of the activities to be undertaken by the Children's Commissioner that year to further its mandate;³⁰¹¹ and
- (ii) At the end of each financial year, an Annual Report that reports on the Children's Commissioner's progress that year in relation to the Business Plan.³⁰¹²

The Act further obliges the Children's Commissioner to table these reports directly with the legislature.³⁰¹³

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

Many of the criticisms made about the Children's Commissioner were addressed in the reforms made to the Children Act 2004 (UK) by the Children and Families Act 2014 (UK). These reforms involved an extensive consultation process and were directed at ensuring that the Children's Commissioner was compliant with human rights standards.³⁰¹⁴

However, there are several outstanding criticisms:

Powers

- UNICEF UK states that there should be a requirement for Ministers and public authorities to respond to the child rights impact assessments produced by the Children's Commissioner within a reasonable time frame.³⁰¹⁵
- UNICEF UK suggests that the Children's Commissioner could also be given the power to provide a national sign-posting service for children where the Children's Commissioner could put children wishing to make a complaint in touch with the appropriate investigating authority.³⁰¹⁶

Appointment mechanism

- UNICEF UK criticises the fact that the Children's Commissioner is appointed by the executive branch, which is a body that the Children's Commissioner is responsible for monitoring. UNICEF UK suggests that the "better guarantee of independence" is appointment by Parliament. UNICEF further suggests that there should be formalised requirements in terms of skills and experience as well as a wide advertisement of the position in order to ensure a transparent and competitive process.³⁰¹⁷

Funding

- To remove the threat of any financial control, UNICEF UK suggests that funding should be removed from political control and be guaranteed over a given period.³⁰¹⁸

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Secretary must take reasonable steps to consider children's voices in appointing the Children's Commissioner: see part 1.8.
- The Children's Commissioner must take into account children's voices in exercising his or her statutory mandate: see part 1.2.
- The Act requires the Children's Commissioner to produce a Business Plan at the start of each financial year and an Annual Report at the end of each financial year,

C. The Children's Commissioner for England: Impacts

4 Impacts of the Children's Commissioner for England

The Children's Commissioner reported having the following impacts in the 2019/20 financial year:

- Mental health support in schools – Following the Commissioner's call for better mental health support in schools, the Government rolled out mental health support teams in schools and additional access to specialist mental health care from NHS England.³⁰¹⁹
- Childcare fund – Following the publication of the Children's Commissioner's "Children Manifesto" which called for schools to be open on evenings and weekends to provide more safe spaces for children to use at these times, the Government announced a £1 billion childcare fund to increase the use of schools on evenings and weekends.³⁰²⁰
- Inpatient mental health care – Following publication of a report on "Children Behind Closed Doors", the Commissioner was appointed to chair an Independent Oversight Board scrutinising the work of the NHS England Taskforce in relation to inpatient mental health care for children.³⁰²¹
- Social media duty of care – Following a long period of advocacy by the Children's Commissioner, the Government has agreed to introduce a statutory duty of care owed by social media companies to minors.³⁰²²
- Older children in care – Following recommendations by the Children's Commissioner, the Government is now in the process of consulting on proposals to improve standards in unregulated accommodation for those between 16 and 18 and ban the use of unregulated accommodation for under 16s.³⁰²³
- Review of children's social care – Following the publication of the Children's Commissioner's "Children Manifesto", the Government has initiated a review into the children's social care system and how the outcomes of vulnerable children can be improved.³⁰²⁴

A. The Ombudsman for Children (Norway): Summary table

Question	Summary response
Country/State/Territory	Norway
Commissioner entity name	Ombudsman for Children (' Barneombudet ')
Date established	11 September 1981. ³⁰²⁵
Compliant with the Paris Principles? (fully OR partial?) To be completed as a short overall summary statement following the completion of your analysis in B.	Partial compliance – most principles are upheld well within the Act and accompanying instructions, but there is a significant lack of transparency around the appointment and selection processes of the Ombudsman and office staff.
Structure Where does the role sit, is it: (a) a stand-alone office; or (b) part of an existing institution (specify which institution) What relationships are there between this role and other Commissioners or institutions?	The Ombudsman functions independently, governed only by the general instructions laid down by the King. ³⁰²⁶ The Ombudsman reports to the Ministry [of Children and Families]. ³⁰²⁷ The office consists of the Ombudsman, a secretariat, the staff of the secretariat, and the permanent deputy for the Ombudsman (executive officers). ³⁰²⁸
Accountability arrangements What is the reporting line for the role? Who sets the budget?	The Ombudsman must submit a public yearly report to the Ministry [of Children and Families] about their activities in the preceding calendar year. ³⁰²⁹ Budgeting rules and amounts are unclear but the budget appears to be set by the State. ³⁰³⁰
Qualification and Experience What qualifications and experiences are required for the role? Does the person need to be an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person?	Qualifications and Aboriginality: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> There are no listed requirements of qualification or experience within the legislation, nor a requirement of Aboriginality. Selection and appointment: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The 'King in Cabinet' appoints the Ombudsman for a term of 6 years.³⁰³¹ The King is a symbolic role in Norway, so appointment largely falls to the members of Cabinet.³⁰³²

B. Norwegian Ombudsman for Children: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children partially satisfies this Paris Principle requirement, noting the legislation lacks detail.

Entrenched in law³⁰⁴⁶ / Mandate and powers³⁰⁴⁷

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.³⁰⁴⁸ The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children was established by the Act No 5 of March 6 1981 Relating to the Ombudsman for Children and its accompanying instructions, subsequently laid down by Royal Decree on 11 September 1981.³⁰⁴⁹

The Ombudsman operates independently but remains bound by the financial rules applicable to the Ministry of Children and Families³⁰⁵⁰ and Chapters I-III of the Public Administration Act and the Freedom of Information Act.³⁰⁵¹ The Ombudsman must also submit yearly reports to the Ministry [of Children and Families].³⁰⁵²

Appointment mechanisms³⁰⁵³

The Ombudsman is appointed by the King for a period of six years, with no option for reappointment.³⁰⁵⁴ There are no other legislative requirements around appointment.

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)

The instructions outline the powers of the Ombudsman in processes of case referral, application, rejection, shelving, and reporting.³⁰⁵⁵ This indicates a mandate to receive, consider, and/or resolve complaints alleging violations of human rights, particularly the ‘needs, rights and interests of children’.³⁰⁵⁶ This reflects the Ombudsman’s quasi-judicial competency as an NHRI.

The Ombudsman’s office is vested with the power to receive and hear complaints against both public and private bodies in its jurisdiction.³⁰⁵⁷

These practices directly promote compliance with the Paris Principles, as outlined by the GANHRI.³⁰⁵⁸

Complaint-handling processes are clearly contained within the Ombudsman’s instructions, but they are broad and defer much of the decision-making to the Ombudsman.³⁰⁵⁹ It is unclear whether there are further procedures or resources publicly available, particularly in regard to upholding a fair and transparent complaints process.

1.2 Human rights mandate

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

‘Promotion’ of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.³⁰⁶⁰ On the other hand, ‘protection’ of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).³⁰⁶¹

The legislation clearly mandates the Ombudsman to promote and protect the interests of children, particularly in accordance with Norway’s obligations under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.³⁰⁶²

These functions are mandated in the ‘duties’ of the Ombudsman, which require the Ombudsman to actively educate ‘public and private sectors concerning children’s rights’,³⁰⁶³ monitor the implementation of children’s rights in domestic laws,³⁰⁶⁴ and make recommendations to improve current practices.³⁰⁶⁵ The mandate clearly extends to the acts and omissions of both the public and private sectors and provides the Ombudsman with authority to address recommendations to public authorities which are tasked with upholding ‘Norwegian law and administrative routines’.³⁰⁶⁶ These practices indicate compliance with the Paris Principles.³⁰⁶⁷

The legislative text broadly mandates the Ombudsman to promote and protect children’s rights. This is broadly defined as ‘persons up to the age of majority’.³⁰⁶⁸ The legislation does not refer to specific rights or standards. The broad mandate therefore allows the protection afforded to be wide, covering a wide range of international human rights standards.³⁰⁶⁹

Powers of inquiry and investigation

The Ombudsman’s office is vested with the power to:

- Receive complaints against both public and private bodies in its jurisdiction;³⁰⁷⁰
- Receive and consider complaints either of their own initiative or by other persons;³⁰⁷¹
- Investigate complaints (or determine the steps which should be taken to investigate the circumstances of a case);³⁰⁷² and
- Refer cases to relevant bodies (such as to specialised courts or tribunals).³⁰⁷³

There is limited information on how these powers have been exercised.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations. Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.

As discussed, a key function of the Norwegian Ombudsman is to monitor domestic legislation and ensure that 'Norwegian law and administrative routines'³⁰⁷⁴ are in accordance with Norway's obligations under the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.³⁰⁷⁵

The language of the legislation makes it clear that the Ombudsman's role of monitoring compliance with human rights is merely a feature of the wider role of the Ombudsman, which is to promote the values of the ratified instrument within domestic practices and laws.³⁰⁷⁶ This ensures that the Ombudsman remains autonomous and exists beyond measuring compliance with human rights instruments.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.³⁰⁷⁷ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.³⁰⁷⁸

The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children is not required by law to report to beyond the Ministry [for Children and Families]. However, the language of the legislation does not preclude other forms of interaction with the international human rights system. For example, s 5 of the Ombudsman Act states that the Ombudsman 'has the right to make statements concerning conditions included in his working sphere'.³⁰⁷⁹ This could allow the Ombudsman to make statements upholding international human rights recommendations/standards.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.³⁰⁸⁰ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.³⁰⁸¹

National human rights frameworks include government departments,³⁰⁸² which the Ombudsman for Children has a clear systematic working relationship with; the Ombudsman reports annually to the Ministry of Children and Families³⁰⁸³ and has authority to refer cases to other administrative agencies/bodies where appropriate.³⁰⁸⁴

Beyond the above, there are limited provisions within the legislation which require the Ombudsman to regularly engage with other human rights bodies.

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.³⁰⁸⁵ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.³⁰⁸⁶ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.³⁰⁸⁷

This function is clearly mandated in the Ombudsman Act, which requires the Ombudsman to propose measures to ‘strengthen children’s safety under the law’ and ‘solve or prevent conflicts between children and society’.³⁰⁸⁸ This reflects the three areas which the SCA has identified as being important areas for recommendations to relate to (the creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, and human rights in general).³⁰⁸⁹

It must be noted that neither the Act nor instructions require the Ombudsman to monitor the implementation of their recommendations or annual reports, which the GANHRI identified as an important aspect of an NHRI, particularly one with quasi-judicial competence.³⁰⁹⁰

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children partially satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.³⁰⁹¹ This enhances a NHRI’s ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI. Pluralism can be upheld pursuant to the various models of diverse composition.³⁰⁹² In particular, staff of ‘single-member NHRI’s, such as an Ombudsperson’ should be representative of the ‘diverse segments of society’.³⁰⁹³

The legislation establishing the Norwegian Ombudsman for Children mandates that ‘the Ombudsman and his Executive Officers should have varied professional backgrounds’.³⁰⁹⁴ This ensures diversity in the composition of the NHRI’s members and reflects the requirement of pluralism as set out in the Paris Principles.³⁰⁹⁵

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children does not appear to satisfy this Paris Principle requirement.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.³⁰⁹⁶

The selection and appointment of the Ombudsman is to be made by the 'King in Cabinet'.³⁰⁹⁷ The legislative provisions and instructions do not provide further information on the procedures behind the appointment, which raises concerns regarding whether the appointment process is sufficiently 'clear, transparent, and participatory'.³⁰⁹⁸

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children does not appear to satisfy this Paris Principle requirement.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.³⁰⁹⁹ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

As discussed above, there is a lack of transparency around the appointment and selection process of the Ombudsman and other staff members in the office. There is no provision to prevent the appointment of a political representative as the Ombudsman nor does it distinctly separate the operation of the Ombudsman from government agencies.

Guarantee of tenure for members of the NHRI decision-making body

The Ombudsman Act prevents the reappointment of Ombudspersons to the role after their term,³¹⁰⁰ despite the Paris Principles not requiring such a provision (in fact, the Principles allow reappointment, as long as pluralism can be ensured).³¹⁰¹ This provision effectively balances the guarantee of tenure (which is critical for stability and independence)³¹⁰² while ensuring diversity through the mandated reappointment of a new Ombudsperson every 6 years.³¹⁰³

Recruitment and retention of NHRI staff

The Paris Principles also require NHRIs to be legislatively empowered to determine its own staffing structure, in a way which allows it to best fulfil its mandate. Staff should be recruited in a transparent and fair selection manner to ensure pluralism and diverse composition. This requirement is evident in the Ombudsman instructions, which state that '[t]he Ombudsman himself appoints one of the staff as permanent deputy for the Ombudsman'.³¹⁰⁴ By allowing the NHRI to possess the legislative authority to hire their own members, the legislation establishing the Norwegian Ombudsman effectively upholds the Paris Principles of fair recruitment and hiring independence.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: It is unclear whether the Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

³¹⁰⁴ Instructions for the Ombudsman for Children (Norway) Laid down by Royal Decree of 11 September 1981, s 9.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.³¹⁰⁵

The Ombudsman instructions state that the ‘rules for the administration of the finances in the Ministries and the rules for the organisation and work procedures of the Ministries’³¹⁰⁶ apply to the Ombudsman’s office.

There is very limited information available (in English) regarding the funding structure and figures for the Norwegian Ombudsman. While it is unclear what the exact funding figures are for the Ombudsman, reports suggest that the budget steadily increased throughout the early 1990’s, following successful evaluations of its effectiveness.³¹⁰⁷

Summary: The Norwegian Ombudsman for Children satisfies this Paris Principle requirement.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to prepare, publicise, and submit an annual report on its activities and recommendations, to assess how well it has furthered its mandate that year.³¹⁰⁸ The report can include recommendations, opinions, proposals, or to address human rights concerns. Reporting is an essential aspect of ensuring the accountability of an independent agency.³¹⁰⁹

The Ombudsman instructions require the Ombudsman to submit a report to the Ministry about his activities each year, by 1 April. The report is required to be publicised.³¹¹⁰ The Paris Principles appear to be upheld sufficiently within the legislative text.

Note: There are no annual reports available on the Ombudsman website, only ‘public journals’ and some reports which are not available in English.

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

In ‘Lessons from Norway: The Children’s Ombudsman as a Voice for Children’, Gary Melton criticises the structure of an ‘Ombudsman’. He argues that the Ombudsman role is unconventional and particularly onerous on the individual because it operates without a board of constituents behind it. This is because the ombudsman model is an individualistic model which assumes a ‘great person’ theory of social change, which presupposes that the role will be filled by ‘one person sufficiently talented and motivated who can really make a difference’. The Ombudsman therefore has a significant degree of control over its jurisdiction and power: “the barneombud must define the job and then find a means of fulfilling it”.³¹¹¹ This may limit accountability and create an issue of consistency as the Ombudsman changes after each tenure, particularly if the appointment criteria is ambiguous.³¹¹²

Melton also criticises the ‘vagueness of the statutory authority’ for the Ombudsman. The discretionary powers of the Ombudsman are wide and the jurisdiction for its operation is broad.

³¹⁰⁵ GAHNRI General Observations, G.O. 1.10, Paris Principles, Composition and guarantees of independence and pluralism.

³¹¹² Gary Melton, ‘Lessons from Norway: The Children’s Ombudsman as a Voice for Children’ (1991) 23(2) Case Western Reserve Journal of International Law 198, 207.

This allows for potentially 'contrasting' approaches to the Ombudsman role. From a statutory perspective, this raises issues of consistency and accountability.³¹¹³

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Ombudsman recognises that it is a 'single-member NRHI', which makes principles of plurality difficult to uphold. This role therefore removed the ability for Ombudspersons to be reappointed after their tenure, which effectively balances the guarantee of tenure (which is critical for stability and independence)³¹¹⁴ while ensuring diversity through the mandated reappointment of a new Ombudsperson every 6 years.³¹¹⁵
- Clear mandate and upholds international human rights commitments well, whilst maintaining autonomy.
- Operates well within a network of human rights bodies, government agencies, and other administrative bodies.
- Perhaps not a 'best feature' but a unique consideration: the Ombudsman model attracts criticism for following the 'great person' theory of social change, in that the Ombudsman role is a singular, powerful role where the appointed Ombudsman holds all the power to define the parameters of the role and then fulfil it. There is limited accountability and consistency. See 'Criticisms' for more detail. This might be a good discussion point for comparison of an Ombudsman-style role to a commission with multiple directors/board members.

C. The Ombudsman for Children (Norway): Impacts

4 Assessing impacts through evaluation

There are limited English resources evidencing the impact of the Norwegian Ombudsman for children. A 1996 evaluation of the Ombudsman found that the Ombudsman was largely seen as being effective and that 'many municipalities, as well as Parliament', had quickly accepted a number of proposals from the Ombudsman.³¹¹⁶ Many survey participants also viewed the Ombudsman as an effective tool as protecting the rights of children while acting as a supportive tool for parents.³¹¹⁷

B. Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada / Office of the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada: Further analysis

1 Essential requirements of the Paris Principles

1.1 The establishment of NHRIs³¹³⁴

Summary: The Commissioner partially complies with this requirement, as the Act sets out the substantial elements of the Commissioner's role. However, as discussed below, there is limited legislative framework around certain issues, such as grounds for dismissal and the investigation of private entities.

Entrenched in law³¹³⁵

A NHRI must be established by a sufficiently detailed constitutional or legislative text which prescribes independence and a clear mandate.³¹³⁶

The Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Act (the Act) establishes an independent Office of the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada (the OCCYC) to support the Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada (the Commissioner).³¹³⁷ The Commissioner has control over the OCCYC and all matters connected with it, and the Commissioner may enter into contracts and similar arrangements to assist the Commissioner or the OCCYC.³¹³⁸

Mandate and powers³¹³⁹

The Commissioner's mandate is expressed with considerable particularity in the Act. This provides a clear legislative framework for the functions and purpose of the Commissioner, as follows:

11 (1) The mandate of the Commissioner is:

- (a) to advocate at the national level in Canada for the promotion and protection of the rights, well-being and views of children and youth, particularly those who belong to a vulnerable group;
- (b) to collaborate with First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies to include First Nations, Inuit and Métis views and values in the Commissioner's advocacy for First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth;
- (c) to foster public understanding and recognition of the Convention, the role and activities of the Commissioner and the rights and well-being of children and youth in Canada;
- (d) to monitor the development and application of legislation, statutory instruments and government policies and practices affecting children and youth;

³¹³⁴ See especially: GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 2.9 - The quasi-judicial competency of NHRIs (complaints-handling); consider also: General Observation 2.7 – Administrative regulation of NHRIs.

³¹³⁵ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

³¹³⁹ See Paris Principles, Competence and responsibilities, Principle 2; GANHRI General Observations, G.O. 1.1.

- (e) to promote, monitor and report on the effective implementation of Canada's obligations under the Convention that fall within the legislative authority of Parliament, particularly as they relate to:
- (i) non-discrimination in ensuring the rights set forth in the Convention,
 - (ii) the primacy of every child's best interests in all actions concerning them,
 - (iii) every child's right to life, survival and development, and
 - (iv) the right of every child who is capable of forming their own views to express those views freely in all matters affecting them and the right to have those views given due weight in accordance with their age and maturity;
- (f) to review proposed and enacted federal legislation and statutory instruments in order to assess their impact on the rights of children and youth, including consistency with the Convention;
- (g) to monitor and report on the implementation of the Convention by government institutions, including in respect of policies, services and programs affecting children and youth and their rights;
- (h) to consider any recommendations, suggestions and requests concerning the rights of children and youth that the Commissioner receives from any source;
- (i) to assist in the development and implementation, in cooperation with First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies, of programs adapted to the rights, well-being, traditions and needs of First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth;
- (j) to collaborate and cooperate with authorities across Canada that promote, advocate for or serve children and youth in order to foster common policies and practices and to avoid conflicts in the handling of matters in cases of shared jurisdiction;
- (k) to encourage, through the use of media, social networks and other methods, the participation of children and youth, according to their age and maturity, in all aspects of Canadian society and in the activities of the Office and Commissioner;
- (l) to consult with children and youth and representatives of children and youth groups, as well as service providers and others, in respect of issues that may have an impact on the lives of children and youth;
- (m) to promote accessible and effective complaint mechanisms for children and youth and to monitor their use;
- (n) to facilitate access to justice for children and youth and to effective remedies for breaches of their rights and to seek intervenor or amicus curiae status as the Commissioner considers appropriate;
- (o) to promote First Nations, Inuit and Métis manners of collaboration, advocacy and dispute resolution in relation to First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth, with a view to ensuring that all actions regarding their rights are considered in the context of the collective rights of First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth;
- (p) to encourage the right of First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth to maintain cultural connections, including connections with extended families, lands and waters, traditional languages, songs, stories and all forms of artistic expression as markers of their identity; and
- (q) to encourage the implementation of First Nations, Inuit and Métis law and legal processes in all matters concerning advocacy for First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth, including implementing specific First Nations, Inuit and Métis preferences for protocol, forum, spiritual practice and community involvement.

Appointment mechanisms³¹⁴⁰

The Commissioner is appointed on the recommendation of the Minister (the relevant Minister is not specified in the legislation and may be whichever Minister is appointed under the Act) by the Governor in Council.³¹⁴¹

Before appointing a Commissioner, the Governor in Council must consult with the leaders of every recognised political party in the upper and lower house, and the candidate must be approved by a resolution of the upper and lower houses.³¹⁴² Requiring a resolution of both houses may generally practically only require that the government of the day support the candidate. This may expose Commissioners to accusations of partisanship, although would likely ease the process of appointing a Commissioner (as opposed to requiring, e.g. a consensus or super majority).

Quasi-judicial competency (complaints-handling)³¹⁴³

Whilst the Commissioner's mandate includes promoting and monitoring effective complaints and dispute resolution mechanisms,³¹⁴⁴ it does not itself have a mandate or specific powers to receive and determine complaints. As its mandate does not include any quasi-judicial competency, it is not required to hold any such powers.

1.2 Human rights mandate³¹⁴⁵

Summary: The Commissioner appears broadly empowered to produce reports, engage in community outreach and movement building and provide recommendations. However, a substantial shortcoming is the limitation of inquiry powers to public entities. In this respect the Commissioner is partially compliant with the requirements.

'Promotion' of human rights is understood to include functions such as education, advocacy, and public outreach, as well as the autonomy to investigate or report on issues concerning human rights.³¹⁴⁶ On the other hand, 'protection' of human rights is understood to include functions that address and seek to prevent human rights violations (such as powers of inquiry and complaints-handling).³¹⁴⁷

Competence and responsibilities³¹⁴⁸

The Commissioner and OCCYC have a legislatively defined mandate, which includes advocacy around the promotion and protection of children's rights, public promotion of said rights, monitoring of legislation and policy, promotion and monitoring of international human rights instrument compliance, investigative powers, facilitating complaint mechanisms for children and access to justice and the promotion of First Nations people's culture and law.³¹⁴⁹ This broad mandate covers the elements set out under GO 1.2, however the powers to facilitate such a mandate appear limited to powers of inquiry and reporting, and only with respect to public entities and government departments. An inability to investigate private bodies is a substantial shortcoming of the role and is non-compliant with Articles 2 & 3 of the Paris Principles.

³¹⁴⁵ Consider also: General Observation 2.3 – Protection from criminal and civil liability for official actions and decisions undertaken in good faith; General Observation 2.6 – Limitation of power of NHRIs due to national security; General Observation 2.8 -- Assessing NHRIs as National Preventive and National Monitoring Mechanisms.

³¹⁴⁹ Commissioner for Children and Youth in Canada Bill 2020, s-210 s 11.

The Commissioner is also required to report on the outcome of any inquiry conducted,³¹⁵⁰ annually, on the government's implementation of CROC and related matters of child welfare, recommendations to improve these matters and the Office's functions and activities, and on an ad hoc basis in response to any issues of urgency or importance.³¹⁵¹

Functional immunity³¹⁵²

The Commissioner and employees of the OCCYC are protected from criminal and civil liability with respect to anything done in good faith in the course of exercising their duties and functions under the Act.³¹⁵³ Similarly, the Commissioner and employees of the OCCYC cannot be compelled as witnesses in relation to any matter that comes to their attention as a result of performing their functions under the Act.³¹⁵⁴

Powers of investigation and inquiry

The Commissioner holds the power to inquire into any matter related to the Commissioner's mandate, including both individual and systemic issues.³¹⁵⁵ Inquiries may be initiated on the Commissioner's own motion or on request from any Minister, committee member of the Canadian parliament or member of the public.³¹⁵⁶

The Commissioner is afforded substantial autonomy over whether to pursue an inquiry, and may decline a request for an inquiry, and abandon or set aside an inquiry.³¹⁵⁷

In conducting an inquiry, the Commissioner holds the powers of a commissioner appointed under Part II of the Inquiries Act. These include powers to enter premises, access documents and require individuals for examination.³¹⁵⁸

However, the Commissioner's inquiry powers appear limited to public entities and government departments.³¹⁵⁹ This prevents the Commissioner from responding to all violations of human rights. The Commissioner may access children in any place of detention or residence controlled by the government, subject to reasonable notice, personal safety and security considerations.³¹⁶⁰ The Commissioner is empowered to access reports, information and explanations from government institutions that relate to the fulfilment of the Commissioner's responsibilities.³¹⁶¹ This power is minimally fettered by requirements that access be granted at "convenient" times,³¹⁶² and the Commissioner cannot access documents held by the Queen's Privy Council for Canada.³¹⁶³

These qualifications depart from GO 1.2, as access is not unfettered. As recent Australian experiences indicate (with respect to the Don Dale Youth Detention Centre), personal safety and security considerations may be used as improper excuses to restrict access to facilities at times of heightened vulnerability for children, or as a means to limit outside observance whilst human rights abuses are ongoing.

1.3 Encouraging ratification or accession to international human rights instruments

Summary: The Commissioner partially complies with this requirement, with legislated interaction with international instruments limited to the Convention.

Compliance with this Paris Principle is generally satisfied where the NHRI reviews relevant national laws, regulations, and policies to determine their compatibility with international human rights obligations.³¹⁶⁴ Other functions may include monitoring developments in international human rights law, promoting state participation in the development of international instruments, or making domestic recommendations to promote international compliance.³¹⁶⁵

As above, the Commissioner reports on the government's adoption of, and compliance with, the Convention and provides recommendations to further adopt and improve compliance. The Commissioner complies in this respect with Article 3 of the Paris Principles, and the mandate is specifically included in the enacting legislation.³¹⁶⁶ However, the Commissioner does not have a specific obligation to promote broader compliance with other international human rights instruments.

The primary method for reviewing and furthering compliance is the Commissioner's reporting function.³¹⁶⁷ The Commissioner is required to provide an annual report that specifically considers the government's implementation of the Convention.³¹⁶⁸ Importantly, the government is required to respond to this report within 90 days, providing an accountability mechanism that requires engagement with the Convention.³¹⁶⁹

The Commissioner does hold a specific mandate to review proposed and enacted federal legislation and statutory instruments in order to assess their impact upon children, and their compliance with the Convention.³¹⁷⁰ Whilst observance of the Convention is well integrated into the role, there does not appear to be any obligation to observe or implement human rights instruments more broadly. This derogates to some extent from Article 3 of the Paris Principles, and demonstrate a narrower approach to the implementation of international human rights instruments than other comparable Australian and international entities.

1.4 Interaction with the international human rights system

Summary: The Commissioner is not compliant with this requirement, in that there are no clear legislative requirements on the Commissioner to interact with the international human rights system.

Interaction with the international human rights system is an effective way for NHRIs to promote and protect human rights domestically.³¹⁷¹ It can include requirements for the NHRI to submit parallel/shadow reports to international human rights bodies, make statements during debates before review bodies, or promote particular recommendations made by international human rights bodies.³¹⁷²

Absent the requirements to promote and observe the Convention, discussed above, there are no specifically legislated requirements that the Commissioner engage with the broader international human rights system.³¹⁷³

³¹⁷³ The General Observations notes that this interaction may be by way of reporting to the Universal Periodic Review, Special Procedure mechanisms, Treaty Bodies Committees; Human Rights Council and Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

However, the Commissioner's mandate is broadly drafted so as to allow engagement with the broader human rights system and constituent entities.³¹⁷⁴ Therefore, whilst engagement with the international human rights system is not specifically legislated, it appears possible under the current mandate. This does not, however, comply with Article 3 of the Paris Principles which requires that engagement be specifically articulated and legislated.

1.5 Cooperation with other human rights bodies

Summary: The Commissioner substantially complies with this requirement, as engagement with national and sub-national human rights bodies is legislated as part of the role.

The Paris Principles require NHRIs to regularly and constructively engage with all relevant stakeholders to effectively fulfil their mandates.³¹⁷⁵ This can involve engagement within a national human rights framework or other domestic institutions and actors mandated to promote human rights.³¹⁷⁶

The Commissioner's mandate includes collaboration with national and sub-national human rights bodies. This includes First Nations, Inuit and Métis governing bodies,³¹⁷⁷ and any authorities across Canada that promote, advocate for or serve children and youth.³¹⁷⁸ The Commissioner appears effectively compliant with Articles 3(f), (g) of the Paris Principles with respect to these groups.

Although not a formal human rights body, the Commissioner is required to consult with children and youth and representatives of children and youth groups, as well as service providers.³¹⁷⁹

These requirements are expressed as part of the Commissioner's mandate and the draft legislation does not prescribe any particular method for engagement or cooperation.

1.6 Recommendations by NHRIs

Summary: The Commissioner substantially complies with this requirement, in holding a broad recommendation power. Additional powers to require compliance or at least consideration of recommendations would strengthen this aspect of the Commissioner role.

The Paris Principles explicitly state that NHRIs should be mandated to make recommendations to public authorities on how they can better uphold or promote human rights.³¹⁸⁰ Recommendations can relate to the amendment/creation of legislative or administrative provisions, any situation of human rights violations, or human rights matters in general.³¹⁸¹ NHRIs should also follow up, monitor, and report on how well any recommendations have been implemented.³¹⁸²

The Commissioner is required to annually consider and report on proposed legislation, compliance with the Convention and any other matters affecting the rights and well-being of children and youth.³¹⁸³ The Commissioner may also report on, and provide recommendations in relation to, any matter of sufficient urgency or importance.³¹⁸⁴ However, there is no specific requirement for the Commissioner to follow up on the actions recommended in these reports, which is inconsistent with best practice in not only monitoring, investigating and reporting on relevant matters, but also undertaking rigorous and systematic follow up. Notably the government is required to respond to any report, including recommendations therein, within 90 days and specifically address any alleged violations of children's rights or impact assessments therein, legislating some degree of follow up from government.³¹⁸⁵

In conducting these inquiries, the Commissioner does not hold any power to hear or resolve individual complaints. Members of the public may request that the Commissioner inquire into certain matters within the Commissioner's mandate,³¹⁸⁶ which could presumably include individual cases and complaints, however the Commissioner does not hold any power to determine or resolve these complaints.

1.7 Ensuring pluralism of the NHRI³¹⁸⁷

Summary: The Commissioner and OCCYC are partially compliant with this requirement. The relevant Minister must conduct broad based consultation in appointing the Commissioner, with legislated input from First Nations groups. There is no clear requirement for pluralism amongst staff.

A key aspect of the Paris Principles requires a NHRI to be a diverse decision-making body, composed of a broad representation of national society.³¹⁸⁸ This enhances a NHRI's ability to promote accessibility and equality and promotes the institutional independence of the NHRI.

Pluralism³¹⁸⁹

The Commissioner must be of good character, with proven experience with, and commitment to, promoting the rights of children and youths.³¹⁹⁰ There are no requirement that the Commissioner be from any particular background, noting, however, that the relevant Minister may establish their own hiring criteria which could include pluralism requirements.³¹⁹¹ In recommending a Commissioner, the relevant Minister must:³¹⁹²

- (a) advertise the vacancy or prospective vacancy across Canada in a manner sufficient to enable qualified individuals to apply for appointment;
- (b) consult with organizations or persons that, in the opinion of the Minister, have a particular interest in the work of the Commissioner, including representatives from First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies and organizations representing First Nations, Inuit and Métis children and youth.

This substantially complies with the Paris Principle requirements, by ensuring that a broad range of voices from the Canadian society are heard during the recruitment process. The G.O. note that pluralism may be hard to effect in the context of single role, and that ensuring pluralism amongst staff more broadly may go some way to ensuring representation in the context of gender, ethnicity or minority status.

However, there are no mandated hiring practices in the OCCYC's enacting legislation, but for the requirement that employees of the Office be appointed in accordance with the Public Service Employment Act 2003.³¹⁹³ This legislation is aimed at ensuring that hiring and promotion are based on merit and free from any partisanship. The Public Service Employment Act does not appear to impose any specific pluralism requirements. The OCCYC therefore does not comply with the relevant Paris Principle obligations.

1.8 Selection and appointment of the decision-making body of NHRIs

Summary: There is no requirement to appoint a decision-making body as part of the OCCYC. This does not comply with the relevant requirement.

The GANHRI paper emphasises the importance of ensuring a formal, transparent, and participatory selection and appointment process of the NHRIs decision-making body. Such processes should ensure that the position is filled by an applicant who has undergone a fair and merit-based selection process.³¹⁹⁴

The draft legislation does not specifically identify any relevant decision-making body. The OCCYC is comprised of the Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner, staffed by public service employees. In hiring the Commissioner, the Governor in Council is required to advertise the appointment in a manner suitable to enable qualified individuals to apply.³¹⁹⁵ The hiring process and requisite qualifications and experience for the Commissioner are set out at 1.1 and 1.7 above.

The Assistant Commissioner is appointed on the recommendation of the Commissioner,³¹⁹⁶ and there are no criteria for this appointment.

There is no legislated requirement for a decision-making body comprised of experts, social and political representatives or interest groups. In this respect, the Commissioner and OCCYC do not comply with Articles B1 – B3 of the Paris Principles.

1.9 Political representatives on NHRIs

Summary: The strong legislative basis for the Commissioner, and the Commissioner's autonomy over staffing and operation of the OCCYC, suggest a significant degree of political independence. There is a lack of clarity around the grounds upon which the Commissioner may be dismissed and no available information regarding funding sources, rendering the Commissioner role partially compliant.

In order to maintain a NHRI's structural, operational, and compositional independence from government agencies, the Paris Principles require that any political representatives must only be involved in an advisory capacity.³¹⁹⁷ An NHRI should also be independent from government.

The first and second reading material, and preamble to the legislation, emphasise that the Commissioner and OCCYC are intended to be roles independent of government.³¹⁹⁸ However, there is no general prohibition against government representatives and members of parliament serving as the Commissioner or forming part of the OCCYC. The significant degree to which the Commissioner's powers, functions and structure are legislated provide a degree of stability, limiting arbitrary interference by government. However, the lack of any information regarding the budget of the OCCYC is a major inhibiting factor in assessing the overall degree of political independence.

Tenure³¹⁹⁹

The Commissioner holds office for a non-renewable period of seven years.³²⁰⁰ However, the Commissioner may be removed at any time for cause by the Governor in Council.³²⁰¹ "Cause" is not defined in the Act; neither does the relevant explanatory material indicate what matters could constitute cause.

Removal for cause may be understood as carrying a particular meaning in Canadian public law and we have not conducted further inquiry into this question. Whilst removal for cause suggests on common usage a requisite degree of wrongdoing, the absence of any clearly defined terms upon which the Commissioner may be removed fails to satisfy the Paris Principles.

Recruitment³²⁰²

Employees of the OCCYC are appointed in accordance with the Public Employment Act 2003 (Employment Act).³²⁰³ A brief review of the Employment Act suggests it emphasizes the values of merit, non-partisanship, fairness, access, transparency and representativeness, and would not appear to unduly fetter the OCCYC. The Commissioner is appointed as chief executive officer of the OCCYC, with the power to engage staff to advise and assist the OCCYC.³²⁰⁴ This would appear to offer the Commissioner a substantial degree of control over the staffing of the OCCYC, with consequent ability to maximise independence.

1.10 Adequate funding of NHRIs

Summary: Absent any indication of the total budget for the Commissioner and OCCYC, it is difficult to determine whether funding is adequate. In this respect, the Commissioner role is not compliant.

NHRIs must be provided with adequate funding in order to function effectively and independently.³²⁰⁵

The salary and expenses of both the Commissioner and Assistance Commissioner are set by the Governor in Council.³²⁰⁶ The draft legislation does not otherwise address the budgeting for the Commissioner or the OCCYC. As the enacting legislation creates the OCCYC as a separate office to support the Commissioner, it appears likely that the OCCYC would receive separate funding. The extent and source of this funding is, however, unclear and does not therefore satisfy s B.2 of the Paris Principles.

1.11 Annual reports of NHRIs

Summary: The Commissioner substantially complies with this requirement, holding an obligation to provide annual reports which must be tabled with, and considered by, the Canadian parliament.

As above, the Commissioner holds the power to inquire into any matter related to the Commissioner's mandate, including both individual and systemic issues.³²⁰⁷ At the finalisation of any inquiry, the Commissioner must produce a report summarising the inquiry and outlining any relevant recommendations and findings.³²⁰⁸ The report must be published on the Office's website, however the government is not required to respond to the report in the same way that it is required to respond to annual or special reports.³²⁰⁹

2 Any criticisms made publicly about this role?

There do not appear to be any substantial criticisms of the draft legislation.

3 What are the best features of this role?

- The Commissioner has a broad mandate. The legislative mandate covers the elements expressed at GO 1.2 and could provide an effective basis for model legislation;
- Although not unique to the jurisdiction, the reporting powers of the Commissioner appear consistent with best practice. That is, a requirement for annual reporting on the Commissioner's mandate, along with a power to initiate special reports on matters of urgency or import. The requirement that government respond to these reports within a specific period is an effective accountability mechanism;
- The hiring and recommendation process for the Commissioner substantially complies with the Paris Principles, in requiring broad consultation not only with the parliament and political parties but with relevant sector interest groups and representative of First Nations, Inuit or Métis governing bodies and organizations.
